Polar Authority Pieces Together From Diary the Tragedy That Overtook Andree 33 Years Ago

Odd Arnesen Thinks Andree Outlived Companions—Suggests Possibility That Party Got Ptomaine Poisoning from Canned Food

By ODD ARNESEN,
Norwegian Authority on Arctic Exploration and Arctic Life.

Written especially for the Associated Press. Copyright, 1930, and all rights reserved by the Associated Press.

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 20.—Salomon August Andree's diary stops on Oct. 2, when the ice broke under his floating camp and the little party of explorers had to get ashore on White Island.

From now on it must be mostly guess work to reconstruct the story of how the expedition's members met their fate.

After Oct. 17, Nils Strindberg was unable to write down anything more, and the question arises of what caused their deaths. It seems to be certain that Strindberg died first and was buried by Andree, possibly by Knut Frankel also.

Andree Lived the Longer.

Of these two, Andree seems to have lived the longer. But what happened after the seventeenth? We do not yet know, and we can only conjecture whether they could have been alive long after that date.

When the explorers dragged themselves ashore on White Island from the icy seas, they were already worn out and sick. The diary mentions sore feet and frequent attacks of diarrhea.

They tried to build a shelter from driftwood and to cover it by fabric taken from their balloon and carried with them on their march.

When their camp was found this summer by Dr. Gunnar Horn's expedition, it was clearly seen that the explorers had been too exhausted to get the hut and the camp in order.

Had they still had any strength left, they surely would have brought their instruments, diaries and log book under cover, and would have assembled around them all their equipment as they prepared to spend the winter.

Instead, everything was scattered about as in a camp at the moment of breakup.

Thinks Storm May Have Occurred.

A sudden catastrophe must have caught them—possibly a severe snowstorm. Cold weather had set in, and despair must have seized them.

The suggestion that the party was poisoned by carbon monoxide gas from their stove while in the hut does not seem acceptable. The disorderly condition of the camp indicated they never even lived in the hut.

It is more probable that the party got ptomaine poisoning from canned food, for at that time canned food for such expeditions was not of such high quality as it is nowadays.

If the notes written down by any one of the party are not found to state definitely what circumstances existed as they neared the end, it must be admitted that the Andree mystery is not solved in full.

It remains to be determined under exactly what conditions they died and how long they had lived on White Island.

Further Statement on Andree Awaits Examination of Relics.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 20. —Prof. Gunnar Anderson, one of the compilers of the Andree diary, a resume of which has been made public, stated today that the problem of why the Andree balloon came down 33 years ago and that of how the three explorers finally died were not touched upon in the resume because the compilers desired to obtain all the evidence available to clear the mystery.

A further communique is expected after the return of Prof. Lithberg, one of the Swedish experts who went to Tromsoe to examine the Andree relics when they were returned from White Island.

26,045 CITY VOTERS ADDED, FIVE PRECINCTS UNREPORTED

Registration for November Election Expected to Reach 315,000 After Revisions.

In the supplementary registration of voters last Thursday there were 26,045 enrolled, with five of the 670 precincts unreported. These five will add about 200 names. Previously, the registration had been 299,344. The addition, less names stricken off in the coming revision, will make the total number of voters in the November general election about 315,000.

In the supplementary registration in 1926 there were 35,796 names added. This time the wards with the largest registration were: Sixth, 1864; Seventh, 1759; Thirteenth, 1603, and Twenty-fourth, 1520, all being Republican strongholds except for parts of the Sixth and Seventh, while the smallest were: Third, 544, and Eighteenth, 687, these being Democratic ballwicks.

CANADA NATION OF DRINKERS, CLARENCE TRUE WILSON FINDS

After Tour With Clarence Darrow He Says Liquor Consumption Is Next to France.

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 20.—Dr. Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the Board of Public Morals and Prohibition of the Methodist Church, told the Nebraska Conference here last night that Canada "is becoming one of the greatest drinking nations in the world" and that the party in power there is controlled by liquor interests.

Dr. Wilson explained that he had just returned with Clarence Darrow of Chicago from a tour of the various provinces of the dominion as eye-witnesses to the operations of the Government liquor control system. With the exception of France, he declared, the Canadians consume more liquor than any other country in the world.

"This may be in some part due to the influx of thirsty American tourists, but the roads leading into Canada are not lined with Americans waiting an opportunity to buy liquor, as many of the enemies of prohibition are pleased to point out," Dr. Wilson added.

AMERICAN ORCHESTRA BARRED

Musicians in Paris Take Action Because of Unemployment.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Hal Kemp's American orchestra, which has been billed to appear at the fashionable Ambassadeurs restaurant, has been stopped by the police from playing. The intervention of the authorities was secured by a syndicate of French musicians on the ground of widespread unemployment by French musicians.

All foreigners intending to work in France are obliged to apply for a special permit. Kemp's men, who came from Belgium, where they had an engagement, applied for this permit when they found that they could not play here without it, but it was refused. The French syndicate keeps a close watch for foreign musicians, especially Americans, playing in Paris and denounces them.

Reward for Students' Bootleggers.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 20.—A reward of $100 for evidence leading to the conviction of any bootlegger selling liquor to high school or college students in Texas will be offered by Gov. Dan Moody, he announced today. The Governor also said he would give $50 to State prosecuting officers obtaining convictions an evidence presented them of student liquor traffic.

NEW COMPLAINT IS FILED AGAINST BISHOP CANNON

Four Elders of M. E. Church, South, Present Charges to Prelate—Committee to Make Inquiry.

ALLEGATIONS ON PERSONAL CONDUCT

Also Based on Stock Speculation and Handling of Money for Political Campaign Purposes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 20.—Bishop James Cannon Jr., who in the last four months successfully withstood two formal investigations of his activities, must now defend himself for a third time, not only against the old charges but also against others never before raised against him.

This became certain when it was disclosed today that four traveling Elders of the Southern Methodist Church had presented a voluminous indictment against Bishop Cannon to Bishop William N. Ainsworth of Birmingham, Ala., chairman of the College of Methodist Bishops.

On receipt of the charges, which were mailed late yesterday from Washington, it becomes the duty of Bishop Ainsworth to assemble a committee of not less than 12 traveling elders to investigate the personal and political conduct of Bishop Cannon.

Faces Suspension Pending Trial.

If, in the opinion of the two-thirds of this committee, the charges have sufficient basis as to require explanation, they will refer the matter to the next general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South and will immediately suspend the churchman pending his trial by the conference which meets in 1934.

The filing of formal charges against Bishop Cannon marks the first time in the history of the Methodist Church, South, that such a proceeding has been lodged against a Bishop of the church. This denomination has been in existence as a body separate from other Methodist denominations since 1848.

Changes in Three Classes.

Although the text of the charges was not made public, it is known that they represent a number of specific points and that they divide themselves into three classes, as follows:

Charges based on personal conduct.

Charges based on Bishop Cannon's participation in the buying and selling of stocks for speculative purposes through a brokerage house in New York, later held to have been a bucket shop.

Charges based on Bishop Cannon's political activities and his participation in the handling of money for political campaign purposes.

In the complaint filed with Bishop Ainsworth, several counts involving personal conduct were set forth based on allegations published in July in newspapers in New York, Philadelphia and Washington. The complaint filed against the Bishop is made up of all charges reflecting on his worthiness published or broadcast about in the last two years. It is known that the four Elders who signed their names to this document personally inquired into a number of these charges or accusations and set forth in the complaint what evidence they found to support them.

Dr. Prettyman tonight said it had been agreed to let Dr. Harrell make the announcement for the group. He pointed out that it would be "unfair both to the church and to Bishop Cannon" to make public the text of the charges.

For Best Good of Church.

"I would like to say," continued Dr. Prettyman, "that my part in bringing these charges formally to the attention of the church is not based on any personal feelings I hold toward Bishop Cannon nor for any reason other than what I believe to be for the best good of the Methdoist Church, South.

"I would like to say that I am a prohibitionist and believe heartily in the cause and I am also a Methodist of the fundamentalist type. It was because that I be-

LATEST LONDON INTELLIGENCE ON NEW YORK GANGS

Reveals Rudy Vallee Was Kidnaped and Lots of Things Americans Never Heard Of.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Wild and woolly doings in New York in which that city is depicted as going Chicago several better, are described by Hannen Swaffer in a signed article in tomorrow's Sunday Express. He says:

"New York's gunmen have now become so bold that they are kidnaping prominent actors and actresses and holding them for ransom. American artists now acting in London received the news here yesterday by private letter. These things cannot be read in the New York newspapers because if they were printed they would immediately be denied by the artists concerned because of their fear of the gangsters.

"A few nights ago Rudy Vallee was taken for a ride and told that he would not be allowed to return to his show until he had paid $2000. He paid it. Lou Holtz, a young comedian who has been starring with Ed Wynn in 'Manhattan Mary' was also kidnaped and paid $1000 for his freedom."

RUSSIAN MUSEUM REPORTED BEING SOLD PIECEMEAL

Anti-Soviet Newspaper in Paris Says Sales Are Due to Effort to Obtain Gold Credits.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—The Hermitage Museum of Leningrad is being sold piecemeal and secretly by the Soviet Government, according to reports here.

Four famous old masters have already been sent abroad, and others are available to foreign buyers who know the ropes, according to the Russian Anti-Soviet newspaper, "Renaissance," published here.

The four old masters sold are said to include Van Dyck's portrait of Philip, Lord Wharton, Jean Van Eyck's "Annunciation," Ruben's portrait of Helen Fourment and the title of Rembrandt's Son Titus by his father

The secret sales, if authentic, are believed to be due to the eagerness of the Soviet to obtain gold credits abroad.

BRITTEN FINDS MORE DISTRUST IN EUROPE THAN IN 1912

Armaments and Other War Preparations on Increase, Congressman Says.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Representative Fred A. Britten, chairman of the House Committee on Naval Affairs, returned today on the Leviation from a two-month tour of Central Europe with the statement that "Europe is more precariously poised today than it was in 1912, two years before the World War."

"It would be an exaggeration to say that war clouds are hanging over Europe," Britten said, "but to predict that armaments and war preparations will be increased rather than diminished in the near future is but a logical conclusion when one understands the distrust the various nations over there have for each other."

He said the French army maneuvers on the Italian border and the fleet demonstration at Toulon, directly overlooking Italy, "were nothing more or less than deliberate answers to the constant rattling of Mussolini's sword."

"When the big explosion comes," Britten said, "and it is but a matter of time, there will be an immediate realignment which will again involve most of Europe. * * * The United States will never again actively participate in a European war, except in defense of its own honor."

Assistant Cashier of Virginia Depository Took Money for 10 Years, She Says.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISONBURG, Va., Sept. 20. —The Bank of Dayton, Rockingham County town, four miles south of here, was closed today by the State Department of Insurance and Banking, when examiners reported a discrepancy of $36,900 in the bank's accounts.

Miss Elizabeth Coffman, 45 years old, assistant cashier and bookkeeper, admitted the defalcation to Commonwealth's Attorney D. Wampler Earman, he said. He quoted her as saying she had been taking money over a period of 10 years to meet her personal needs. She was arrested tonight and was released in $15,000 bond.

The closing of the bank at this time is expected to work a particular hardship on farmers depositors who were planning to purchase their winter supplies of feed. This section has been hard hit by the drouth. Deposits in the bank totaled $150,000.

CHARGES UNION AGENT EXTORTED $2618 IN MONTH

Chicago State's Attorney Opens Safe of George (Red) Barker to Find Canceled Checks.

SAYS LEADER MADE $25,000 A YEAR

Tribute Said to Have Been Levied on Yardmen, Coal Hikers and Teamsters by Ex-Convict.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—George (Red, Barker, ex-convict and labor union agent, extracted money at the rate of several thousand dollars each month from the Yardmen and Coal Hikers' Union, a subsidiary of the Coal Teamsters' Union, according to canceled checks found today by State's Attorney Swanson. The prosecutor made his discovery when he ordered the safe of this union broken open after he had negotiated in vain with its officers to open it.

Assistant State's Attorneys Charles J. Mueller and Charles Lounsbery, who have been in direct charge of the extortion investigation ordered by Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal Court, said that if the financial revelations as made in the last two days continue they expect to be able to be ready for grand jury action against the labor racketeers within a week.

Barker, who, with William J. (Three-Fingered Jack), White, another ex-convict, bosses the coal Hikers' Union, apparently accounts for his expenditures under the designation "expenses." The first batch of checks taken from the Coal Hikers' Union safe show that Barker acts as president of the union and signs the checks.

Made Out to Cash.

Those found made out to cash and signed by Barker for August follow: Aug. 2, $541; Aug. 9, $286; Aug. 16, $644; Aug. 19, $100; Aug. 22, $385; Aug. 28, $300 and Aug. 29, $362. The total of $2618 is unaccounted for through these checks, except that some of them show an indorsement by "D. F. Cain." The balance sheet shows the union had $1311.25 in the treasury Aug. 30.

The ledger books fails to show at first glance where Barker spent the money he took out of the treasury of the union composed of the men, who earn approximately $5.50 a day by hauling coal from the street, where it is dumped by the trucks into the basement coal bins.

Prosecutor's Statement.

"We certainly are curious to know what the designation 'expenses' includes," said Mueller. "Barker certainly had a lucrative racket when you figure that he was at least connected with three separate unions having to do with the delivery of coal.

"It was discovered Friday that he took about $600 a month out of the regular Teamsters' Union treasury for salary and another $200 a month for maintenance of his $5000 automobile, which the teamsters paid for. In addition to that we find him as one of the leading officials of the Coal Peddlers' Union.

"We have not as yet been able to figure out the books of the Peddlers' Union. It seem a certainty, however, as far as we have gone, that Barker out of the three unions makes more than $25,000 a year, besides having an expensive automobile and all his attorney fees paid for him."

Drouth Hurt Babies' Health.

HUTCHINSON Kan., Sept. 20.—Physicians judging the better babies contest of the Kansas State Fair said the summer drouth left its mark on babies to a greater extent than it did on the crops. Undernourishment was found more common than usual, which the physicians attributed to the prolonged dry weather and the heat.

WOMEN EMPLOYES HELD UP, $381 TAKEN

Industrial Loan Co. Branch, 4144 West Florissant Avenue, Robbed.

The Industrial Loan Co. branch at 4144 West Florissant avenue, was robbed of $381 last night by an armed man who held up two women employes.

Miss Norma Ruedy, manager of the branch, and Miss Jeanette Vicks were alone in the office when the robber entered. He ordered Miss Ruedy, who was in the cashier's cage, to give him the money and she handed him the contents of the cash drawer.

Pocketing it, he ran from the office.

BOY, 14, GETS LIFE TERM FOR STABBING MAID TO DEATH

Killed "To See What It Felt Like;" To Be Sent to New Jersey Asylum.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Harry Woolsey Jr., 14-year-old Morristown, N. J., boy who killed Anna Miller, a maid employed in the home of his family because he "wanted to see what it felt like," was sentenced today to life imprisonment. Since alienists agreed that he could not tell right from wrong, this means he will be sent to the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane.

Sentence was pronounced in Supreme Court, Morristown, by Justice Parker after counsel for Woolsey had entered a plea of non vult, meaning that Woolsey did not wish to plead.

Mr. and Mrs. Woolsey had placed the maid in charge of the boy. The afternoon of July 13 they were wandering on top of Green Pond Mountain when suddenly the boy stabbed the maid seven times. He hid the body beneath stones.

MANCHURIAN TROOPS OCCUPY RAILWAY STATION AT TIENTSIN

TIENTSIN, China, Sept. 21 (Sunday)—Two Fengtien (Manchurian) armored trains occupied the city station this morning, followed shortly by two troop trains. Quiet prevailed throughout the city.

BELLEAU WOOD BODIES FOUND

Rosary Clasped in Fingers of French Soldier.

By the Associated Press.

BELLEAU, France, Sept. 20.—A rosary still clasped in its fingers, the body of a young French soldier was found in the depths of the famous Belleau Wood, by W. B. Fitts, in charge of Memorial Park.

Beside it was a tattered missal, the yellowed pages open at the prayers for the dying. Two paces away were the bodies of two comrades. Identity disks showed that the three fell in the first week of July, 1918. On the same day, Fitts found the bodies of seven German soldiers in another part of the wood.

THREE CIVILIANS ALSO NAMED IN U. S. TRUE BILL

ACCUSED OF TAKING PROTECTION MONEY

Six Others Said to Be Included in Grand Jury Charges—Liquor Dealer and Three Poolroom Men Held.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 20. —Twelve policemen and three civilians, who are alleged to have conspired with them to violate the prohibition laws, were arrested by United States Marshals here late today. They were indicted by the Federal grand jury. Two of the policemen were sergeants and the others were patrolmen.

Additional arrests of policemen will be made within the next few days, Federal agents said. All of the officers arrested were suspended immediately and released under $2500 bond.

Charged With Accepting Bribes.

Those arrested included Noel Stark, brother of Judson L. Stark, Marion County Prosecutor; Sergt. James O'Brien and Sergt. Joseph Everson. Federal officers said five policemen were indicted jointly with Cecil McDaniels, alleged large-scale bootleg operator, who is charged with having bribed them to provide him and his establishment with police protection.

All of the others were indicted jointly with Chris Schishcoff and Chris Volaschoff, poolroom operators. The officers are alleged to have accepted bribes and liquor from operators of the establishments for protection.

Other officers who, Federal agents say, were indicted, are Lieut. Marion Vansickle, Sergt. John Volderbauer and Patrolman Martin O'Brien.

Says Payments Were Witnessed.

George R. Jeffrey, United States District Attorney, said Federal agents had gathered evidence that the policemen had been accepting bribes from liquor runners and that in some cases actual transfer of money had been witnessed.

In addition to the 13 arrested today, six others are said to have been indicted. The arrests followed an investigation by Federal officers.

City officials within the last few days had been informed by the Indiana Anti-Saloon League that an inquiry into the activities of certain police officers might disclose evedinces of protection to the liquor trade.

Mayor Reginald H. Sullivan and Chief of Police Jerry Kinney have held conferences recently regarding the situation.

CROWD IN SUBWAY STATION SEES MAN SHOT TO DEATH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Hundreds of passengers waiting on the mezzanine level of the Fourteenth street B-M-T subway station tonight saw a young Brooklyn Italian shot to death by an unidentified assailant.

The man slain was Patrick Saragino, 21 years old, a former helper on a newspaper truck, but for the last year without regular employment. Saragino and two other men, one his brother-in-law, Rocco Cappelliera, the other Ralph Diobati, got on the subway in the Greenpoint district.

At Fourteenth street as they reached the upper level the assailant brusquely pushed Cappelliera and Diobati to one side and fired two shots into Saragino's back. The fugitive ran out at the exit at Fifteenth street and Fourth avenue. There the pursuers lost sight of him.

HYDE LAYS BLAME IN RUSSIAN SHORT SELLING ON BOARD

FORMAL INQUIRY SEPT. 27 AND 29

First Hearing Will Be Held in New York, Where Ex-President of Amtorg Is Expected to Testify.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Secretary of Agriculture Hyde declared today the Chicago Board of Trade was directly responsible, in the short selling of wheat in the Chicago pit by the Russian Government.

At the same time, officials of the All-Russian Textile Syndicate in New York said it had sold wheat short on orders from Russia as a usual hedging operation.

It was evident, said E. Y. Belitzky, vice president and treasurer of the syndicate, that the amounts sold were relatively so small that "they could not appreciably affect the standard prices in view of the fact that the turnover of the Chicago Board of Trade is from 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 bushels a day." He said Hyde's estimate that his syndicate had sold 5,000,000 bushels was "a little exaggerated."

The syndicate was identified by Secretary Hyde as an offshoot of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, the Russian commercial organization in this country.

In reply to a telegram from John A. Bunnell, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, requesting that its Business Conduct Committee be supplied with the facts upon which the charges were based, Secretary Hyde telegraphed:

Hyde's Telegram.

"I am glad to afford your Business Conduct Committee full facts. However, every bushel of short sales by the Soviet Government was sold by your members from whom, no doubt, you can get information.

"These transactions by the Russian Government are not based upon even a remote possibility of delivery upon your market or in the United States, and have the effect of manipulating the price downward against every farmer who has sold his wheat since the short sales were executed. A new question of broad public policy lies before your board to consider, and it is thus primarily a question for the Chicago Board of Trade to consider its position as providing a free market for the American farmer and the consumers of the world.

"The law provides the Board of Trade shall make such regulations as 'provide for the prevention of manipulation of prices'. I shou[ld] be glad to hear your action in respect to these transactions."

Government Involved.

Asked if the short selling could be a legitimate business transaction, Hyde said, "Of course the Russians alleged that that was the case; that they had a large supply and proposed to guarantee its sale at the present price."

If that were the real reason, he added, it might be construed to have been a legitimate business transaction for a private operator.

"It is not a private operator however," he continued, "but a government. It is a government much more possessed of bread lines than surplus supplies of wheat. Bear in mind that a week ago six men were put to death for forging government bread cards."

Describing conditions in Russia from a Department of Commerce report, Secretary Hyde said white bread was given only to children under 10 years of age.

"It is inconceivable," he said, "that any Government that has to ration its people that closely has a surplus of wheat to sell; furthermore, the prices on which they made their sales are at the low point of the year."

Regarding Bunnell's suggestion that he confer with Secretary of State Stimson on the rights of Soviet Russia to transact business in the United States, Secretary Hyde said: "The Secretary of State has no power whatever to regulate that. That is up to the conscience of the trader and the rules of the market."

Bunnell had wired that "It should be remembered that the Chicago Board of Trade is a recognized world market and hedges protecting grain in all positions all over the world are customarily placed here."

Relative to any punitive action that might be taken against the board of trade, the secretary said "we are affording the Chicago Board of Trade, an opportunity to clear the deck by its own voluntary action."

"And if it does not?" He was asked.

"That's the next chapter," he replied.

Samuel R. McKelvie, grain member of the Federal Farm Board, was confident the Chicago Board of Trade could formulate rules to prevent a continuation of the short selling by the Russian Government. At the same time, he doubted that the Farm Board had any legal authority in the matter. He said Russia in selling short might have desired to further unrest and discontent among American farmers. Through collectivist farms, by using modern machinery and cheap labor on large scale operations, Russia could grow wheat for 30 cents a bushel, he declared. This, however, he said was only a small part of Russian production.

Senatorial Opinion.

Comment on Capitol Hill was varied, with no administration Republican joining in. Among the independent Republicans and Democrats who discussed the matter, Senator Brookhart, (Rep.), Iowa, agreed with Hyde to the extent that "even more blame attaches to the Board of Trade than to the Russians, since the former should have taken steps to prevent such a situation as has been reported."

Senator Frazier (Rep.), North Dakota, said the Soviet agency, if the report were true, was not the only one that had used the exchanges to injure the farmer and characterized the "gamblers who used the grain and cotton exchanges for years to manipulate prices for their own benefit" as the "biggest Bolshevists."

Senator Dill (Dem.), Washington, said the charges seemed to him an effort by the administration to deflect the blame for the low price of wheat.

Inquiry to Begin This Week.

Following a conference with Secretary Hyde, Chairman Fish of the House Communist Investigating Committee announced his committee would investigate the charges in New York Sept. 27, and in Chicago on Sept. 29.

The New York Congressman said a former vice president of the Amtorg would testify at the New York hearing. He declined to disclose the name of the witness, saying that "it might endanger his life."

Exports of Russian wheat to Europe during July, according to figures supplied by the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, totaled 1,905,286 bushels. The total of all grain exports was 5,404,172 bushels.

Great Britain and Germany are the greatest buyers of Russian grain.

No Russian grain is exported to the United States because of the high tariff, which is 42 per cent on wheat. It was one of the points of Secretary Hyde's protest to the Chicago Board of Trade that the all-Russian Textile Syndicate could not hope to cover its sales by delivering Russian wheat because of this tariff barrier.

Chicago Board Asks for More Evidence of Russian Selling.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Governors of the Chicago Board of Trade tonight awaited an amplification of the Government's evidence before entering upon an investigation of the alleged use of Board of Trade market facilities for speculation in grain by the Russian Soviet government.

John A. Bunnell, president of the Board, telegraphed Secretary of Agriculture Hyde today that he would be glad to submit to the Business Conduct Committee whatever evidence the Government might forward. But, he added, hedging operations by Foreign grain traders were customary in the Chicago grain pits, and he had no further comment late in the day when informed of a second message from the Agricultural Secretary challenging the Board to consider its position as an open market in view of the "manipulations" by the Russian government.

"It is up to the Department of Agriculture of present its evidence," Bunnell said. "I expect to hear from Hyde Monday. The Board will be glad to co-operate with the Department, but we must await a message from Washington before we proceed."

James E. Bennett, head of the grain firm that bears his name. He called Chicago "the greatest hedging market in the world" and said "we gladly receive orders from Canada, Russia or any other country."

"So-called farm relief," Bennett said in a statement, "is hopelessly ineffective and it looks like somebody is looking for an alibi, of course, we have to have something to wipe our feet on and Russia makes a good doormat."

The net result of the discussion on current wheat values was negligible in the early trading today, wheat fluctuating through the morning, moving up as much as 2¾ cents a bushel and then, immediately after the publication of President Bunnell's telegram to Hyde, dropping to new record low levels for the deferred future months, at the close wheat was unchanged to ½ cent lower than Friday.

The Farmers' National Grain Corporation was disclosed as the source of the investigation of Russian short sales, George F. Milnor, general manager of the Government-sponsored cooperative, declined to disclose how it learned of the sales and added that he knew of no evidence that the selling was illegal. He raised the question whether American grain markets should be used to hedge the world crops.

"It is my guess," Milnor said. "That ways will be found to prevent the Russian Soviet from abusing the privileges that our hedging facilities provide."

MICHIGAN DEMOCRATS FAVOR PROHIBITION REFERENDUM

Declare for Separate Election Dealing Alone With Question of Repeal.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Sept. 20.—A nation-wide referendum on the eighteenth amendment was recommended today by the Michigan Democratic State convention called to nominate candidates for minor State offices. The platform recommended that the referendum "on repeal of the eighteenth amendment" be conducted "in a separate election dealing with that question alone."

The platform criticised the Hoover farm marketing act as a "political subterfuge" and condemned the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill as "an unconscionable crime against the American people in favor of special interests."

Support "with all the force of the State government" for the St. Lawrence waterways project, cooperation in unemployment relief and the working out of an old age pension plan also were pledged in the platform.

The plank on the prohibition question read:

"The Democratic party in Michigan recommends as a direction to Congress and the states a nation-wide referendum on repeal of the eighteenth amendment in a separate election dealing with that question alone."

HUSBAND TOO PARSIMONIOUS, DIVORCE CROSS-BILL ALLEGES

In a cross bill filed at Clayton yesterday in answer to her husband's divorce petition, Mrs. Lillian Trauernicht, 5939 Washington boulevard, charges that her husband, George T. Trauernicht, was parsimonious to the extent that she had to sell old bottles to obtain funds for necessaries.

She alleges that Trauernicht, although owning valuable real estate and having an income of more than $300 a month as auditor for the Beck Jewelry Enterprises, 407 North Eighth street, limited her allowances for food to $11 a week. This was insufficient to properly feed the family, including her two children by a former marriage, she alleges. She asks for a divorce and $150 monthly alimony.

Trauernicht, who lives at the American Hotel, filed suit for divorce at Clayton on Aug. 26, alleging his wife moved the furniture from their home at 1163 Claytonia terrace, Richmond Heights, and disappeared Aug. 20. He charged general indignities dating from a short time after their marriage in December, 1929. Trauernicht is 39 and his wife 32 years old.

Stabbed in Street Fight.

Edward Niemeyer, 3165 Minnesota avenue, was stabbed in the chest last night at Eleventh street and Franklin avenue in an altercation with Delbert Wiggins, 913A Franklin avenue. Wiggins admitted the stabbing, according to police, and said he drew a pocket knife when Niemeyer reached toward his hip pocket.

LACLEDE STOCK CONTROL TRANSFER UPHELD BY COURT

Circuit Judge Westhues at Jefferson City Sustains Ruling of Public Service Commission.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 20.—A ruling of the Missouri Public Service Commission, authorizing the Utilities Light and Power Corporation of Chicago to transfer to itself stock control of the Laclede Gas Light Co. and the Laclede Power and Light Co. of St. Louis from an intermediate holding company owned by the Utilities Power and Light was affirmed today by Circuit Judge Westhues in Cole County Circuit Court.

The city of St. Louis, which had appealed from the Commission ruling, likely will appeal from the Circuit Courts decision to the Missouri Supreme Court.

The intermediate holding company is the Laclede Gas and Electric Co., a Delaware corporation, which was formed by Charles A. Munroe of Chicago and his associates, after they acquired control of the two Laclede companies in 1924, Munroe and his associates sold the control of the Laclede companies to the Utilities Light and Power Co. in 1926 at a profit of more than $7,000,000. The Laclede Gas and Electric Co. holds 65,517 of the 107,000 shares of common stock and 873 shares of the 25,000 shares of preferred stock of the Laclede Gas Light Co. It also holds 9206 of the 13,200 shares of common stock of the Laclede Power and Light Co.

The Utilities Power & Light acquired the Laclede Gas & Electric Co., the holding company, in purchasing control of the Laclede properties and later proposed to wipe out the intermediate holding company and hold the Laclede stock control directly. This required approval by the commission.

The application was opposed by City Counselor Muench of St. Louis on the ground control of the operating utilities by a holding company outside Missouri was contrary to the public interest, and that the Utilities Power & Light Corporation was a foreign corporation, not licensed to do business in Missouri.

The section of the Public Service Commission law of Missouri requiring consent of the Commission before a corporation may acquire more than 10 per cent of the stock of a public utility in Missouri never has been construed by the Missouri Supreme Court.

Another St. Louis utility holding company case similar to the Laclede holding case, in which the Commission authorized the City Utilities Co. to acquire practical stock control of the St. Louis Public Service Co., now is pending in the Missouri Supreme Court on an appeal by the City of St. Louis.

SONORA, Cal., Sept. 20.—Jose Balado, 53 years old, who told officers he killed his former wife, Mrs. Louise Jardine, because "she was the meanest woman I ever knew," was convicted today of the murder, but the jury rejected the death penalty and recommended life imprisonment.

U. S. TARIFF RAKED IN LEAGUE AS BAR TO WORLD TRADE

Japanese Delegate Warns His Nation Will Be Forced to Adopt Similar Levy in Self-Defense.

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON,

GENEVA, Sept. 20. — Russia's dumping of agricultural products on the European markets and the forthcoming avalanche of cheap agricultural machinery, came in for spirited attacks today on the floor of the League of Nations Assembly as barriers to effective establishment of world-wide economic co-operation. The American high tariffs also were included as being of the same effect.

Countries as far separated as Japan and Belgium deplored the "excessive protectionism" of certain countries, and Marquis K. Inouye, Japanese delegate, warned that Japan in self-defense, would be forced to take measures, if the protectionist tendency in other countries continued.

Decrying the principle of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" in reprisals, Van Langeshove, Belgian delegate, advocated European solidarity to combat the action of states which "have lost sight of the interests of their neighbors in seeking their own salvation."

Russia was brought into the open when Foreign Minister Bourloff of Bulgaria indirectly disclosed what eight European agricultural states were aiming at in their conference at Warsaw — a disclosure which caused the German delegation to issue a categorical statement that they would refuse to participate in any joint action by mid-Europeans which might be construed as anti-Russian.

Protesting against the Russian dumping of agricultural products on European markets, Bourouff said that within a few months the Soviet would also be in a position to sell agricultural machinery at one-half price.

Almost without exception non-European countries, from Australia to Ireland and Japan, opposed the campaign of the European bloc to break down the "most favored nation" clause principle and to group Europe into regional blocs, although all agreed that immediate international co-operation was the most vital need for overcoming depression.

Countries participating in the Warsaw conference, however, will persist in their independent and joint efforts to alleviate the agricultural crisis resulting from overproduction and the catastrophic fall in the prices of cereals. Bulgaria and Hungary have combined with their former enemies, Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia and Poland and with Esthonia and Latvia in demanding that the League assist them in finding a solution for the evils of bounties, quarantine reprisals, etc.

Australian Premier Pleads for for World Disarmament.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 20.—As the League of Nations Assembly closed its second week today a new demand for early disarmament was made by Premier James H. Scullin of Australia.

This British dominion chief joined his voice with those of Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, and the spokesmen of other powers great and small who called for more speed in establishing a general disarmament plan.

The delegations of France and Italy, whose controversy is accounted the chief obstacle to disarmament progress, admitted that their efforts to get together on a satisfactory basis had thus far proved unsatisfactory.

Prime Minister Scullin, who had just arrived in Geneva from Australia on his way to the British Imperial conference, spoke before the disarmament committee, general debate in the assembly having concluded Tuesday.

He urged the calling of a world disarmament conference "very soon."

The appointment of two additional Americans as new members of the League of Nations secretariat was announced. Mitchell B. Carroll, formerly of the United States Department of Commerce, becomes director of research in the problem of double taxation.

Dr. Benjamin Gerig, formerly of Wooster, O., and Boston, was made a new member of the information section.

In view of the election of a full new bench, which the Assembly will hold in a few days, the committee agreed that 15 judges should be elected instead of the present 11; that a higher scale of salaries be adopted, and that a pension system for court members be put into operation.

The committee also adopted a resolution asking ratification of the protocol, from states which have not yet acted, as soon as possible.

Britain Passing Into a Crisis, Lloyd George Tells Liberals

"Nothing Comparable to Present Position Since Darkest Hour of War," He Declares at Party Rally.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK, England, Sept. 20.—David Lloyd George, speaking at a big Liberal rally today, said the time had arrived for a bold, fresh re-examination of the whole British industrial and economic position.

"There has been nothing comparable to the present position since the darkest hours of the war," he said. "Unemployment is growing, not by battalions, but by divisions, week by week, and I cannot see the end of it. We are not passing through, but passing into a crisis."

Great Britain not only is confronted with a grave situation at home, but in India, Africa and throughout the Empire, said the Liberal leader. "The grit, determination and innate instinct our people have, if they will but realize it, will pull us through in the end."

In characteristic style, Lloyd George poked fun at the tariff campaign being waged in England now. "A drowning man should not clutch at straws—or at sharks." "No doubt," he continued, "many capitalists would make larger profits out of the new system of tariffs, "but we have got to think of the 45,000,000 people who have got to live. Therefore, look out for sharks. I could name a few of them."

Discussing the political situation, the Liberal leader declared he could not pretend to be satisfied with what he called the self-complacency and stubborn ineptitude of the present Laborite Government, but he must first be satisfied that the Government's errors were incurable before he would use his balance of power to turn the Laborites out.

lieved our church would be injured by the bandying about of serious charges against a Bishop that I resisted the action of the General Conference last May and I am now joining in this action.

"For the last two years charges of the most serious nature have been filed against Bishop Cannon in certain places and the press and allegations have been published from which inferences have been made.

"I do not think these charges should be permitted to go unexplained and without investigation, solely because of the effect it will have on our church. In joining with three other Elders in presenting these charges for investigation under the proceedure of our church, I did what I regarded as the proper thing to do and may I say, that should all these charges and inferences after thorough investigation be satisfactorily explained, no one would be more delighted than I nor would anyone rejoice more."

Bishop Cannon Somewhere in the Interior of Brazil.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 20.—Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was somewhere in the interior of Brazil today carrying out religious investigation and organization work.

His whereabouts is unknown even to church officials here. Several days probably must elapse before he can be located or communicated with.

When he left Sao Paulo a week ago for the interior his destination was indefinite.

The Bishop came here to consult with local religious leaders about organizations of the Methodist Church in Brazil. He arrived from London, where earlier this summer he was married to his former secretary.

The first Missouri State good will tour by airplane ended at Lambert-St. Louis Field at 3 p. m. yesterday, after 12 airplanes carrying 40 persons had virtually completed a circle of the State in visiting eight cities since leaving Jefferson City Thursday morning. The party was met by a committee headed by Maj. Albert Bond Lambert.

It is planned to make the flight, which was sponsored by the State Chamber of Commerce, an annual event. The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce was represented by Postmaster Michener. Other St. Louisans were H. E. Hall, Lieut. Weeks and E. N. Shunk.

The appointments of Maj. Lambert and Michener to the Aviation Committee of the State chamber were announced at the end of the flight.

The air caravan covered about 1000 miles and stopped at the following cities: Cape Girardeau, Springfield, Carthage, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Trenton, Kirksville and Palmyra. Among those who made talks at the various stops were Lieutenant-Governor E. H. Winter and Dwight Brown, president of the State Chamber.

Although only 14 planes left Jefferson City they were later joined by four national guard ships. Ten planes landed at St. Louis. The trip was unmarred by accident other than a forced landing by one plane between Springfield and Carthage due to a broken rocker arm in the motor.

It is hoped that the trip will result in stimulating the building of airports in towns where they do not already exist and will result in better markings for the guidance of pilots.

ARRESTED AFTER STEALING 10 MONKEYS FROM CARNIVAL

Carl Johnson, Keeper of the Animals, Had Sold 8 of Them to Pet Shop.

When Carl Johnson, keeper of monkeys for the Rubin and Cherry Carnival, left the lot at Sixteenth street and Summit avenue, East St. Louis, twice Friday, each time carrying four ring-tailed monkeys, he aroused no suspicion. But early yesterday when he left the lot with two more monkeys and his small trunk, a foreman appealed to the carnival owners, who notified the police.

Johnson was found by St. Louis detectives waiting in a bus depot near Sixth and Chestnut streets with two monkeys in an apple crate. He said he had sold eight of the animals to a pet shop for $100 and was planning to sell the others in Kansas City. He was taken back to East St. Louis. The animals are valued at $100 each.

Posing as Salvation Army Workers

Reports that persons representing themselves as Salvation Army workers have solicited contributions in stores and other public places have brought a statement from the organization that no one is permitted to solicit contributions for it in St. Louis, Maj. Victor Lundgren, divisional commander, has asked that any such solicitors be reported at once either to the Salvation Army or to the Community Fund.

SLEEPING ROOM, FULL-SIZED BEDS, ON ENGLISH TRAIN

New Cars Placed on London North Eastern Railway's "Highland Man" Express.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Two sleeping cars of entirely new design have been attached to the London North Eastern Railway's "Highland Man" express. In these cars bedrooms with fullsize beds are provided for the first time on any English railway.

Vibration, it is said, has been eliminated by packing the roofs, floors, and sides of the cars with asbestos felt. There is a new system of ventilation, the principle of which is to force a current of hot or cold cleansed air into each bedroom, the direction, volume, and temperature of the air being controlled by the passenger.

An electric generator below the floor of the car, driven by a belt from the wheels, supplies current for lighting, ventilating, and heating water. The floors are covered with sponge rubber and carpeted, and the fittings and furniture embody many new features.

Each bedroom is a study in soothing pale blue, and the rooms are arranged in pairs, so that they can be converted into double rooms by communicating doors if desired.

JUNK DEALER ACCUSED OF DOG THEFT SHOT BY POLICEMAN

J. P. Flint, East St. Louis, Wounded; Officer Says He Was Attacked.

J. P. Flint, a 63-year-old East St. Louis junk dealer, was shot and wounded in the left knee last night by Motorcycle Patrolman James Helms who said he fired when Flint resisted arrest at Eighteenth stret and Misouri avenue, East St. Louis.

Helms said he overtook Flint, who was driving a wagon, after a bystander had reported observing him steal a dog. As he drew up by the wagon, the officer said Flint threw the dog, a white terrier, over a fence, and leaped on the policeman as he was dismounting from his motorcycle. Helms said he was knocked down twice before he fired.

Flint is in St. Mary's Hospital. The dog has not been found.

Dr. L. V. Guthrie, Alienist, Dies.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Sept. 20.—Dr. Lewis V. Guthrie, 62 years old, superintendent of the Huntington State Hospital and nationally recognized alienist, died here today after a six weeks' illness. He was the author of numerous works on mental diseases.

ARKANSAS TAKES OVER TOLL BRIDGE AT DE VALL'S BLUFF

State Pays $463,000 for High-Tariff White River Span That Cost $220,000 Eight Years Ago.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DE VALLS BLUFF, Ark., Sept. 20.—The $220,000 De Valls Bluff Bridge over the White River, 60 miles east of Little Rock, long an outstanding example of exploitation of the public as a privately owned structure charging high tolls, has been bought by the State of Arkansas for $463,000, more than twice the cost of the structure eight years ago. The State will continue to charge tolls, though somewhat less than the private company's charge.

Through an agreement reached by the State Highway Commission with the White River Bridge Co. and the New York Trust Co., the Circuit Court in De Valls Bluff yesterday entered an order of condemnation of the bridge property, by which the State will acquire it for the amount of the outstanding bonds.

Originally a toll charge of $1 was made at the bridge, but several months ago on orders of the War Department the toll was reduced to 75 cents. It is the understanding the state toll will be 50 cents, and probably the bridge will become free to the public if the accumulated tolls ever equal the price the state paid, plus the interest and upkeep.

Weird Financial History.

The Devalls bridge has had a weird financial history. It was promoted by Harry Bovay, who promoted several bridges through the Middle West. The original stock issue was $350,000 common and $150,000 preferred. Bovay had a franchise from the county, giving him a monopoly on bridge crossings of the river for a distance of 20 miles. He received all of the common stock and $45,000 of the preferred stock from the bridge company, which he formed, for his franchise.

In addition to the stock, bonds to the amount of $200,000 were issued. The bonds were sold to a group of Little Rock bankers at 90, the bridge company realizing $180,000 from them, and this amount went into the construction of the bridge. The bankers who bought the bonds, in addition to the 10 per cent discount, received as a bonus $175,000 of the $350,000 of common stock, which Bovay had received for his franchise, and also received one-half of Bovay's $45,000 of preferred stock.

To provide the necessary funds in excess of the $180,000 needed to build the bridge, the bankers who had bought the bonds, and who also had half the common stock, loaned the bridge company $40,000. This later was paid by the sale of preferred stock. The $220,000 thus acquired was the approximate cost of the bridge.

Some years ago the White River Bridge Co. sold the property to the Highway Bridges Co., a Delaware corporation, which proceeded to bond the property for more than $700,000, the old issue of $200,000 being retired by the new bonds.

Public Clamor Over Tolls.

Something more than a year ago, after there had been much public clamor about the high toll charged, the Highway Commission began a discussion of a plan to purchase the bridge, to condemn it or to build another bridge. The new owners of the property were willing to sell for $700,000, the amount of the bonds authorized. The result of the negotiations was the agreement for condemnation, by which the State acquired the proverty for 0463,000, the portion of the $700,000 bond issue which is outstanding.

In the negotiations, the bridge company was represented by the Little Rock law firm of Robinson, House & Moses, of which United States Senator Robinson is a member.

FATHER REUNITED WITH DAUGHTER THROUGH HOLDUP

Oklahoma Girl Finds Parent After 17 Years When Husband Robs Filling Station.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 20.—A father and daughter, separated in Tulsa, Ok., 17 years ago, were reunited today, police said, through the holdup of the father's gasoline service station by the girl's husband.

Joshua Woolridge did not communicate with his wife and 2-year-old daughter after leaving them in Tulsa, and it was merely by chance that Ruby Woolridge Scaggs, touring from Oklahoma with her infant son, her husband, Edwin Scaggs, and the latter's friend, Roland Saunders, stopped in Newhall, 30 miles north of here, 10 days ago.

Mrs. Scaggs was in the car waiting for Scaggs and Saunders to bring her and the baby some food when the men returned and drove hurriedly away, saying, according to the police, they had held up a filling station, getting $21. The girl told Scaggs if he were going to be a robber she would leave him and she did.

Last night she was found wandering about outlying streets, tired and hungry. Her baby boy was crying.

Deputy Sheriff David Croushorn questioned her. She told about the robbery. He asked her family history and she told him her father's name.

"Why Joshua Woolridge runs that filling station," he told her.

Woolridge came here and the truth of the relationship soon was established.

Scaggs and Saunders are still at large.

DISCOVERIES ABOUT VIBRATION MAY LESSEN TEMBLOR DANGER

California Scientist Hopes Soils Can Be Classified and Buildings Planned to Meet Conditions.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Sept. 20.—Discoveries of peculiarities in vibration that promise to be useful in adding to safety of buildings during earthquakes were explained to the National Academy of Science here today.

Dr. Lydik S. Jacobsen, assistant professor of mechanical engineering at Stanford University, showed how small changes in rates of vibration produce unexpectedly large changes in action of the earth's surface. It is hoped from these studies, he said, to be able to classify various soils, showing how they differ in transmitting vibrations, so buildings may be planned to meet the peculiarities of each locality.

Experiments and theoretical studies show sand 30 feet deep will transmit at the surface 90 per cent of a vibration traveling to and fro beneath it at a rate of 60 times a second. Sand 22½ feet deep multiplies this percentage to 140, 15-foot sand to 155, and 7½ foot sand only to 110 per cent. But if the vibrations are increased to 120 a second, the 7½-foot layer jumps to 175 per cent, the 22½-foot layer drops to 80 and the two others drop slightly.

104,221 ATTEND RADIO SHOW, 21,489 ON THE LAST DAY

The sixth annual St. Louis Radio Show closed at the Coliseum last night. The attendance during the final day totaled 21,489 persons and the aggregate attendance for the six days of the exhibition was 104,221.

Officers of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association said this year's show was the most successful the association had ever sponsored from the standpoint of diversity and excellence of exhibits and consistent popular interest.

Last night's crowd overflowed into the balcony, making it necessary to roll back the purple and gold canopy under which the booths were arranged.

The programs yesterday were sponsored by WIL.

Col. William E. Easterwood Returns From Europe; Proudly Displays Dallas Clippings.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—A check for $25,000 is awaiting Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte when they finish their good will tour of the United States, Col. William E. Easterwood Jr. of Dallas, Tex., said today.

The Colonel arrived from Europe aboard the liner Leviathan and found the check waiting for him. He had cabled from Paris to his Dallas bank to have one printed and sent to New York. He signed his name to it when he landed. The $25,000 is the prize the Colonel posted for the first Paris-New York-Dallas flight.

Col. Easterwood, who is something of a flyer himself, has been trying for three years to have Dallas the start or finish of an outstanding flight.

One reason he offered the prize is because he is interested in aviation. The other is because he has been busy for years "putting Dallas on the map" and he thought a flight was a good way to make the world "Dallas conscious."

He landed today with a trunkful of clippings, clippings from Paris of seven European countries. And in every one of those papers was the word "Dallas," not once, but several times.

Col. and Mrs. Easterwood will remain in New York until Oct. 2, when he flies to Boston to attend the national American Legion convention. He was a Marine captain during the war and he's a delegate-at-large from Texas to this year's meeting. Then he will fly back to New York and on Oct. 10, at a luncheon of the New York Advertising Club, he will present the $25,000 check to the two French flyers. After that he will return to Dallas.

Flyers Worn by "American Pace" to Rest Today in St. Paul.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 20.—After spending the night in Minneapolis, the French trans-Atlantic flyers, Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Lieut. Maurice Bellonte, brought their ship Question Mark to St. Paul today to be Welcomed officially to Minnesota by Gov. Theodore Christianson.

Greeted at the St. Paul Airport by a Reception Committee headed by Mayor Gerhardt Bundlie, the first men to fly from Paris to New York were taken on a parade, winding up at the capitol, where Gov. Christianson greeted them on behalf of the State.

The Frenchmen flew over the Glen Lake Tubercular Sanitarium on the way to St. Paul and circled it several times, while white-clad nurses formed a question mark on the lawn and patients crowded the balconies of the building.

Worn by the "American pace" of entertainments which has kept them busy since the start of their tour, the aviators planned to spend tomorrow resting, preparatory to their departure on Monday for Omaha.

WON'T AID WOMAN FOR SENATE

S. O. Levinson Denies Backing Mrs. O'Neill in Illinois.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Formal denial that he would serve on her campaign committee or aid Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill in her campaign as an independent candidate for the United States Senate was made today by Salmon O. Levinson, an attorney.

Mrs. O'Neill said that Levinson's name had been submitted to her by mutual friends who had told her he would be glad to serve. She had placed his name on the campaign committee without consulting him.

Doctor's THREE RULES
Big Help to Constipation

WHAT a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a movement at exactly the same hour daily.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning out, and it won't leave you weak and uncomfortable. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other mild ingredients that could not hurt even a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels: How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that unpleasant breath, get rid of those bilious headaches. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels from waste. You'll eat better and sleep better, and feel better all over. Generous bottles at all drug stores.

CONTRIBUTIONS POUR IN FOR LIPTON CUP

Americans Quick to Respond to Appeal for Tribute to Irish Sportsman.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The American people have set out to show Sir Thomas Lipton what they think of a good loser, and today they had indicated they would send him back to England this time with a cup worth a whole lot more in monetary value, at least—than the trophy he has tried five times in vain to win.

In one mail alone Mayor Walker today received more than $250 toward the purchase of "the Americans' Cup" for Sir Thomas in lieu of the America's Cup, which remains in the trophy room of the New York Yacht Club.

At the suggestion of Will Rogers, Mayor Walker accepted the job as custodian of a fund to be raised at $1 apiece from Americans who admire the spirit of the man who has been trying for 31 years to take back to England the cup which the America took awayfrom 14 British defenders in a race around the Isle of Wight in 1851.

When the Mayor's office closed at noon there was still a big stack of unopened letters, and in the office of Barron G. Collier, whom he named as treasurer of the fund, was another pile. Contributions were arriving in every mail, too, at the offices of several New York newspapers. Nobody had any idea yet how much had been received.

Contributions had begun to arrive from out of town, two came from Boston—one unsigned and the other from W. F. Baldwin of Nome, Alaska, who was there on business. There was one from Charles Newbert, Baltimore oyster man, and one from Charles Zeller, Chicago, who wrote:

"To the world's most cheerful loser."

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 20.—A silver copy of Newport's famous old stone mill and a city flag were presented to Sir Thomas Lipton aboard his yacht, Erin, today, by a committee of citizens headed by State Senator William H. Vanderbilt and Mayor L. Mortimer Sullivan.

Shamrock V, his unsuccessful challenger for the America's cup, probably will start its return voyage across the Atlantic Monday.

EAST CHICAGO BANK CLOSED, HEAD MISSING

State Depository's President Disappeared in Auto—Deposits of $650,000.

By the Associated Press.

EAST CHICAGO, Ind., Sept. 20.—Police of Illinois and Indiana are searching for H. K. Groves, president of the American State Bank of East Chicago and treasurer of Lake County, Indiana, in the belief that he has been kidnaped. Groves disappeared yesterday and directors of the bank ordered the depository closed to prevent a run.

Groves left his home early yesterday to attend a confe nce, and has ..ot been seen since. He was known to have been in the habit of carrying large sums of money, but whether he had a large sum with him yesterday could not be learned.

Officials declared they thought examiners, who took charge of the bank this afternoon, will not find any evidence of irregularities. Apparently Groves left the city in his automobile, police said, for they were unable to locate it in any garage in Lake County. His Indiana license number is 674.

At the office of the County Treasurer in Crown Point, Dan Kreitzman, Chief Deputy, said he expected Groves to return today, but that he had no knowledge of where he might be.

Joseph Imsing, cashier and chief executive officer of the bank, expressed the belief that it was solvent. One of the smaller of East Chicago's banks, it had resources of $800,000 and $650,000 of deposits. It was capitalized at $50,000.

GRAND NATIONAL BANK SUES NEWSPAPER FOR $2,500,000

The Grand National Bank filed suit against the Post-Dispatch for $2,500,000 Friday.

The suit is based upon the report published in the Post-Dispatch May 30 of the news developments growing out of the $1,000,000 robbery of the bank's safe deposit vault on May 25. The bank asked $2,000,000 actual damages and $500,000 punitive damages. Albert D. Nortoni, vice president and attorney for the bank, filed the petition.

EX-PASTOR TAKES AGENTS TO BARS HE FREQUENTED

The Rev. Joseph Hunchak Said to Have Offered Aid After Officers Found Him With Drink in Hand.

The Rev. Joseph Hunchak, former pastor of the Russian Orthodox Church of St. Michael the Archangel at Gravois and Ann avenues, volunteered to lead prohibition enforcement officers to saloons at which he had purchased liquor, it was disclosed yesterday by Deputy Prohibition Administrator James Dillon, following a raid at 321 Olive street.

The minister came to the enforcement office in the Federal Building and offered his services about three weeks ago, Dillon said, after raiding officers had found him in a bar on the South Side with a highball in his hand. Dillon quoted him as having said he was grateful to the enforcement officers for not arresting him and wished to co-operate in apprehending violators.

Three Places Raided.

Dillon assigned agents to accompany the minister and three places were visited, all of which have since been raided by officers with search warrants. Warrants have been issued for two of the proprietors, Dillon said, but at the Olive street place no liquor was found and no arrests were made.

It was learned that the Rev. Mr. Hunchak had been a frequent visitor at the Olive street barroom, where from time to time he had left tickets to be sold for the benefit of activities of his church and where he had received generous contributions.

He went there Sept. 10 in company of a man he introduced to the proprietor as his brother-in-law, and in settlement of his bill he gave a check for $50 which the proprietor cashed and still holds, because it came back from the bank marked "account closed."

A few days later when in the Federal Building this saloon keeper saw a man he recognized as the minister's "brother-in-law" enter the prohibition enforcement office. Upon inquiry he learned this man was a regularly employed enforcement agent.

Says Pastor Resigned in July.

The services of the Rev. Mr. Hunchak as pastor of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel terminated Aug. 20 and since then he has had no connection with the church, according to Jacob Daychuck, 1709 South Eleventh street, president of the congregation. The minister, having served four years, presented his resignation in July, Daychuck said, and asked for and was given a month in which to close his pastorate.

About three months ago the Rev. Mr. Hunchak was associated with a man who posed as a Russian nobleman in the promotion of a Russian language weekly newspaper. One issue, that of July 5, was printed in Granite City, and about 2000 copies were distributed on the East Side and in St. Louis. The newspaper was discontinued when his partner, Eugene Douvan, who represented himself of Prince Eugene Victor Bariatinsky, was arrested and accused of passing worthless checks. He is now in the city jail, awaiting trial on two warrants charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses.

The Rev. Mr. Hunchak came to St. Louis from Madison, Ill., and was a hard-working pastor, Daychuck said. He brought about the erection of a $45,000 building for the congregation and among the activities he promoted to help pay for it was a Russian orthodox choir, which sang in many other churches and became widely known. The church still has a debt of $25,000.

The minister is 42 years old and has a wife and two children.

Mrs. Gertrude Kosfeld Carrying Her 18-Month-Old Son Struck by Woman's Car.

Knocked down by an automobile which witnesses said had gone against an automatic traffic signal, Mrs. Gertrude Kosfeld, 33 years old, 8415 Pennsylvania avenue, was seriously injured and her 18-month-old son, Martin Jr., killed at Washington boulevard and Newstead avenue shortly before 10 a. m. yesterday.

Silvio Maraldo, 59, of 4229 Olive street, died at city hospital last night of injuries suffered at noon in a collision of two machines at Maryland and Taylor avenues.

Mrs. Kosfeld, carrying the baby in her arms and accompanied by another woman and three other children, was attempting to cross from the south to the north side of Washington on the east side of Newstead.

Witnesses said the signal was set for north and south traffic, giving the pedestrians the right of way.

The automobiles was being driven east in Washington by Mrs. Maude Marshall, 53, 5297 Washington, wife of Merritt H. Marshall Jr., an undertaker.

Held for Coroner.

Mrs. Marshall was held for the Coroner. At the Newstead Avenue Police Station, she denied driving through the traffic signal and declared she was making a right turn into Washington from Newstead when Mrs. Kosfeld stepped in the path of the car. She said Mrs. Kosfeld became confused and tried to throw the baby to safety, but instead threw it under the machine.

Maraldo was a passenger in a car driven by Louis Gori, 790 North Euclid avenue, which collided with a machine driven by Cletis Anderson, 4528A Oakland avenue. Neither driver was injured. Two other passengers in Gori's car were injured, Frank Sonedo, 4469 Delmar boulevard, who suffered fractured ribs, and Guglimo Maraldo, 4431 Delmar boulevard, who suffered a skull injury. Maraldo's skull apparently had been fractured. He died before X-ray pictures could be taken.

Woman on Sidewalk Hurt.

Mrs. Marie Hornsby of the Kingsway Hotel, was injured when Fisher ran his car up on the sidewalk in trying to avoid the child. She suffered a fractured left knee and lacerations of the face and was taken to Barnes Hospital. Mrs. Hornsby is a daughter of the late Alexander H. Handlan, railroad supply manufacturer, and the wife of Henry Hornsby, foundry operator.

William Schiebe, of 5370 North Kingshighway boulevard, suffered a fractured pelvis, and his wife, Mrs. Mary Schiebe, a fractured right leg, when Schiebe's machine collided with an automobile driven by Frank Kratovil, of 4129 Hartford street, at Tower Grove and Lafayette avenues.

Herbert Kordas, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kordas, 1477 Shawmut place, suffered a possible fracture of the skull when he was struck by a truck driven by Louis Roodman, 300 Leland avenue, University City, in front of 1473 Shawmut place. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital.

GERMANY'S PENSION LIST FOR WAR WOUNDED GROWS

Berlin Reports Present Total 839,396, an Increase of 31,800 Since Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—The number of German war wounded in receipt of public relief has increased within 12 months by 31,800 to 839,396, and still is rising.

The explanation is that in many cases, after-effects of old wounds or injuries are telling upon the victims and impairing their earning capacity. Employers look askance at workers who are semi-invalids; thus, fresh applications for relief are in excess of the gradual reduction of the lists by deaths.

Supporting these unfortunates is a heavy drain on the German exchequer, but Government actuaries think that no permanent saving can be looked for in this direction until 1932.

WOMAN ENCASED IN ALUMINUM BOX BREATHES AFTER 8 DAYS

Knox College Graduate, a Nurse, Victim of Rare Form of Infantile Paralysis.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Doctors say energy is ebbing back into the veins of Frances McGann, student nurse, whose chest is paralyzed so she cannot breathe alone.

For eight days and eight nights Miss McGann, Knox College graduate, has been encased in the respirator. She is a victim of infantile paralysis and her body muscles do not function.

Last night the doctors turned the machine in an aluminum box off for 10 minutes. She breathed that long by herself. She moved her hands just a little and her feet just a little.

Her neck is surrounded by an air-tight rubber band.

A little more than a week ago Miss McGann was herself attending the ill at St. Luke's Hospital. She suddenly collapsed, the victim of a rare form of infantile paralysis.

The machine, known as the Drinker respirator, is the first of its kind in Chicago. It was donated to the hospital by Samuel Insull Jr., son of the utilities magnate. Similar machines have been used recently in Philadelphia and San Francisco.

HOLDS SEPARATION AGREEMENT MAKES CHATTELS OF CHILDREN

Chicago Judge Rules $250,000 Proviso for Mrs. Virginia Harrison Gross Is Void.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20. — Holding that a separation agreement between Christian Channing Gross and his former wife, Mrs. Virginia Harrison Gross, daughter of a former Governor of the Philippines, was against public policy because it made chattels of their children, Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel today denied a motion that would restore the agreement.

The agreement was invalidated by a clause in a divorce granted to Gross on Aug. 8, after he charged desertion. The divorce gave him custody of both his children, Peter, 7 years old, and Barbara, 6. The previous separation agreement gave one child to Mrs. Gross, the other to Gross and stipulated Gross should pay his wife $250,000.

An injunction was asked for in Federal Court today to restrain the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. of New York from paying Mrs. Gross the $250,000. Judge Gentzel had granted such an injunction in Superior Court, but a New York referee in chancery ordered the bank to pay the money.

HEAD OF MANDEL BROS. DIES

Chicago Department Store Operator Succumbs in Paris.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Word of death today in Paris of Frederick Leon Mandel, 60, chairman of the board of directors of Mandel Brothers, department store operators, was received by officers of the company.

Mandel had been traveling in Europe with his wife since last March. His sons, Leon and Frederick L. Jr., are on their way to Paris.

ACCUSED DOCTOR KILLS SELF

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—While the woman who accuses Dr. Frank Brough, 73 years old, of Freeport, L. I., of performing an illegal operation on her was recovering in Nassau Hospital, Mineola, the aged doctor died early today in the same institution from an overdose of morphine. Authorities say he chose suicide rather than face the charge, for which the Nassau County Grand Jury indicted him 13 hours before.

Dr. Brough's accuser is Mrs. Sarah Ackerman, 32-year-old divorcee of Hicksville, L. I. Friday Mrs. Ackerman went to Nassau Hospital and police immediately took the doctor into custody. While being questioned Dr. Brough complained of weakness and swallowed several small tablets, ostensibly to stimulate his heart. Neighbors say he had threatened suicide without knowing of the indictment.

SALE OF INFLUENCE BY OFFICIALS RAKED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Mo., Sept. 20. — The Joplin Bar Association today unanimously adopted a resolution condemning "the practice of licensed attorneys in selling their influence as public officials or as officials of the political parties with which they may be affiliated under the pretense of employment as attorneys at law."

The association adopted a motion that the resolution be presented for adoption at the annual meeting of the Missouri Bar Association at Cape Girardeau next month.

Although no names were mentioned in the resolution, discussion in connection with its adoption centered around the $2,000,000 collapse last spring of the W. H. Young & Bros., Inc., St. Louis brokerage firm, which, it was shown, at one time employed several prominent attorneys as counsel.

The resolution, introduced by George Grayston, stated that the selling of their influence by attorneys in public and political offices was classed by the association as "corrupt in all cases, if not actually criminal."

The resolution follows:

"Be it resolved by the Joplin Bar Association that the practice of licensed attorneys in selling their influence as public officials or as officials of the political parties with which they may be affiliated, under the pretense of employment as attorneys at law, should be and is denounced and condemned by this association as inconsistent with the duties and obligations of members of the bar and as citizens of the State.

"We class such transactions as corrupt in all cases, if not actually criminal; and the inevitable result is discreditable to the practice of law as an honorable and legitimate profession.

"Cases of licensed attorneys accepting large retainers, under the guise of fees for legal services, where no legal services were actually rendered or contemplated, and where the recipient is holding a public office or a political office of importance, leave no room for doubt that such payments are made as an actual purchase and sale of influence to be used with reference to other public officials in the promotion of doubtful enterprises or in the prevention or suppression of legal investigation of such enterprisees; make it necessary that those members of the bar who are interested in the integrity of their profession and in the welfare of the State should take a positive position against such practices."

DECREE TO "MEXICANIZE" LOWER CALIFORNIA ISSUED

Ortiz Rubio Orders Use of Mexican Money Only in State Popular Among U. S. Tourists.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 20.—Steps toward the "Mexicanization" of lower California were ordered in a decree issued today by President Ortiz Rubio.

The decree provides for "the study and execution" of several projects, the most important being recommendation to the Governor of Lower California that within the possibilities of funds at hand he proceed to acquire land now owned by foreigners and colonize it with Mexicans. Mexicans in the United States will be invited to join these colonies.

The decree provides also for the exclusive use of Mexican money. The program of Mexicanization is the result of reports from Government officials that the district was becoming Americanized. Agua Calenta and Tia Juana are in Lower California, both popular with tourists from the United States.

CHIEF JUSTICE REFUSES TO HALT KANSAS CITY FARE RISE

Restraining Order Pending Appeal Denied and 10-Cent Charge Is Effective Today.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Chief Justice Hughes refused today to issue an order restraining the Kansas City Public Service Co. from putting into effect an increase from 8 to 10 cents in the street car fares.

The increase goes into effect after midnight tomorrow. Final determination of the case, however, awaits an appeal now pending before the Court.

AMERICAN BRIDGE TEAM LEADS

Has 5670-Point Advantage Over British Players.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The American bridge team competing in an international match with a British team tonight was leading by 5670 points after a stiff struggle. During today's play the British team made a grand slam and won 1840 points. After dinner the British continued to make a strong showing and the Americans won only 210 points in 26 hands.

The grand slam was made by Cedric Kehoe and Dr. Wood Hill against Mrs. Ely Culbertson, wife of the editor of the Bridge World, and Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz on the fourth hand of the evening. Col. Buller and Mrs. Gordon Evers failed, however, to maintain winning form for the British against Ely Culbertson and Theodore Lightner, losing 1020 points before dinner. Play in the match will continue Monday and Wednesday.

DEPOSED MINISTER REPORTED TO HAVE TAKEN POISON

By the Associated Press.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 20.—Bucharest dispatches today reported that Gen. Miracescu, former Rumanian Minister of War, who was compelled to resign his commission because of the loss of important military documents, had taken poison and probably would die.

The documents were lost in 1927 but the fact was disclosed only last week. They are said to have been abstracted from the General's pocket by a Russian woman, who was his traveling companion on a train.

INTERALLIED VETERANS DINE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Assistant Secretary of State White was host tonight at a State dinner concluding the official entertainment of the Fidac, the Interallied World War Veterans' Federation which will complete its eleventh annual Congress here tomorrow.

The dinner followed business sessions in which the delegates representing more than 8,000,000 former World War soldiers, honored Columbia, Chicago and California universities for having made the most outstanding contributions toward peace among more than 100 institutions recommended for the Fidac medal. The delegates will decorate the tomb of Woodrow Wilson tomorrow. The sessions will be resumed at Culver, Ind., where officers will be elected.

21,000 Die in India of Snake Bites.

DELHI, India, Sept. 20.—Some 21,000 persons succumbed to snake bites in India last year, this being about the usual annual figure. Wild animals, such as tigers, wolves, crocodiles, bears and hyenas, took more than 2000 other lives.

GERMAN GENERAL TO STUDY AMERICAN ARMY METHODS

Commander of First Reichswehr Division to Spend Two Months in United States.

KOENIGSBERG, Germany, Sept. 20.—Lieutenant - General Werner von Blomberg, in command of the First Reichswehr division here, has been ordered to go to America for a study of organization and training methods in the United States army. He will spend two months with the American troops, beginning Oct. 1.

Gen. von Blomberg was on the German General staff during the World War. Since then he has held a post in the Reichswehr Ministry, has commanded the Stuttgart area and a year ago received the Koenigsberg command.

AVERTS COLLISION IN PLANE FORMATION AT SCOTT FIELD

Lieut. H. F. Willard Quickly Maneuvers Ship When Wind Places Lead Machine in His Path.

Quick work at the controls by Lieut. H. F. Willard, a member of the army observation squadron at Scott Field, saved him and Lieut. Harold Grant from a mishap during maneuvers yesterday.

Lieut. Grant's biplane, leading a V formation in which the first plane is followed by pairs on successively higher levels, was driven abruptly upward by a gust of wind, almost directly in the path of Lieut. Willard's plane.

Lieut. Willard sheared off to avoid a collision, his fuselage being grazed by the wing tip of the lead plane. The other planes in the group broke formation and all came down safely. The wing of Lieut. Grant's plane was slightly damaged.

LIQUOR RETURNED TO OWNERS

$100,000 Worth of Whisky Restored by Chicago Court.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20. — About $100,000 worth of Bibley Warehouse whisky today became the undisputed property of a group of whisky brokers and private individuals when the prohibition Bureau lost its suit to have the liquor destroyed.

The Government charged that the liquor had been diluted and started a libel proceeding to destroy it as unfit. Presiding Judge Alschuler of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, decided today, however, that the liquor was potable and should be returned to its owners. Rumors that hoodlums and gangsters had rifled the warehouse under the noses of prohibition agents were heard in 1929, when it was announced that about 50,000 gallons of liquor had been tampered with. It was then the Government moved to libel the affected liquor.

CITY TO PURCHASE ELECTRIC BULBS IN THE OPEN MARKET

This Step Necessary, Temporarily at Least, Because All Bids for Lamps Were Rejected.

The annual City Hall skirmish to avoid letting the city's contract for incandescent electric lamps to a competitor of the General Electric and Westinghouse interests, even though the competitor's bid would mean a saving of from $1500 to $2000 a year to the city, has developed this year in a rejection of all bids.

Pending advertisement for new bids on a possible change in specifications to open the way for an elimination of the low bidder, the city will be forced to buy lamps in the open market and without contract, with the probability of further loss.

For several years the Board of Standardization has arbitrarily let the contract to a higher bidder. This year the annual low bidder, the Hygrade Lamp Co., threatened suit if as low bidder it did not receive the contract. For this reason, two of the three members of the board voted to reject all bids, thus gaining time to plan a course of action to bar the Hygrade company without running the risk of a suit.

117,640 Lamps a Year.

The city uses approximately 117,640 lamps of various sizes in a year in city institutions and municipal buildings. On the basis of the bids this year the total contract would amount to approximately $28,000. There were nine bidders, all bidding the list price, but a difference in the discount showing between the bids of the General Electric and Westinghouse dealers, on the one hand, and the Hygrade dealers on the other.

The Hygrade company and the R. H. Myers Hardware Co., 3711 North Broadway, a Hygrade dealer, bid on Hygrade lamps, the Myers company bid being the one seriously entered. It provided a discount of 38 per cent on sealed packages and the same on broken packages.

The other bidders were the Ornamental Light Manufacturing Co., Geller, Ward & Hassner Hardware Co., Manhattan Electric Supply Co., Glasco Electric Co., and Edison Lamp Works, all handling General Electric lamps, and the Westinghouse Lamp Co., and the Westinghouse Electric Supply Co., handling Westinghouse lamps. The bids of all these companies were the same, 34 per cent discount on both unbroken and broken packages.

The broken package discount is meaningless, as the city buys only on unbroken packages. So, in reality, the Hygrade bid through the Myers company, was for a 38 per cent discount, against a 34 per cent discount offered in the bids of the General Electric and Westinghouse dealers. On the estimated annual purchase this difference would amount to approximately $1500.

Mazdas Are Not Specified.

For several years the Hygrade dealers have been underbidding the General Electric and Westinghouse, but each year Hygrade has lost the contract, the board offering as an explanation that it preferred Mazda lamps, which are manufactured exclusively by the General Electric and Westinghouse companies.

The city's specifications, however, do not call for bids on Mazda lamps, simply asking bids on lamps which meet the specifications of the United States Bureau of Standards.

In bidding this year the Hygrade company supplied to the board evidence that its lamps had met the specifications of the Federal bureau, that it had been awarded a $500,000 contract by the Government, and that the bureau had officially reported there was no important difference between the General Electric, Westinghouse and Hygrade lamps. It also was shown that Hygrade lamps were used by the Board of Education in St. Louis, by the city of Baltimore, and by an electric lighting company in Boston. It was shown that in 1925 and 1926 the city of St. Louis purchased large quantities of the lamps and made no complaint as to their efficiency.

In view of its experience in losing the contract in other years when it was low bidder, the Hygrade company caused formal notice to go by registered mail to the members of the Board of Standardization, copies also going to Mayor Miller, that if the Hygrade low bid was rejected this year, suit would be instituted against the city.

Board Charges Intimidation.

When the bids finally were rejected, the reason for the rejection was stated to be that through these letters the Hygrade company had tried to intimidate the board, and it would not be intimidated, even into saving the city $1500.

Several meetings of the board were held before action was taken, and then it was by a two-to-one vote. The one member favoring the low bidder was Arthur C. Meyers, an engineer in Comptroller's Nolte's office. The two opposed to the acceptance of the low bid were Nicholas L. Meston, Supply Commissioner, and an appointee of Mayor Miller, and William E. Rolfe, associate to the President of the Board of Public Service, who also is an appointee of the Mayor.

At one meeting Meyers obtained a postponement of action until he could wire the Bureau of Standards in Washington for a report on the lamps.

The reply, which he read to the board at its meeting Thursday, was: "General Electric, Hygrade and Westinghouse lamps supplied to Government found to comply with specifications." It made no choice between them.

Faced with the possibility of suit if it let the contract to the competitor of the larger electrical interests, the board threw out all bids.

What the Mayor Says.

Mayor Miller told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he knew nothing about the contract, but that "he didn't like the insulting letters he had received." "Several years ago," he said, "I told the board to give the contract to Geller, but I didn't have anything to do with it this time."

H. W. Geller is a personal and political friend and associate of the Mayor.

Meyers said he had received the letters complained of and that he did not feel that an attempt was being made to intimidate him. "In view of the experience of the Hygrade company in other years," he said, "I felt that it was justified in giving notice that it would insist upon its rights even to the extent of filing suit."

Rolfe said the decision was based entirely" on the attitude of the Hygrade company and its dealer." He expressed the personal opinion that the Mazda lamp was "the best buy," and his superior, President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service said he had advised the rejection of all bids on the ground that the officials "should not submit to intimidation."

Kinsey, asked whether the specifications would be changed to stipulate Mazda lamps, said that could not be done legally.

Meston, after at first refusing to state a reason for the decision, later said: "They tried to bluff us, and we would not be intimidated."

The future course of the board has not been disclosed, and it is not apparent whether the specifications are to be changed, or whether the board is hopeful that on another letting the General Electric and Westinghouse dealers will reduce their bids to the Hygrade figure, so that Hygrade can be eliminated without embarrassment to the officials.

FAILS TO IDENTIFY BAKER AS SLAYER OF UNION PICKET

Witness Says He Could Not See Face of Julius O. Thompson, Held Without Bail for Murder.

DECLARES VICTIM PLEADED FOR LIFE

Passerby Tells How Alexander Zander Was Clubbed to Ground — Case Before Grand Jury, Oct. 14.

Julius O. Thompson, owner of a bakery at 5001 Emerson avenue, was held without bond yesterday on a warrant charging him with the first degree murder of Alexander Zander, picket for the Bakers' Union, who was fatally shot in front of Thompson's shop Wednesday morning. This action was taken after a Coroner's jury had named Thompson as the slayer.

The case will be presented to the grand jury on Oct. 14, according to Assistant Circuit Attorney Lennon, who issued the warrant under which Thompson is held.

Zander, who was 52 years old, pleaded for his life after he had been knocked to the ground by repeated blows of a blackjac , Andrew W. Brown, 4545 Emerson avenue, who saw the shooting, testified at the inquest. Brown, however, was unable to identify Thompson and told the Coroner's jury the back of the assailant was toward him.

Received Card From Picket.

"I had just walked past the bakery, where one of two men had handed me a card urging me to buy union label bread," Brown testified. "I heard a disturbance and saw a man in a brown suit and derby hat (Zander) running across the street.

"He was half turned around and appeared to be trying to ward off the blows of a man in a blue suit and straw hat who had caught up with him and hit him several times with a black object like a billy. The blows knocked his hat off and then I saw him fall to the ground.

"I heard a shot and heard him cry, 'My God! You've shot me!'"

Questioned by Lennon, Brown said he had heard Zander pleading for his life. Immediately after he heard the shot fired, Brown said, he saw the slayer run back across the street and strike John Graf, Zander's companion as a picket.

"He hit him on head with the same black object," Brown testified, "and knocked him down, but the man got up and ran. I heard another shot fired, but at no time did I see a revolver." Brown was asked if the slayers were in the Coroner's room, but he was unable to pick him out.

Threats on Union Alleged.

Other testimony substantiated statements issued yesterday by the Bakers' Union that Thompson had refused to grant the union any recognition and had threatened to "knock the head off" anyone who interfered with his business.

More than 200 bakery shops in the city have been unionized since last March, according to officers of the organization, who say the union is nearly 50 years old and has never had any conflict with the law.

In answer to Thompson's statement the day of the shooting that he was "dealing with a bunch of extortionists and racketeers," the union stated its officers had all been engaged in bakery trade and had been associated with the organization for more than 15 years. Counsel for the union has been instructed to aid the Circuit Attorney's office in prosecution of the case.

Funeral services for Zander, who died of a bullet wound of the abdomen Thursday evening, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at a funeral chapel at 3031 Meramec street, with burial in St. Paul Churchyard. He resided with his wife and two grown children at 3921A McPherson avenue.

KNOCKED OUT IN AMATEUR BOUT, WAKES IN HOSPITAL

Herman Sager, 18, Treated for Shock and Sent Home; Opponent Then Freed by Police.

Herman "Kid" Sager, young amateur boxer, woke up in City Hospital Friday night, following his bout with Steve Narkie at Rodenberg's Hall, 6200 North Broadway, and after treatment for shock was allowed to go home yesterday.

Sager 18 years old, 4643 Rosa avenue, a printer, was in the third and last round of a bout with Narkie, a youth of his own age, when Narkie landed a blow to the solar plexus and followed it up with a right to the chin. Sager went down and when the count was finished and he still showed no signs of activity, attendants applied wet towels and artificial respiration. Fifteen minutes of this failed to revive him and he was taken to the hospital.

Narkie, who lives at 2518 North Twenty-first street, was arrested, but was released when Sager recovered consciouness.

U. S. TO PERPETUATE TYPICAL TRACTS OF VIRGIN TIMBER

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The United States Forest Service announces that a nation-wide program has been launched to preserve in perpetuity typical tracts of virgin and primitive forests. Three definite types of areas will be designated for their educational, historical and research values, the Forest Service said. The first—a system of "natural areas"—will be of growing value, the announcement added, because of the "increasing scarcity of virgin forests of the type that were associated with the early history of America."

Several "primitive areas" will be designated, it was said, for the benefit of people who crave the "back to nature" type of forest recreation.

"It is expected that from five to 10 experimental forests will be required within each of the 12 or 13 forest regions of the country," the Forest Service said. "Their area will range from about 1500 to 5000 acres."

Yes, it saves you $3

Spend it as you please

There are many things you can buy with the $3 a year you save by using Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢ instead of dentifrices in the 50¢ class. Spend that saving as you please. A doll carriage is merely a suggestion.

25¢ is enough to pay for tooth paste

You may think that for the good of your teeth it is necessary to pay in the neighborhood of 50¢ for a tooth paste. If this is your opinion, there are any number to choose from—all good.

Approximately 5,000,000 people, however, say that 25¢ is enough to pay. They have reached this conclusion after long and critical use of Listerine Tooth Paste, the quality dentifrice at 25¢. They have put it to every test. Subjected it to every comparison with other dentifrices. Their enthusiasm for its swift, thorough, and safe cleansing and its delightful after effect is boundless.

You be the judge

We ask you to try Listerine Tooth Paste for a month. Test it any way you please. Compare it with any dentifrice you wish regardless of the price. If others disclose greater quality or better results for the money—by all means stick to them.

We believe, however, that you will find, as others have found, that Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢ is the outstanding value in the tooth paste field.

We have given it the quality that characterizes all Lambert products. And we offer it at a price that is made possible only by large scale (and therefore economic) buying and ultra-modern methods of manufacture that eliminate costly operations. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

GERMAN FASCIST CHIEF OUTSPOKEN ON AIMS

"What So-Called Republic Regards as Inviolable Is Not Sacred for Us."

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—Rumors today that the Fascist party, strongest in the Reichstag since its extraordinary gains in Sunday's elections, was conspiring to seize power in the State have rendered pressing the problem of the party's future role in German politics.

The rumors were officially declared to be without foundation by the Ministry of the Interior and by the Prussian Government, which accused the Communists of attempting to launch a Fascist "putsch" scare. But the recent utterances of Fascist spokesmen have hardly been calculated to soothe such public nervousness as exists.

In the local Fascist organ, Der Angriff (The Attack), Paul Goebbels, the leading Fascist member of the Reichstag, today declared that "what the so-called republic regards as inviolable is not sacred for us."

"To Give It Another Shove."

"The national Socialist movement," he said, "seeks to upset things as they are, and has not come to bolster up what is falling but to give it another shove."

Prussian police say they have found no evidence supporting reports in one section of the German press that the Fascists are holding secret military drills and buying weapons on a large scale. They apparently do not look for anything like a recurrence of Adolf Hitler's notorious Munich beer cellar "putsch" of 1923.

The Associated Press learned from an authoritative source today that the Fascist party just missed playing a decisive role in the present political turmoil.

Had the Reichstag been convened immediately after the general election, the Fascist probably would have been called upon to attempt to form a Government.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, the correspondent has been informed, was importunted by the hard-headed business men of Germany to yield the reins of Government to Adolf Hitler and the Nationalist leader, Alfred Hugenberg.

These bankers and captains of industry did not expect a cure-all for Germany's political and economic ills from the negative program of the Fascists and the Nationalists, but they believed that if the extremists of the Right were given enough rope they would soon hang themselves, or at least become milder and more moderate.

Chancellor Bruening, however, protested that such a course would be dangerous and disturbing to Germany's sensitive financial and economic organism.

He said that the essential financial reforms planned by his Cabinet and involving higher taxes would be dropped by the Fascists and that the political situation after much valuble time had been lost inevitably would revert to the confused situation of today.

After thinking this over, the business leaders and industrialists swung around to Bruening's views.

Reported Fund for Propaganda.

The intention of the Fascist members of the new Reichstag to use their salaries from the republic for propaganda to destroy the republic was reported today after a Fascist meeting behind closed doors.

The deputies, it was said, would be expected to pay most of their salaries into the party chest.

Goebbels threatened a pogrom against the Jews if any attempt were made to assassinate Fascist leaders.

"I have been told the Jews think the only means to get rid of us is to pick off our leaders one by one. If a single leader thus falls, we shall answer with a pogrom."

Italian Fascists Say Germany Is Choosing Between Two Systems.

ROME, Sept. 20.—he Fascist party today issued a statement on the German elections, bearing the title, "The Twentieth Century vs. the Nineteenth." After stressing the great importance of the elections the Fascist statement, which is an "order of the day," goes on to say that the younger generation is no more attracted by last century's principles, such as liberalism, democracy and socialism. They are fascinated by the two political systems existing now, namely Fascism and bolshevism.

Germany, the order says, is about to choose and in the meantime she has shown her "deep, untamed spirit." Who still believes in the Young plan, which is really due to end in 1988, and in treaties lasting forever? the order asks.

NINE HURT IN EXPLOSION

DECATUR, Ill., Sept. 20.—Nine persons were injured, five seriously, late today in a dust explosion in the A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co. plant. Starch dust was ignited near a kiln house.

The explosion stripped the three-story building of its windows. The damage was estimated at $5000. An investigation was started to determine the cause.

Bank Stockholders to Pay Deficit.

MARION, Ill., Sept. 20.—Judge D. T. Hartwell, in Circuit Court here today ordered 100 per cent assessment is collected it will yield of the defunct First State Bank of Pittsburg to pay depositors. If the assessment is collected it will yield $25,000, the amount of capital stock. The bank has already paid a 20 per cent dividend.

Senator Schall's Son Injured.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Thomas D. Schall Jr., 20 years old, son of Senator Schall of Minnesota, and Miss Alice Forest of Sherwood Forest, Md., were seriously injured at East Riverdale, Md., late today when their automobile collided with an oil truck. At the hospital Schall was described as suffering from a fractured leg, a fractured arm and other injuries, and the girl from a fractured skull and possible internal injuries.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL SHARTEL GETS DIVORCE IN COLE COUNTY

Obtains Custody of Two Daughters; Indignities and Abandonment Charged.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 20.—A divorce was granted to Attorney-General Stratton Shartel from Mrs. Martha Wills Shartel, on grounds of indignities and abandonment, in a hearing today before Circuit Judge Henry J. Westhues in Cole County Circuit Court. The decree awards Shartel custody of their two young daughters, Mary Jane, 11 years old, and Martha, 8.

Mrs. Shartel did not contest. She filed a waiver of service. Mrs. Shartel is in Neosho, Mo., at the home of her mother, Mrs. W. G. Wills, and did not appear in court.

The divorce petition, filed by Shartel last Thursday, alleged that Mrs. Shartel on last Aug. 24 told Shartel she no longer wished to live with him and that she no longer loved him. The petition charged she voluntarily abandoned her home last Aug. 28, and had remained away since that time.

The waiver filed by Mrs. Shartel stated that all property rights between her and Shartel had been fully and satisfactorily settled by mutual agreement.

The Shartels were married Jan. 19, 1919, in Dallas, Tex. They have resided in Jefferson City since 1921, when Shartel came here as an assistant Attorney-General under former Attorney-General Jesse W. Barrett. Shartel was elected Attorney-General in November, 1928, for a four-year term. He is 35 years old and Mrs. Shartel is 33.

Burglar in Detective's House.

A burglar entered the home of City Detective Harry Hummert, 5522 Goethe avenue, early yesterday, and escaped with $10. Mrs. Hummert was awakened by a noise at 3 a. m. and found the intruder in her bedroom. He fled when she screamed.

NEW DRY REGIME FREE OF POLITICS, WOODCOCK SAYS

Asked About Maj. Campbell's Charges, He Expresses Belief Politicians Let His Workers Alone.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Confident that politics plays no part in the new prohibition enforcement machine, Prohibition Director Woodcock today outlined a program to "gain further public respect" for his force and to assure punishment of the murderers of dry-law agents.

Woodcock insisted there was no political influence operating in the new dry regime when he was asked about charges made by Maj. Maurice Campbell, former dry administrator for New York, in recent articles. He expressed confidence, too, that the politicians were not bothering his workers.

Worried by Killing of Agents.

But what worries the dry-law chieftain is the increasing number of casualties among his men, augmented yesterday by the killing of an agent during a raid on a brewery at Elizabeth, N. J. Woodcock said he proposed to meet this problem two ways.

"First," he said, "I hope by administering the law decently and honestly to gain further public respect for it and its enforcers. Second, I ask the states to prosecute the murderers vigorously."

Woodcock said he was satisfied the New Jersey authorities would do all in their power to apprehend the gang which attacked the dry raiders yesterday and killed one of them. He is leaving the problem with the State officials and Prohibition Administrator Pennington.

Inspection Tour Next Week.

The dry director will go into Pennsylvania and New Jersey next week on an inspection tour, starting at Philadelphia Monday and going to Pittsburg Tuesday. He will go also to Lewisburg and then to New Jersey.

Returning from an inspection tour of New England, Woodcock said he was well satisfied with his workers in that area and "highly pleased" over the co-operation given them by local authorities.

He will continue his inspection trips and declared he wanted to hear about the complaints as well as the reports from his workers. He will go to Tennessee and Kentucky week after next; to New York Oct. 6 and to the Chicago district Oct. 13. Later he plans to go to California.

Norman Thomas Asks Hoover for Inquiry Into Campbell's Charges.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—A letter to President Hoover asking for immediate investigation of the charges made by Maj. Maurice Campbell in his articles on prohibition enforcement in the New York World, particularly with regard to the pressure brought by politicians for the reinstatement of ousted dry agents, was written yesterday by Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for Congress in the Sixth District and former nominee for the Presidency.

Thomas urged that Campbell's utterances could not be met "by private inquiry behind the scenes," and urged promptness in investigation because of the immediate importance of prohibition, and because of the fact that New York City is experiencing an "awakening," with regard to corruption in government.

Civil Service Commission Denies Any Change for Politicians.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Commenting on Maj. Maurice Campbell's expose of the prohibition enforcement situation in New York, the Civil Service Commission declared today that no rating of an applicant for the prohibition service or for any other classified civil service position had been made originally or changed because of political pressure.

The statement said that Major Campbell had implied in one of his recent articles that the commission had changed rating of applicants because of outside pressure.

ST. LOUISAN SUES TO OBTAIN CUSTODY OF DAUGHTER, 10

Dr. Raphael Benitez' Action in Detroit Against Child's Grandmother Continued.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 20.—Legal action for the custody of 10-year-old Patricia Benitez, daughter of Dr. Raphael Benitez, a St. Louis dentist, who is seeking to take the child from her grandmother, Mrs. Ben R. McCrossen, 6533 Sixteenth street, opened in Circuit Court here yesterday, but was continued until Oct. 1.

The child's mother died seven years ago, and Patricia has since made her home with Mrs. McCrossen, her maternal grandmother. Last summer she visited her father, who remarried, and Dr. Benitez informed Mrs. McCrossen that he intended keeping her. Mrs. McCrossen took the child to Detroit without the father's consent, and he brought habeas corpus proceedings.

BANK CASHIER CONFESSES

Took Funds at Lyons Falls, N. Y.; Held After Robbery.

LOWVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Everett C. Hughes, cashier of the Lyons Falls National Bank, arrested today in connection with the $21,000 robbery of the bank on Sept. 2, made a statement, according to Miller B. Moran, District Attorney of Lewis County, saying he had taken bank funds of an amount unknown to him.

Hughes, said the District Attorney who ordered his arrest, said in his statement that he took $5000 in funds on one occasion and additional amounts, the figures of which he was unable to give. This began, Hughes was quoted as saying, last winter.

Confesses $2500 Judgment.

A confession of judgment was entered yesterday before Circuit Judge Fitzsimmons by Joseph Dickson Jr., for $2509 in favor of Mrs. Elise Lackland. The confession was signed to a petition of Mrs. Lackland setting forth that the amount was due after deducting attorney's fees and other credits to which Dickson was entitled. The judgment runs with interest from Oct. 25, 1924, Dickson consenting that it be entered as lien on a trust fund.

PLANNING RECEPTION FOR COSTE, BELLONTE

Chamber of Commerce Air Board Hopes to Arrange Parade on Oct. 3.

A civic reception for the French trans-Atlantic flyers, Coste and Bellonte, is being planned for Oct. 3, on the occasion of their visit to St. Louis, the Chamber of Commerce Air Board announced yesterday.

Details of the reception have not been completed, but it is expected to include a parade in the downtown section, a luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce and a dinner in the evening. Word has been received from George Witten, manager of the flyers' good-will tour, that they will arrive in St. Louis on the morning of the third and depart the following day. A visit to Jefferson Memorial for a view of the Lindbergh trophies is planned for the morning of Oct. 4.

A citizens' committee to handle details of the visit is to be organized by the Air Board within a few days. Meanwhile, tentative plans are being made in co-operation with Marc Seguin, French Consul.

Miner Convicted of Manslaughter.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Sept. 20.—Robert (Scotty) Kirkwood was found guilty of manslaughter in the death of William Armonsky, on Jan. 29, 1929, by a jury in Circuit Court late today. The sentence is from one to 14 years. Armonsky was shot by Kirkwood after the two quarreled over affairs at Harco Mine, where the two worked.

ONE DEATH SENTENCE, 6 TO PRISON IN WEEK

All Persons Who Stood Trial Convicted—25 Years for Assault to Kill.

Juries made a clean sweep of the docket in the criminal division of the Circuit Court last week, convicting all persons who elected to stand trial. The result was a death sentence for a Negro for murder in the first degree, a 25-year sentence for a man charged with assault to kill, two long-term robbery sentences and a four-year conviction for a man charged with grand larceny. All the cases were tried before Circuit Judge Rutledge.

The man condemned to die is Julius Forney, a 24-year-old Negro, who, with his companion, Willie Hood, was captured in flight after a robbery in which Clarence Taylor, Negro, was killed when he attempted to interfere with the escaping robbers.

John W. Bongard, former proprietor of two notorious county roadhouses and a convicted slayer, drew a 25-year prison sentence. He was convicted of shooting his former partner in the plastering business, John Squires, in the latter's home, 4361 Loughborough avenue, Feb. 27. Bongard, at the time of the Squires shooting, was out on bond for the killing of Crato Gentry, a former convict. He was convicted of manslaughter for Gentry's death and given a two-year penitentiary sentence. The latter case is now in the Supreme Court on appeal.

The others to get penitentiary sentences from juries were Ned Douglas, Negro, who was given 10 years' imprisonment for a violation of the Henry law, robbery with a dangerous and deadly weapon. Jams Landrum, Negro, a seven-year sentence, was convicted at his second trial, a previous jury failing to agree on his guilt on testimony that he robbed a Negro friend of $23, and Louis Qualls was given four years on a grand larceny charge, the theft of $67 worth of clothing from a Washington avenue store.

Three men were given penitentiary sentences during the week on pleas of guilty. They were Frank de Shay and Sandy Henderson, Negroes, who robbed North Side grocery stores. Their crimes were violations of the Henry law and their punishment was fixed at 10 years' imprisonment. Harry Ellis, charged with two burglaries, was permitted to take concurrent sentences of five years each.

Others charged with major offenses who were permitted to plead guilty to minor offenses and take less than penitentiary sentences were: Charles Bird, petit larceny, six months in workhouse; Earl Perrol, tampering with an automobile, three months in workhouse, and Francis Capps, setting up a gambling device, $100 and costs.

During the week cases against John Matthews, charged with manslaughter, and Woodrow Smith, charged with carrying a concealed weapon, were dismissed because of insufficient evidence.

Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, and Sergei Rachmaninoff, the composer-pianist, also have consistently avoided broadcasting.

Vaughn de Leath, who was featured with Franklyn Bauer in the Firestone broadcasts, has returned from a singing tour abroad and has been "loaned" by the NBC to WTAM, Cleveland, for six months. She took part in the recent General Electric gala review, and left New York the next day to take up her work for WTAM. She is said to have been the first woman to broadcast, and is famous as the originator of the "crooning" style of singing.

A rebroadcast of world wide interest is hoped for as soon as the new 12,000-watt short wave station in the Vatican, Rome, is formally dedicated, as the Pope is expected to take part in the ceremonies. It is regarded as a certainty that the NBC and CBS networks will attempt to pick up the broadcast and put it on the air through all member stations. The Vatican station will operate on 19.84 and 50.26 meters.

The Columbia chain's "Arabesque" program has "gone commercial," at least in New England, where WNAC, Boston, and WEAN, Providence, are putting it on the air as sponsored by advertisers in the two cities. The Columbia System also is said to be permitting advertisers in the various cities where it has station links to cut in on chain programs, the fee for this privilege being around $500, a broadcast. In this way local advertisers can get some air advertising at a fraction of the cost—several thousands dollars a broadcast—of buying a complete program on a country-wide network. Of course, he does not get national coverage, his sponsorship being known only to listeners to his particular station. But he does get his name associated with a "big league" broadcast.

It is said that Eddie Cantor, the comedian, is to be paid $7000 for singing three songs and doing a bit of funmaking at 8 o'clock next Friday night in the first program of a new "Radio Follies" series over the CBS chain, including KMOX. Guy Lombardo's orchestra also will be featured. The programs will be sponsored by associated jewelers in cities from coast to coast. Cantor is to sing "My Baby Just Cares for Me," "A Girl Friend of a Boy Friend of Mine" and a number from "Earl Carroll's Vanities." Weber and Fields and other theatrical stars to take part in future "Radio Follies" broadcasts.

It will cost approximately $10,000,000 to provide artists and entertainers for the sponsored and sustaining programs which will be broadcast over NBC networks in 1931, M. H. Aylesworth, president of the NBC, estimates. The cost of operation, in addition to the fees paid to entertainers, will reach $20,000,000, he said.

"We plan to make 1931 the most interesting and progressive in radio broadcasting," said Aylesworth. "Owners of radio sets can be assured of front seats at a continuous 365-day-and-night performance of the world's finest entertainers, together with high lights of public events, sports and public affairs, with impressive programs in religious, educational and agricultural broadcasting."

The Empire Builders radio dramas are to return to the air Monday night, Sept. 29. Harvey Hays will again be the "Old Timer." Miss Bernadine Flynn and Don Ameche, who won success on Broadway, will be featured in the cast, Virginia Gardiner retiring, because the broadcasts will come from Chicago instead of New York.

Bob Emery's Iodent Big Brother Club broadcasts are to be resumed at 6 o'clock Sunday nights over the NBC's WEAF chain, beginning Sept. 28. The Radio Rascals, spelling bees for children, his lighthouse and coast guard news exchange and science talks will be heard again in the new series.

Incidents of the days when Death Valley was indeed a death trap to immigrants and prospectors will be recalled in a new series to be broadcast over the NBC's WJZ chain at 8:30 Tuesday nights, beginning Sept. 30. The opening program will be cast in the days of '49, when a party of gold seekers, men, women and children, had the terrible experience because of which this arid California valley was named. The cast for the sketches will include Virginia Gardiner, William Shelley and Jack McBride. An added feature will be the singing of old time ballads of the West by John White, known to listeners as "The Lonesome Cowboy." Josef Bonime, a widely known pianist and conductor, will lead the orchestra.

The National Broadcasting Co. is to manage WBZ, Springfield, Mass., and WBZA, Boston, according to reports in New York, as it already manages WEAF and WJZ, New York; WRC, Washington, D. C.; KOA, Denver, and KGO, Oakland, Cal. The two stations are owned by the Westinghouse Co. and operate on the same channel through synchronization. A new 50,000-watt joint station, on a site between Boston, Providence and Springfield, is planned if the Radio Commission permits. Syncronization will be abandoned.

Pierre Brugnon, formerly of Paris, is to act as master of ceremonies for the Evening in Paris broadcasts over the Columbia chain Monday evenings, instead of Taylor Buckley, as was announced.

The British Arctic expedition will transmit as GKN on 20.97 meters from its base at Angmagsalik, Greenland, Alfred H. Grebe reports.

Wives of men who are in the limelight are to be featured in a new series of Armstrong Quakers broadcasts over KWK and allied NBC stations, beginning Friday evening, Oct. 3. Mrs. Graham McNamee, wife of the NBC announcer, will be on the first of these programs. The following week Mrs. Fred Stone, wife of the comedian, will speak, and the third week will bring Mrs. Edgar Guest, wife of the poet, before a microphone. They are supposed to tell the radio audience about their husbands' hobbies and foibles.

Phil Baker with his accordion and Shaw and Lee, stage and screen funmakers, are billed for a new radio feature, "Going Places," that is to be broadcast over the Columbia chain at 5:45 Monday and Friday evenings, beginning tomorrow. A series of sketches has been written for them by Mann Holiner, author of Broadway laugh "hits." Baker will play "H. C.," an actor. Shaw will play "Mobie" and his chauffeur, "Opie," will be acted by Lee. The series will be SPEAKER, made of quarter-inch steel, which was the principal unit in the public address system for the radio show in the Coliseum the past week. It consisted, in reality, of two 14-foot air columns joined in a single mouth. Operated full blast, with four dynamic power units, it is capable of making music heard over street noises to a distance of several miles, according to Western Electric engineers.

College Stations Organizing

Many of Them Expected to Rebroadcast Programs of Ohio School of the Air as Sent Out by WLW and Its 10,000-Watt Short-Wave Transmitter.

A union of college and university radio stations is forming to further education by radio. WLW, Cincinnati, has secured the promise that most of the land grant college and university stations in the United States will rebroadcast its educational programs, picking them up from the 10,000 watt short-wave station, W8XAL.

The following stations have signified their intention of broadcasting the School of the Air which the Ohio State Department of Education will present again this year through WLW, beginning tomorrow:

WAPI, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Birmingham (5000 watts).

WEAO, Ohio State University, Columbus (750 watts).

WCAJ, Nebraska Wesleyan, Lincoln (500 watts).

Arkansas State Agricultural and Mechanic Arts College at Jonesboro will carry the programs if it is granted a license.

These stations have expressed great interest in the project and expect to promise co-operation as soon as executives have returned from vacations:

KUOA, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville (1000 watts).

KRUF, University of Florida, Gainesville (500 watts).

WPSC, Pennsylvania State College, State College (500 watts).

WNAB, University of Oklahoma, Norman (500 watts).

WLB, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis (500 watts).

WWL, Loyola University, New Orleans, La. (5000 watts).

John L. Clark, general manager of WLW, says the plan of utilizing short waves to expand educational broadcasting is heartily approved by Dr. William John Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education; Armstrong Perry, director of radio research for the Payne fund, who is co-operating with the U. S. office of education; and President Pearson of the University of Maryland, chairman of the association of land grant colleges. This latter group of institutions is the first of the more than 50 colleges and universities operating broadcasting stations who will be asked to ally themselves with WLW for the educational rebroadcasts.

Clark points out that educators sometimes have asserted that commercial radio stations pay too little attention to the possibilities of radio education, except such stations as WLW, which for two years has given an hour a day during the school year to the Ohio School of the Air, and various other periods at night for adult educational features also produced by the State Department.

Iowa's Spending On Roads Makes State Prosperous

Highway Workers Paid $30,000,000 This Year—$31,000,000 for Materials.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Sept. 21.—The State of Iowa is being pulled out of the economic depression, just as it is being pulled out of the mud, by its tremendous road-paving program. More than $30,000,000 in cash has been paid to an army of 30,000 men, virtually all Iowans, since last April when the road program got under way for the season. An additional $31,000,000 has been paid for road materials, cement, gravel, bridges, culverts, grading and paving machinery. As rapidly as farm hands were dismissed from farms because of drouth conditions, they were put to work in the road gangs at good wages.

Iowa has been "in the white" all during the summer that is just ending. Furthermore, Iowa can see a similar era of prosperity for 1931 and for several years to come. The paving program will not be completed for two or three years.

These tremendous expenditures have had, and are having, a splendid effect on conditions all over the State. And these same expenditures should take Iowans into the market for all sorts of things next winter.

In addition to providing employment directly for the 30,000 men working on the roads, the highway expenditures have stimulated business in lines allied with construction. Equipment companies have enjoyed record business. Material production companies have had the same experience. Iowa cement companies have experienced a boom. The same is true of coal production, because that most of the coal used by the cement companies is mined in the State. Iowa coal miners have all been at work all the summer, and railroads and transportation companies have felt the stimulus of added traffic. The cement manufacturers have never before had such a volume of ce-

Post-Dispatch Highway Maps Made Available

THE Resort and Travel Bureau of the Post-Dispatch has for distribution an excellent 50-page auto trails atlas of the United States and Eastern Canada, showing the condition and numbers of highways and mileage between towns. The price is 50 cents, and 60 cents if mailed.

St. Louis and vicinity maps show all towns, roads, rivers, streams, lakes and other details within a radius of 50 miles of St. Louis. They sell for 20 cents, 24 cents if mailed. Individual State maps are 10 cents, and 12 cents mailed.

City guides, giving the location of streets and street car and bus lines, churches, hospitals, theaters, office buildings and containing a map of the city, sell for 25 and 30 cents.

Maps of St. Louis and the suburbs, showing the streets of St. Louis, East St. Louis, Madison, Venice, Clayton, Ferguson, Kirkwood, Webster Groves and University City, sell for 40 cents.

Car With Airplane Streamlined Body Causes Stir in Britain

An automobile that resembles a beetle is being driver over English roads by Sir Charles Dennistoun Burney, and is creating interest among British designers and critics. It is streamlined according to lessons he learned when constructing the airship, R-100, and is declared by Sir Charles to save 50 per cent of gasoline, as much horsepower, and to be sparing on tires because of the tendency to lift itself off the road into the air. It is said that one driving the car feels much as if he were riding in an airplane. The engine is at the extreme rear. The car is 17 feet long, has a pointed nose, cost $7500, and does up to 80 miles an hour.

When the shift lever won't go into low for a start let the clutch pedal come up a minute. Then depress it and try shifting again. This act changes the position of the gears, provided the engine is running. Should the engine be idle, try operating the starter-motor while the clutch is in the engaged position or shift into second or reverse before trying low again.

Replacement Buying of Cars Expected on Record Scale

This Market Alone Will Account for Production of 3,500,000 Automobiles in 1931, Executives at Detroit Believe—Sales Cycle to Begin Good Years, They Are Convinced.

By CHRIS SINSABAUGH

DETROIT, Sept. 20.—Prospect of a replacement market for 3,500,000 motor vehicles, the largest in the history of the industry, is the bright spot on the 1931 automotive horizon. To the natural replacement market of 2,750,000 cars, executives here are certain they are justified in adding 750,000 cars as representing the deferred buying of 1930.

Toward the many who, through uncertainty as much as unemployment, failed to buy new cars this year the industry has not adopted the attitude that they are lost irreparably. With the disappearance of the twin wraiths of depression—fear, and failure to find work—motor company executives know the lost buyers will find their way back.

Analysis of the cyclic trends in car buying provides the industry with considerable basis for confidence. For the last six years, analysts point out, production and sales have been running in three-year cycles, with two good years followed by one weak one.

A flash back over the figures shows that 1925 and 1926 were marked by production of approximately 4,500,000 cars. In 1927, the total dropped to 3,500,000. In 1928 the industry again soared to 4,500,000 and in 1929 ran up to the unprecedented aggregate of 5,500,000.

Production this year will be slightly less than 4,000,000. Then, in 1931, the cycle will begin again, Detroit is convinced.

It begins to look as if all manufacturers were motivated by the same idea—to be ready to take advantage of the new buying wave the instant it begins. Never has there been such an accelerated development of new cars as during the past three months.

For one, Durant is going to begin by Dec. 1 to make deliveries of the Mathis, the four-cylinder French product which will sell in the popular price class. The Mathis, which is a small car rather than a "midget," is the culmination of the Durant conviction that diminished dimensions are what the car buying public desires, provided they do not mean diminished performance. The Mathis, while small, has a seat two inches wider than the present model A Ford. It will have a speed of 55 miles an hour, in its American form.

Studebaker's announcement this week of the new Dictator eight, also featuring free-wheeling, set at rest widespread speculation as to whether the new transmission was to be extended to the lower priced members of the company's line. Dual carburetion and manifolding, new body designs representing modifications of those on the larger Studebakers, and an 81-horsepower engine are additional features of the new eight series.

Now the public is waiting for the October debuts of Nash and Reo, both of which promise to be of widespread general interest in this period of change, change, change.

That officially "rumored" announcement of Nash's introduction of the lowest priced eight has stimulated a considerable degree of interest. The title "lowest-priced eight" has been one especially hard to keep this year and Nash's quest for it is being watched closely. That the company also would introduce the lowest-priced six in its history has caused considerable speculation as to whether it will be in the most popular price class or the tier just above.

Thirty manufacturers now are building eight-cylinder cars, an average gain of two a year since Cadillac first introduced such a power plant back in 1915. Today's list includes Auburn, Buick, Cadillac first introduced such a Soto, Dodge, Duesenberg, du Pont, Elcar, Gardner, Graham-Paige, Hudson, Hupmobile, Jordan, Kissel, La Salle, Lincoln, Marmon, Nash, Oakland, Packard, Peerless, Pierce-Arrow, Ruxton, Studebaker.

Phillips Co Will Spend $3,000,000 For Stations Here

Opens New $85,000 16-Pump Service Unit at Clayton and Big Bend Roads.

A building program involving the expenditure by the Phillips Petroleum Co. of more than $3,000,000 in St. Louis and the county was revealed yesterday in connection with the formal opening of the company's new gasoline and oil service station at Clayton and Big Bend roads.

This sum does not include more than $1,500,000 that will be spent in East St. Louis on terminal facilities for the 800-mile gasoline pipe line that the company is building from its refinery at Borger, Tex., and expects to have completed within three months.

The new service station is of brick, in English style, attractively designed and carefully arranged to expedite sale of "gas" and oil to motorists. It cost $85,000. It has 16 gasoline pumps, all electrically driven; special oil pumps; power car washers and hydraulic lift for use in greasing cars.

Three years ago the company was only producing and refining oils and gasoline. It is the largest producer of "natural" gasoline in the world, and at one time sold its gasoline to other refiners who used it to blend with their product for greater "pep." When the company decided to enter the retail gasoline field, its chemists developed a gasoline in which the "pep" of its "natiural" gasoline were made even more pronounced.

In three years, the company, which recently took into a consolidation the Independent Oil and Gas Co., has established more than 1400 of its own oil and gasoline service stations and has over 10,000 retail outlets, covering the Mid-Continent area, from Illinois to Colorado and from Minneapolis south to the gulf.

The company entered St. Louis two yeares ago, in the retail field. Today, according to Fred W. Cordell, St. Louis division manager, it owns and operates 15 of its own stations in this city, has eight more under construction and has approved locations for 15 more. Its oils and gasoline are retailed from 97 other stations in the city, to say nothing of many otner Phillips service stations in this region.

St. Louis Society of Automobile Pioneers Tells Story in Book

"Four Wheels-No Brakes" is the engaging title of a 360 page, handsomely bound volume prepared by the Society of Automobile Pioneers of St. Louis. (Von Hoffman Press.) It historically and chronologically tells of the experiments and achievements of 20 and 30 years ago by St. Louisans in the automobile field. The story is told of the first car built in St. Louis in 1893 by J. D. Perry Lewis, the first cars built here by George P. Dorris and associates, the development of the "horseless buggy" by John C. Higdon and others. An attractive feature of the book is the autobiographical stories of early St. Louis car owners and their road and mechanical difficulties, 25 years ago.

Prideful motor cars of 25 and 30 years ago, with their St. Louis drivers and occupants, appropriately costumed for motoring as of that date, are shown in 36 full page halftone engravings. Among these drivers are Roy F. Britton, Dr. Malcolm Robb, J. L. Wiemeyer, Robert E. Lee, Fred Campbell, G. A. Milbradt, Samuel Breadon, Charels E. Swingley, A. L. Jagemann, W. L. Barnard, Frank Blishop, I. Wagner and many others.

The story also tells in detail of early "endurance runs" and 'trade runs' and of the organization of the Automobile Club, the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, the Automotive Accessory Association and other car associations and societies.

Humor has not been omitted by the authors for the two stories in Italian dialect of John Caffarata's motor trips to the country and his mishaps are gems.

The authors are members of the Society of Automobile Pioneers of St. Louis, of which Henry F. Borbein is president, J. D. Perry Lewis vice president, Charles A. Marien secretary, H. L. Schnure treasurer, and Robert E. Lee director.

Graham Retail Deliveries Increase.

During the last week of August retail deliveries of Graham cars increased 35 per cent over the preceding week, according to F. R. Velpey, general sales manager of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation.

New Studebaker Dictator Eight, in Sedan Type

New Studebaker Dictator '8' Has Free Wheeling

Prices of Greatly Improved Line Dropped to Range of $1095 to $1250.

A new 81 horsepower Dictator Eight, completely redesigned, more powerful, and equipped with Studebaker's innovation of free wheeling, is announced by the Studebaker Corporation. This new Dictator Eight is offered at new low prices ranging from $1095 to $1250, according to the Arthur Lindberg, Inc., distributer.

Free wheeling under positive gear control, developed and perfected by Studebaker engineers and manufactured under Studebaker patents, was introduced two months ago in the new series President and Commander Eights. In the new Dictator Eight, it now becomes available to even the modest purse. Gears may be shifted back and forth between second and high at any speed without touching the clutch. The shift is smooth and silent with no gear clashing. The clutch need be employed only to start and back up.

With free wheeling, Studebaker engineers have succeeded in making full use of car momentum. The instant the foot is lifted off the accelerator the engine drops to idling speed, while the car continues to glide forward under its own momentum, in gear and fully controlled, yet free and silent as if there were no gears.

Material savings are reported in gas and oil. Laboratory and road tests show Studebaker states, that free wheeling saves 12 to 20 per cent in "gas" and 20 per cent in oil. The same tests demonstrate that free wheeling operates an average of one mile in every five under ordinary driving conditions. Thus, in 10,000 miles, the engine only "works" 8000 miles, while the remaining 2000 miles are traveled on momentum with the engine idling. Other savings result from the elimination of reversional strains on engine, transmission, chassis and tires, because when free wheeling car momentum does not "force" the engine.

Chief among improvements in the Dictator are dual carburetion, in effect two carburetors, and a new carburetor silencer. This latter is a small muffler attached to the air intake of the carburetor which effectively reduces carburetor roar, during acceleration and at high speeds. An air filter is provided, as well as filters in the gasoline and oiling systems, which, together, render the engine dirt-proof.

Radiator design of the new Dictator has been smartened. It resembles the radiator treatment on the new series President and Commander Eights. It is distinguished by delicately molded contours, flat radiator cap and slanting front, with large head lamps and trim fender lights.

The new Dictator Eight is offered in four body models. A smart note is found in rear quarter roof panels which give a more tailored appearance, as well as making the car appear lower, though there has been no reduction in headroom height.

The Regal model has six wire wheels and a folding luggage grid.

As in all Studebaker models, the front seat and steering column are adjustable. Upholstery is fine mohair. Heavily padded arm rests, robe and foot rail, and twin walnut ash receivers are provided in sedans.

Chevrolet Radio Broadcasts Over 100 Stations This Fall

War Veterans Who Won Government Recognition for Heroism Featured.

Within a few weeks the Chevrolet Motor Co. will go on the air over more than 100 radio stations with the first of a series of weekly broadcasts planned to continue late into the fall, R. K. White, advertising manager, announces.

The radio campaign is in addition to all other forms of advertising and promotional activities, White said.

Each week there will be broadcast the personally narrated experiences of prominent American war veterans who have received the highest honors within the power of the Government to bestow for valor in action. Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, ace of American aces, will act as host to them and will introduce them to the radio audience. Each program, to be known as the "Chevrolet Chronicles," will be of a half hour's duration.

The first of the series will be presented early in October.

The character of the programs was determined upon. White explained, after extensive research for a type of air entertainmnt which would render a real national service as well as prove instructive and entertaining.

Dodge Marathon Car, With Transitone Set, At Radio Show Here

The Dodge Brothers Mileage Marathon car, which is crossing and recrossing the continent in an attempt to pile up more mileage than any car has heretofore, visited St. Louis Friday, paying a brief visit to the Milstrand Motor Co. and the St. Louis Radio Show.

The car arrived from Springfield, Ill. ,at 11 a. m. and left at 1 p. m. for Kansas City, whence it will be driven to Texas and the Southwest. Its speedometer registered 35,055 miles. It was driven by H. L. Reynolds and H. C. Nelson was acting as A. A. A. observer. Priest will rejoin the car in Texas.

The car is equipped with a Transitone, the pioneer automobile radio. Both the driving crew of this car and Ray Priest, official A. A. A. observer, say that without radio they would have found it difficult to endure the more than 35,000 miles which the car has traveled since July 1, more mileage in less than three months than the average driver puts on his car in three years.

Last week the car paid a visit to Washington, D. C., where Priest was received by President Hoover, to whom he gave a detailed report of Federal and State highways in the 37 states visited.

New Heavy Truck Merchandising Plan By Dodge Brothers

Milstrand Motor Co. Appointed Truck Depot for St. Louis Territory.

A new national distribution arrangement known as the truck depot plan, an innovation in the merchandising of motor trucks, has just been put into effect by Dodge Brothers.

Approximately 84 truck depots are being established in the natural trade centers. The depots will be operated by well established Dodge dealers at these central points. In St. Louis, the Milstrand Motor Co. has been appointed truck depot.

This new method of distribution is intended to facilitate prompt delivery of the new Dodge heavy duty trucks to dealers and users in the trading areas, to bring adequate maintenance and parts service closer to all users, regardless of location and to provide a representative display of the wide range of Dodge truck models within easy reach of truck operators in all parts of the country.

"The development and adoption of the truck depot plan is in line with Dodge Brothers' policy of supplying the nation with motor transportation engineered, distributed and serviced to meet the modern demand for economy in time and money, and for speed and flexibility in operation," said Walter S. Graves, truck sales manager.

"A trained truck organization will be established in each of the 84 depots," he continued. "The personnel will include transportation engineers capable of analyzing hauling problems in any line of business; truck representatives schooled in the mechanical design and construction of all types of motor trucks; a service staff and parts supply identical with that formerly maintained only at the factory in Detroit.

"This plan will enable Dodge Brothers to furnish a distinctive national distribution and maintenance service and at the same time to meet the peculiar local requirements in different parts of the country."

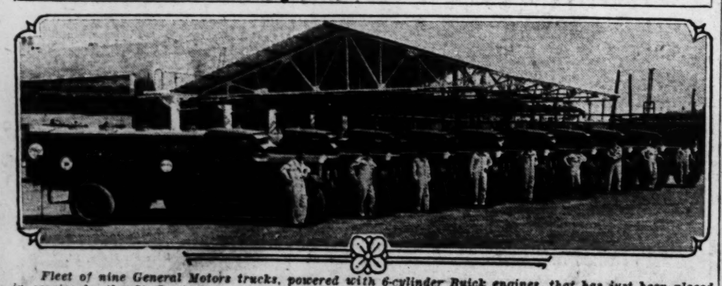
De Soto Eight Does 16.15 Miles Per Gallon On Trip of 2882 Miles

An average of 16.15 miles per gallon of gasoline while running at the rate of 40.23 miles per hour for 2882.8 miles is the latest economy record made by the new De Soto eight. Details of the test run from San Diego, Cal., to Seattle, Wash., and return have just been received by the service department of the De Soto Motor Corporation.

The run was made principally for the purpose, it is said, of testing a particular brand of gasoline and motor oil. Laboratory inspection of the oil in the crankcase showed only 1.5 per cent dilution on the outbound trip and 1.4 per cent on the return trip. Officials in charge of the test said that the design of the De Soto straight eight engine, giving complete and efficient combustion, combined with the durable qualities of the oil to establish the results obtained in the test.

The gasoline mileage was considered unusually good in view of the fast average speed of the car up and back and the fact that the trip included all kinds of driving —cities, country highways and some steep mountain grades. To maintain the average of 40.23 miles per hour for the trip, it was necessary at times, according to observers, to run with the throttle wide open. Gasoline consumption at these high speeds, naturally, was much greater than if it had been possible to drive at a slower rate.

These Big Oil Trucks Roll on Balloon Tires



Fleet of nine General Motors trucks, powered with 6-cylinder Buick engines, that has just been placed in service by the St. Louis branch of the Standard Oil Co. All have balloon tires. Two body types are used, seven tank bodies of 1000, 1200 and 1500 gallons capacity for distributing Red Crown and Ethyl gasoline, and two stake bodies for distribution of Polarine and Iso-Vis oils. These trucks are part of a fleet of 138 General Motors units bought by Standard Oil for use throughout the country.

Dan Hyland Also Takes Over Distribution of All Alemite Products.

After 18 years' occupancy of the two buildings at 3206-08 Locust street, the Stewart-Warner Sales and Service will move Sept. 25 to the corner of Thirty-third and Locust streets. This building is in direct view of Lindell boulevard, Olive street, Locust street and Washington avenue, being situated just at the beginning of the Lindell-Locust cutoff.

Dan F. Hyland, who is the general manager of the Stewart-Warner business in St. Louis, has been with that company for 20 years, coming to St. Louis from Chicago 12 years ago. Hyland is not only widely known in automobile and radio circles, but also in St. Louis civic affairs. He was twice president of the Automotive Accessory Association of St. Louis, president of the Optimists' Club and president of the Gavel Club.

In the new location all of the diverse lines of the Stewart-Warner Corporation will be handled and serviced. This includes its speedometers, vacuum tanks, windshield wipers, spotlights, horns and bumpers and the Stewart-Warner radio receivers.

Hyland also announces that the company has taken on the distribution of all of the products of the Alemite Lubricating Co. The new location will be the distribution point for the St. Louis trade territory for all of the Alemite products, such as fittings, grease and grease guns.

The rear of the new building will be fitted up as a super service station for Stewart-Warner lines and Alemiting. A large stock of Stewart-Werner parts and Alemite

J. P. Schiller New Tire Sales Chief for U. S. Rubber Co. Here

John McKee Jr., who has been district manager of tire sales for the United States Rubber Co. in the St. Louis territory, has been promoted to a similar position in the Cleveland branch of the company.

J. P. Schiller has been appointed to succeed McKee as manager of tire sales for the St. Louis district. Schiller has had 15 years' experience in the tire business, having been Pacific Coast manager for the Dayton Rubber Manufacturing Co., and president of the Dayton Rubber Co. of California. He is said to be especially acquainted with the problems of the retail tire dealer.

Chromium Radiator Guards on Grahams

All Graham standard six town and universal sedans, as well as all four-speed Graham special sixes are now being equipped with chromium plated radiator guards.

Chromium plated guards add much to the appearance of a car and protect a radiator against flying stones and minor accidents. These new guards do not interfere with the installation of shutters or automatic radiator devices.

the bantam car...smart as a new hat ...thrifty as a housewife

Women find Austin's smart lines appealing, but looking beyond, see something more... the essential good taste of its appropriateness to service.

They value the almost effortless handling that enables them to drive quickly yet without strain... the ease of parking in the tiny curb spaces of the shopping district, where others fear to tread... an economy of operation that saves two-thirds of their usual gasoline, oil, and tire expense.

For the Austin runs forty miles on a gallon of gasoline... costs less than three-quarters of a cent a mile for fuel and tires. So, many families use it as a second car... find that it actually pays for itself by sparing expensive mileage and wear and tear on the bigger car... find they can enjoy two cars at the cost of one.

The cost of the bantam Austin is but $445 at the factory. Let us show it to you at your convenience. Phone or call.

At St. Louis

THE decision of the Airport Commission to complete the experimental runway, built last year, will provide ample landing and take-off facilities at Lambert-St. Louis Field for several years.

The runway, now 1350 feet long will be extended immediately to 2000 feet at a cost of $54,000, with drainage. The airport will then have four runways meeting wind variations generally, the strips being connected with the concrete apron on the west side of the field by taxi lanes.

The commission also voted to spend $45,000 for a hangar for the Naval Reserve air unit, and directed that plans be prepared. Lieut. Frank Wells, commander of the unit, told the commission that the Navy would supply planes and equipment valued at $350,000 for training. Lieut. Wells will be assisted by six enlisted men stationed at Lambert Field.

Cent a Pound for Flight.

With the addition of a tri-motored Ford to the equipment at Curtiss-Steinberg Airport, it was announced that the rate for night sight-seeing rides will be one cent a pound for the rest of the season. Night flying trips are made Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday nights.

Woman Buys Biplane.

Miss Mary Von Mack, who is completing the transport course at Parks Air College, purchased a new Fleet biplane for her personal use. She flew the ship here from Buffalo.

Airport Engineering.

Eighty-seven engineering committees, representing a total of about 450 engineers, have been organized by the Department of Commerce to discuss problems involved in providing drainage and surfacing of airports. The St. Louis committee has held several meetings and is preparing a report.

Von Hoffmann Orders New Plane.

Bernard Von Hoffmann, president of the Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co., has ordered a new Stinson monoplane powered with a Lycoming engine for his personal use. Von Hoffmann uses a plane for business trips, and recently qualified for a private pilot's license.

Woman Plans Flight.

Miss Laura Ingalls, St. Louis record holder, departed Thursday for New York to prepare for a trans-continental flight, she expects to make from east to west in several weeks. She is scheduled to pass through St. Louis on the flight.

Air Mail Contracts Awarded.

The contract for the new Atlanta-Dallas-Los Angeles air mail route was awarded last week to Southwest Air Fast Express and the Robertson Aircraft Corporation jointly. The latter concern is a subsidiary of Universal Airlines. Erle Halliburton, head of Southwest Air Fast Express, announced a new operating company would be organized to supply the service. The rate is 40 cents a mile up to a cargo of 225 pounds with additional pay for larger loads.

Save Time and Fuel.

The recent test of the late model Ford trausport by T. A. Maddux resulted in a saving of one hour and 27 minutes in the scheduled time between Columbus, O., and Waynoka, Ok., a distance of 812 miles on an air line. The new ship, flying with a full load, gained an average of 15 miles an hour over the present schedule, resulting in a saving of 104 gallons of gasoline on the trip. The ship is powered with three 425-horsepower engines, has a top speed of 150 miles an hour.

Enrolled for Flying Courses.

G. L. Thompson arrived from Canada last week to enroll with the Universal Flying School for the limited commercial course. Berold Gehrtebeck of St. Louis enrolled for the mechanics' course.

Priest Undaunted by Crash.

Undaunted by his recent crash, the Rev. Peter Barabino, priest-aviator is discussing the purchase of a new plane. Father Barabino and his passenger escaped serious injury.

Airplane Sales.

A Robin powered with a Wright J-6 engine was delivered to Belle Fouche (S. D.) Airlines during the week.

In Tacoma recently a stock Oakland eight sedan in high gear conquered the treacherous, rutted gravel grade of the 32 per cent K street hill, a feat never before accomplished. Besides the driver, Clyde Mackin of Tacoma, the car carried one passenger, C. Val Fawcett, Tacoma City Commissioner. It "went over the top" at 12 miles per hour. The demonstration attracted a large crowd of spectators.

The hill, in addition to its steep grade and poor surfacing, presents the difficulty of an arterial stop street at its base which prevents a running start. It is a famous grade for testing the hill-climbing ability of motor cycles, but is consistently avoided by motorists.

Johnson Expedition Uses Willys-Knights In Exploring Africa

Seven Willys-Knight cars and trucks continue to be the "backbone" of transportation for the Martin Johnson expedition in Africa. Johnson has gained fame as an explorer and photographer of wild animal life. The present expedition will require about two years. Johnson is always accompanied by his wife in his African explorations.

Many Records Made By Austin Cars for Speed and Hill Climbs

"Motorists who have expressed surprise over the fact that an Austin Bantam will do 40 miles to the gallon of gasoline, 20,000 to 40,000 miles on a set of tires, and can be operated for less than three-fourths of a cent a mile, have heard nothing of records made by the car abroad.

"Take hill climbing, for instance. The expedition that set out to climb Mount Kanchenjunga in India recently used a fleet of bantam Austins to transport its goods up mountain trails. The first car to conquer South Africa's famous peak, Table Mountain, was an Austin. At the Urquiola Hill climb in Spain, in which the leading European cars competed, an Austin broke all records and won three cups.

An Austin won the Swiss Automobile Club's touring race. In the great German race, the Fahrt Durch Schliesen, Austins won first and second places.

An Austin won the Irish Independent cup at the Irish International Grand Prix with an average speed of 65.94 miles an hour. An Austin covered 200 miles at 83.53 miles per hour at the Brooklands Racing Club in England.

Admiral Byrd took a bantam to Little America with him, and Sir Hubert Wilkins used one in the Antarctic.

For years the little Austin has been the "town" car of sophisticated motorists in crowded continental cities. London, Paris, the Bois de Bologne and Unter den Linden all know it. Many continental Austin owners are still driving bantems purchased eight years ago, and use them exclusively for trips through crowded city streets.

Roland to Manage Reo Truck Sales

Harold W. Roland has been appointed manager of truck sales for the Reo Motor Car Co. Roland gives up the general sales managership and membership on the board of directors of the Ajax Rubber Co. of Racine, Wis., and the McClaren Rubber Co. of Charlotte, N. C., an Ajax subsidiary, to become associated with Reo.

After a number of years on newspapers in Detroit and Chicago, Roland became sales promotion manager for Ajax Rubber. He was soon promoted to advertising manager, then to general sales manager of both the Ajax and McClaren companies.

ment business, and they see similar business for three years ahead.

Retail business of all kinds has felt the effect of all this cash being turned loose and cash trade is reported heavier than in previous years.

Farmers as well as labor are reaping the benefits of the road construction. Land values are increasing because the paving is taking farms nearer to markets, and farm products are in demand. Iowa is not a great wheat State, but what wheat the State raised this year as harvested and out of the way before dry weather arrived. Nor was the corn crop injured nearly as badly as was at first supposed.

To date, Iowa has voted $102,600,000 in bonds for the paving of roads. These bonds were voted by the individual counties and will be paid from the gasoline tax, not by property tax. Virtually every county authorized a bond issue for this purpose.

parts for wholesale distribution will be carried in stock.

The Alemite Lubricating Co. is a subsidiary of the Stewart-Warner Corporation, hence the joining of the two in the St. Louis establishment. The territory to be handled and supplied from the St. Louis office, as announced by Ireland, includes a large part of Missouri and Illinois, Western Kentucky and parts of Arkansas.

New Type Whirlwind Heater Designed for Oldsmobile Cars

Oldsmobile engineers announce a new type car heater which they have designed specially for the Oldsmobile. Installations are now being made by all Oldsmobile dealers. The heater is constructed on the whirlwind force draft principle and supplies a constant current of warm air throughout the interior of the car, regardless of car speed or engine temperature. The efficiency of the heater does not depend upon water temperature in the cooling system, nor does it impair engine efficiency by drawing heat from the cooling system.

It quickly delivers clean heated air containing no exhaust or gas fumes or road dust and distributes it throughout the car in a uniform manner. Cold air is drawn from the floor of the car by the heater, then passed over the exhaust pipe just forward of the muffler and they expelled by a silent, electrically driven Sirocco type blower. This method keeps a constant circulation of air in the car interior.

The heater blower is on the front dash out of sight under the cowl. The blower is operated by the car battery and consumes approximately the same amount of current as does a single headlight lamp. A toggle switch, located on the bottom edge of the instrument panel, controls the heater.

The heater stove is of sheet steel three inches in diameter and 20 inches long and fastened over the exhaust pipe. The cold air intake is located on the floor of the car, adjacent to the front seat. This is connected by a flexible tube to the heater stove and another tube conveys the heated air to the blower fan.

Plymouth Cars Again In 3rd Place in U. S., Registrations Show

Registration figures from all states show Plymouth in third place in the automobile industry nationally for the second consecutive month, according to a statement authorized by F. L. Rockelman, president and general manager of Plymouth Motor Corporation.

This compares with Plymouth's rank of ninth place in the industry in July, 1929. It improved its position steadily, going into fourth place in May of this year. Even at that time such important states as Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa, Arkansas, Minnesota and Kentucky gave it third place.

Deliveries to dealers the first week in August show a substantial increase over the corresponding week last year, and Plymouth's percentage of sales in July, according to N. A. C. C. figures, was materially higher than in the same month last year.

Goodrich Won't Make General Pay Cut

In face of salary, wage and employment reduction by major companies of the rubber industry in the last two weeks, the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. of Akron, O., has just announced that there will be no general cut in salaries or wages. This information has just been received by E. R. Keimer, zone manager of Goodrich Silvertown, Inc.

Adjustments are to be made in some departments, but J. D. Tew, Goodrich president, announced, following a meeting of the board of directors of the company, that no change of policy has been made.

For September, Goodrich set up a full month's working schedule with practically no change over the August output.

Naturally, the automotive industry here is watching with keen interest the projected inauguration of tire distribution and service by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana. The new departure goes into effect on Oct. 15 throughout the Middle West. What effect it will have on the general setup in the retail of automotive accessories and service executives here are not prepared to say precisely.

Increase in Fisk Tire Business in The St. Louis District

According to H. L. Flood, district manager of the Fisk Tire Co., the total volume of business for the company in the St. Louis district in the first eight months of 1930 showed a very large increase over the corresponding period of 1929.

"In view of slackened conditions in the first eight months of this year as compared with the similar period in 1929, this increase is particularly gratifying," Flood said: The increase he attributed to the new and advanced air flight style of tire introduced by Fisk, an increased dealer organization and an increased consumer demand for the new tire, and, third, an increased advertising budget planned as a step in a business stimulation program during the slackening of business and an aid in return to normalcy. Normalcy, so far as the Fisk Tire Co. is concerned, not only has been regained, but former sales volume in the St. Louis area, at least, has been increased, Flood stated.

The Johns-Manville Firefighters will go on the air for the first time at 6:30 next Saturday night over the Columbia chain. Action of the weekly broadcasts will center around a city fire station and a group of "smoke-eaters." Part of the programs will be devoted to the dangers of fighting fires and part to humorous incidents in the fire house. "Smoky Dan," the story-telling fire chief; Peter Harlan, the recruit, afflicted with a cornet and an approaching marriage; "Tiny Harper," an amiable giant; "Big" Eddie Small, satelite of "Tiny," and Jimmy Baxter, a neighborhood lad whose ambition is to be a fireman, will be the principal characters.

A new Canadian Pacific Musical Crusaders series will begin Oct. 5 over the WJZ chain of the NBC, presumably including KWK, and will be broadcast Sundays from 3:15 to 3:45 p. m. Listeners will be supposed to follow the adventures and experiences of a party of travelers bound around the world on one of the railroad's liners. The characters will include "Mr. Preston," an American business man; his wife and daughter, and Maj. Peter Kemp, formerly a British army officer. "Prof. Cadenza and his Musical Crusaders," a mixed octet, who are supposed to be on the ship singing their way around the world, and an orchestra and organ also will be heard. The cast has been chosen from the Alfred Heather Light Opera company of Toronto, Canada, and the programs will originate in Toronto, CKGW of that city acting as key station.

A radio-equipped fire truck will be put into service in Cleveland this fall. Safety officials have found radio so valuable to the Cleveland Police Department that they have decided to extend its use to the Fire Department. The city was one of the pioneers in the use of radio-quipped police "cruisers." The first set has been ordered for a hook and ladder truck.

WBAL, a 10,000-watt station at Baltimore, Md., which shares the 1060kc channel with the 50,000-watt WTIC at Hardford, Conn., has joined the rush for maximum broadcasting power.

Alexander Woolcott, a widely-known New York critic, is to do a weekly book review "column" over the Columbia chain on Tuesdays, from 5:45 to 6 p. m., beginning this week.

Big Speaker at Radio Show Has Range of 57 to 16,000 Cycles

One of the most interesting things at the St. Louis Radio Show was the huge, steel, twin aircolumn speaker which was mounted in the balcony and carried most of the burden of making proceedings in the crystal studio and on the stage audible to the audience.

Ordinarily, this speaker, which was designed for use at airports, musement parks, theaters, ballrooms and other large auditoriums and stadiums, is operated with four Western Electric power units. With the four 25-watt units going full blast, the speaker is capable of making music heard to a distance to four to 4½ miles above street noises. It was operated at the radio show with only two units working, these being attached to the end of one of the twin aircolumns, and then it was necessary to hold the volume down to a third or so.

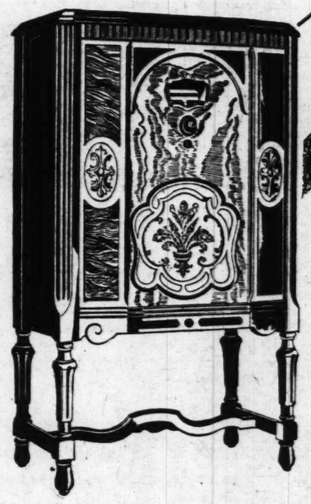
The twin aircolumns are each 14 feet long, and come together in an opening three feet 11 inches by 5 feet two inches high. The speaker "cut-off" is at 57 cycles, so bass notes are reproduced powerfully, especially as the Western Electric amplifier than was used with it at the show has a range of 16 to 16,000 cycles. The speaker is built of steel, a quarter of an inch thick, and weighs 350 pounds. Because of its shape, curved and recurved, it can be put in a shallow space. Its angle of coverage is 100 degrees.

Donald H. C. O'Neil of the Mueller-O'Neil Co., who installed and operated the speaker and amplifier, said that the big speaker would go up to 16,000 cycles. The Western Electric amplifier he used consisted of three resistance coupled stages feeding into a push pull stage that, in turn, fed into a push pull stage of two 50-watt tubes using 700 to 1250 volts on the plates.

Robert Betts Sings In St. Louis This Week

Robert Betts, staff tenor for KMOX two years ago, will return for a brief engagement this week. He will sing Friday, Sunday, Tuesday and Saturday evenings of this week. Betts is a St. Louisan. He won a Juilliard Foundation scholarship and has had a season in Berlin studying opera. He also has sung in Columbia chain broadcasts. He expects to return to New York this fall to join the Little Theater Opera Company having a contract to sing four operas, "The Beggar Student, "Orpheus," "The Bartered Bride" and "The Waltz Dream." • • • The KMOX String Ensemble will broadcast a concert every Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, playing both popular and classical music.

Your Radio is old-fashioned without this 4-IN-ONE DIAL



The Brunswick's amazing Uni-Selector takes the place of 4 controls on ordinary sets!

Think of it—a radio with a single dial! With one magic sweep Brunswick has obliterated the confusing series of knobs that clutter the cabinets of other sets, and substituted the sensational new UNI-SELECTOR.

You'll be proud as Punch of this new device, which no owner of any other set can boast—proud of the immensely improved appearance, vain of its magic ease of operation.

To turn the set on—to tune in stations—to adjust volume higher or lower — to set for local or distant stations—or to turn the set off—just turn the Uni-Selector.

Seven separate functions — everything essential to the operation of the set—concentrated in one control!

Radio comes of age in Brunswick's 1931 models.

The Uni-Selector is just one of many revolutionary refinements—including the All-Armored Chassis, Rigid Tuning Scale, and Tone Control—which protect the new Brunswick from the "growing pains" that made former radio styles so fleeting.

Here at last is a mature, complete, finished instrument, prepared in advance for future changes in radio design. It is the one set you can buy today with confidence that years from now it will still be "the best that money can buy"—in tone, in power, in selectivity, in convenience.

"Sample" it before another day goes by!

ONE OF THE YEAR'S MOST POPULAR MODELS

Other models include the Highboy, Model 22, at $170; and for Radio plus Records, the Radio-with-Panatrope, Model 31, at $185.

Tube equipment of all models includes 4 Screen Grid Tubes. All prices less tubes. D. C. models also available.

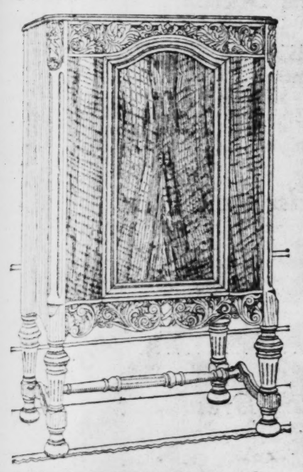
FADA REPRODUCES



★ The New Fada 44—Sliding Door Lowboy, $188 without tubes

Ordinary Set No. 1

Ordinary Set No. 2
Leaves the rich mellow low notes out of reproduction and over-emphasizes the high notes.

Ordinary Set No. 3
Poor reproduction in high and low notes, with emphasis on middle range. Good on speech, inefficient on music.

FADA SETS
Fada's famous tone quality has been the envy of the industry and the joy of Fada owners for years. Every note, every musical instrument, every shading of tone, high notes, low notes, middle notes... all... all are present and accounted for when you listen to a Fada.

TONE quality is present, musically speaking, when all notes from treble to bass that the ear can detect, are evenly reproduced. Some radios slight the high notes of the piccolo; others ignore the low vibrations of the bass viol—what they give the listener is a shabby, short-changing imitation of the real thing.

Some ears may prefer these unfaithful reproductions — Fada does not care. What the composer wrote, what the studio broadcasts, Fada proposes to reproduce — and painstakingly does. The result is true, brilliant tone, over the whole musical scale—the only tone that gives pleasure to musically sensitive ears. You hear all that is broadcast on a Fada.

ONLY THE NEW FADAS HAVE ALL THESE 14 FEATURES

★ Noise Filter
★ Finer Tone

Greatly Improved Radio Sets Found In St. Louis Show

That the new receivers are by far the most efficient and attractive yet produced seemed to be the consensus of visitors at the radio show in the Coliseum the past week. It was evident, as never before, that listeners who are using old sets are depriving themselves of the tremendous improvement in tone and freedom from annoying "cross talk" and other interference that these new receivers have brought.

It also was manifest that the trade, generally, is looking forward with confidence to steadily improving business conditions.

Tone control, remote control devices, automatic volume control, midget type sets, screen grid circuits—all these attracted much attention. But, above everything else, it was commented that the receivers, as a whole, were more attractive and showed plainly evidence of finer designing.

Radio Dealers in Session.

Plans for observance of "national radio week," beginning tomorrow, and for exceptional broadcast programs throughout the country, were detailed to radio dealers Wednesday noon at a luncheon meeting at Hotel Jefferson held under the auspices of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association.

The plans were told by H. G. Erstrom, executive vice president of the Federated Radio Trades Association and the Radio Wholesalers' Association, the latter having 225 leading jobbers as members. Incidentally, Erstrom referred to Harold J. Wrape of St. Louis, as the "father" of both associations. Wrape was the first president of the F. R. T. A., back in 1926.

Dan F. Hyland, chairman of the Convention Committee for the radio show, presided at the luncheon. Robert E. Lee, secretary-manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, told the dealers that all they and other business men had to do was to get out and work and prosperity would soon be back in full flood. Harry Mammen of the Motor Acceptance Corporation discussed the outlook optimistically from the finance companies' viewpoint. Harry T. Bussman, twice president of the Advertising Club of St. Louis and of the Sales Managers' Bureau, spoke pithily on selling and salesmanship.

Set Has 72-Pound Power Unit.

Six stages of radio frequency amplification, giving really great amplification ahead of the power detector, but so devised as to pass along a beautifully clear and true signal from the aerial, distinguish one of the receivers exhibited at the radio show—the Continental Star Raider. The six stages, three tuned and three untuned, are built in a variation of band pass tuning called the Technidyne circuit.

The massiveness of this receiver is partially indicated by the fact that the power unit alone weighs 72 pounds. The shielding is of heavy cast aluminum. Equally massive in construction is the 12-inch dynamic speaker and all mechanism connected with it. There is constant voltage regulation, two ballast tubes being used. The audio amplifier ends in a push-pull stage of two 50-type superpower tubes. A phonograph pick-up jack is standard. Tests in St. Louis have shown this receiver to be exceptionally powerful, selective and true of tone. It was exhibited at the show by the Lammert Furniture Co., distributer.

New!
ATWATER KENT RADIO
with Tone Control
—four definite shadings of the Golden Voice

MODEL 70—Lowboy. Finished in American walnut. Matched butt walnut front panels and apron. $119, less tubes.

The New Exclusive
QUICK-VISION DIAL
—with all stations right before you all the time—gets the station you want, instantly, easily, accurately. See how widely separated the kilocycle channels are—evenly spaced from end to end—no bunching of stations. Note the big, legible figures, fully illuminated—easy to read as a clock.

MODEL 74—Table. Finished on all four sides. It may thus be placed anywhere in the room. $125, less tubes.

Prices slightly higher west of the Rockies and in Canada

JUST a touch of your fingers and you bring forward the rippling, glittering notes of piccolo, flute, violin, or the pearly tones of the soprano.

A slight turn and you emphasize the rich, warm, middle tones of 'cello, trombone, oboe and baritone.

Another turn and you add still more depth and resonance. A fourth turn and you emphasize the rich, resounding notes of tuba, bass viol and bassoon.

Self-expression in radio music: That's what the perfected Atwater Kent Tone Control gives you!

MODEL 75—Radio-Phonograph Combination. Finished in American walnut. Ample and accessible record compartment. $195, less tubes.

This new Atwater Kent—new inside and out—is the greatest combination of transcendent performance and harmonious appearance—of superlative value and moderate price—that has ever come out of the great Atwater Kent factory.

When you see these handsome new models at your dealer's, you realize that here at last is the radio you like to live with. When you hear its Golden Voice, you know that here is the tone quality you've waited and hoped for. When you touch the Tone Control, you have your choice of four distinct shadings of the Golden Voice. This feature also means quiet operation.

When you consider that for eight successive years Atwater Kent has led the whole field with always the most advanced, always the most modern and always the most dependable instrument in radio, you recognize that here is the radio to serve you through the years—the radio to be proud of. And attractive time payments make it amazingly easy to own.

PAT HARRISON OPENS DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 20.—Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi sarcastically paid his respects to three Missouri Republican leaders in opening the Democratic campaign here tonight. The three are Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, Chairman Arthur M. Curtis of the Republican State Committee, and Senator Roscoe C. Patterson.

"I was amused to read in the papers this morning," the speaker said, "that Arthur M. Hyde said he had discovered that the low price of wheat and the depression in which the farmer finds himself was due to the fact that recently the Soviet Government of Russia had sold 5,000,000 bushels of wheat short on the Chicago market. Why, bless your souls, the average amount of wheat sold each year on the Chicago market is 19,840,000,000 bushels. And the Secretary of Agriculture would delude the voters of this country into believing that this drop in the bucket would break the market."

Referring to Chairman Curtis, Harrison read three slogans on the letter heads used recently in appeals to party workers throughout the state: "Boost Hoover," "Talk Tammany" and "Continue Prosperity."

"That 'continue prosperity,' the Mississippian said, "is the best of all. I have no doubt that Mr. Curtis is an estimable and affable gentleman, but the man who talks about continuing the kind of prosperity we have now is no politician." The letters, the speaker said, were dated Sept. 6.

The reference to Senator Patterson also was brief. "Senator Patterson," said the Senator, "for a while was a member of the 'Young Turks.' The 'Young Turks' included about a half a dozen of the younger Republicans in the Senate who felt that things were not being accomplished fast enough and were threatening to break away from the Old Guard. But when President Hoover cracked his whip, Senator Patterson fell in line—and he has been there ever since."

The Mississippian dwelt largely upon the tariff, asserting that it had been framed to please local interests of a small group of Senators rather than to benefit the country as a whole, and that as a result of the tariff barriers thus erected against foreign countries, large industries in this country could not sell their surpluses abroad and thus were compelled to decrease their forces and thus reduce their payrolls. He also scored the Republicans for failure to continue prosperity as had been promised.

Charles W. Dickey, chairman of the Greene County Democratic Committee, presided. The rally was held in the Shrine Mosque, with an attendance of more than 2500.

TESTIFIES RUTH ALEXANDER KNEW SHE WAS TAKING CHANCE

T. Claude Ryan Tells of Overloading of Plane; Letters Written Before Previous Flight.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 20.—Ruth Alexander, aviatrix killed here Thursday after starting a one-stop flight to New York, died of multiple injuries incurred when her plane fell because of its overloaded condition and the intense fog, a Coroner's jury decided today.

T. Claude Ryan, veteran flyer and builder of Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis, "would have hesitated to fly that morning," he testified at the inquest. Ryan was at the field when the aviatrix took the air on her last flight.

The gas load of 117 gallons carried was more than the ship was designed for, Ryan stated.

"She was well aware she was taking a chance and was willing to take it," he said.

Mrs. Gertrude Kumm, a personal friend of Mrs. Alexander, testified letters found among the latter's effects seeming to show a premonition of death, were written before a flight to Vancouver, B. C., and return.

SONS OF OLD ALLIES RIVALS FOR WISCONSIN GOVERNORSHIP

C. E. Hammersley Whose Father Was Elder LaFollette's Patron, Runs Against Philip LaFollette.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 20.—"It may be," said E. C. Hammersley 40 years ago, "that this young LaFollette fellow can win. I'll help him." So he took Robert M. LaFollette, just out of college into the country around Madison on his horse-buying expedition. In the fall, the future "Fighting Bob" was elected District Attorney of Dane County.

Today Charles E. Hammersley, son of the elder LaFollette's patron, is running for Governor as the Democratic nominee against Philip LaFollette, Republican, son of "Fighting Bob."

THREE NEWSPAPERS IN ROCKFORD, ILL., MERGED

Corporation, Headed by Congresswoman McCormick, to Control Consolidated Properties.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Sept. 20. — Merger of this city's three newspapers under the ownership of the Rockford Consolidated Newspapers, Inc., with Congresswoman Ruth Hanna McCormick as president, was announced today.

UNIVERSAL LIFE COMPANY TEMPORARY RECEIVER DENIED

Judge Fitzsimmons Points Out Negotiations Are Under Way for Sale of Company.

A temporary receivership for the Universal Life Insurance Co. of Missouri, which was asked by Herbert J. Schaffner, 4212 West Pine boulevard, a stockholder, was denied yesterday by Circuit Judge Fitzsimmons.

Schaffner, a lineman employed by the Union Electric Light & Power Co., is the owner of 113 shares and also the subscriber for an additional 500 shares, for which he agreed to pay $30 a share. For the latter stock he advanced $3000cash or its equivalent and executed a note of $12,000 for the balance. He alleged that a salesman misrepresented the value of the stock and the prospect of dividends. His attorney, Ernest E. Baker, asserted no dividends were paid and in addition to a receivership the court was asked to require the company to refund the down payment and cancel the note.

Several months ago the State Insurance Department took over the Universal company, but later turned the property back to its officers, who stated that negotiations were under way to sell the business. Testimony showed that the company at present is not issuing new policies but operates with headquarters in the Holland Building at nominal expense for the handling of claims and premium payments. It was stated it has about $4,000,000 insurance in force, with assets aggregating $300,000.

In granting the motion Judge Fitzsimmons said in view of the fact negotiations were in progress for the sale of the business, a receivership at present might not help the situation. He added that the plea for a receiver could be renewed later when the case is set for trial on its merits.

Vriski Murder Case Up This Week.

FAYETTE, Mo., Sept. 20.—Judge A. W. Walker of the Howard County Circuit Court said this morning, after the court had adjourned until Monday, that he would consider the case of Tony Vriski, Boonville Reformatory trusty, who killed Superintendent of Schools Chrane of Boonville.

8000 DAIRY SHOW DINNER INVITATIONS

Women Also Asked to Attend This Year — Banquet to Be Held Sept. 29.

More than 8000 men and women have been invited to the second annual "dairy show boosters' dinner," to be held at The Arena Monday night, Sept. 29. Only men were invited to the dinner last year, but the invitations sent out this time include women.

Two hundred waiters will begin serving the guests, seated at 100 tables, each 50 feet long, and a huge circular speakers' table, at 6:30 p. m. With women guests invited, it is expected that approximately 6000 persons will attend. The speakers' table will seat 350.

Eight thousand feet of table linen will be required for the banquet boards. Food will be prepared at catering establishments, then taken to The Arena by truck, and placed in ovens to be kept hot. Twenty cooks will be on hand to supervise the warming, and give final touches.

Entertainment features will be a milking contest between Charles M. Hay, Thomas W. Garland and other prominent men connected with the dairy show. A reception committee of 100 men and women will greet guests and direct them to the tables.

Admission tickets for the dinner, the cost of which is borne by the promoters of the dairy show, will be mailed out as soon as acceptance cards accompanying the invitations are returned. The committee in charge includes Ben G. Brinkman, H. M. Bixby, W. R. Cox, Edward A. Faust, F. W. A. Vesper, C. E. Williams, Woodson K. Woods, A. W. Ketchum, and M. J. Pickering.

E. ST. LOUIS OFFICER CLEARED OF KILLING BROTHER-IN-LAW

St. Clair Grand Jury Returns No True Bill in Case of Walter Vincent.

The St. Clair County grand jury yesterday returned a no true bill in the case of Walter Vincent, 1124 St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis, a park district policeman, for killing his brother-in-law, Bert Woods, 47 years old, 1003 Gaty avenue, the night of May 22 last.

Evidence showed that Woods, armed with two revolvers, had gone to Vincent's home and threatened him with death, whereupon Vincent, in fear of his life, shot Woods. East St. Louis police testified Woods had a police record, and the grand jury absolved Vincent from blame.

FERGUSON PHYSICIAN WEDS

Dr. M. F. Hagerty Marries Woman He Met in Europe.

Dr. Meade Eugene Hagerty and Miss Minerva McWilliams of Fort Williams, Canada, were married at 9 o'clock last night at the home of the physician, 201 South Florissant boulevard, Ferguson. Rev. O. A. Bowers, pastor of the Ferguson Methodist Church, officiated.

Dr. Hagerty, who divorced his first wife in June, 1926, declaring her daily visits to clairvoyants had broken up his home, met his bride in Europe two years ago. Dr. Hagerty is 40 and his bride 30 years old.

DRY ADMINISTRATOR LYLE'S CASE GOES TO THE JURY

He and Three Former Aids Accused of Corruption and Bribery at Seattle, Wash.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 20.—The case of Roy C. Lyle, former prohibition administrator, and three former assistants, charged with corruption and bribery, went to a Federal jury late today. Other defendants are William M. Whitney, former assistant administrator, and Earl Corwin and R. L. Fryant, former agents. The case was submitted to the jury after six weeks of testimony.

Judge Frank H. Norcross, visiting jurist from Nevada, charged the jurymen to use the utmost care in deciding this case, which he said was of "more than ordinary importance."

The prohibition officials were specifically charged with violation of the prohibition, smuggling and tariff laws and with accepting bribes to influence their official acts.

Judge Norcross instructed the jury to disregard "any evidence the defendants were too zealous" in the performance of their duties and to give the defendants the benefit of the doubt in considering their efforts to establish alibis in connection with offenses charged in one or more of the overt acts named in the indictments.

FINDS TWO DEAD, ONE HURT IN WRECKED CAR IN RAVINE

Motorist in Second Accident, Discovers Bodies of Youths Near Hunter, Kan.

By the Associated Press.

SALINA, Kan., Sept. 20.—Three youths who plunged over an embankment into Wilcox Creek six miles north of Hunter in a motor car last Thursday night were found today, two of them dead and the other unconscious, by a motorist who met with an accident at the same place last night.

The dead are Lewis Churchill, son of Sheriff Churchill of Phillips County, and Virgil Eldredge of Phillipsburg. J. S. Limboucker, son of the Marshal at Downs, was taken from the wreckage of the motor car to a Beloit hospital. A son of Ben Leach of Hunter abandoned his motor car near the scene last night and discovered the bodies and the injured youth under the overturned car when he went to recover his car this morning.

INCREASE IN PHONE RATES DENIED BECAUSE OF DROUTH

Public Service Commission Uses This as Grounds for Clarence, Mo., Ruling.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Sept. 20.—General business depression in the country and drouth conditions in the vicinity of Clarence, Mo., in particular, are the grounds of denial today by the Missouri Public Service Commission of an application by the Western Telephone Corporation of Missouri for a telephone rate increase in Clarence.

The company, with the approval of about 20 of the 472 subscribers, proposed to improve some of its facilities in Clarence, and to increase rates sufficiently to yield a fair return upon the cost of improvements. About 90 subscribers opposed the rate increase, contending the present facilities and service were adequate. The commission held the evidence showed the present service was reasonably adequate and efficient.

CARDS WIN AND LOSE IN TWO GAMES WITH THE PHILLIES, GAIN GROUND AS BOTH CUBS AND ROBINS MEET DEFEAT

Tommy Armour's 135 Leads St. Louis Open

DISPLACES GULDAHL AFTER 36 HOLES; JOHN MANION LOW AMONG ST. LOUISANS; EVENT ENDS TODAY

By W. J. McGoogan.

Tommy Armour, black scot of Orchard Lake, Mich., American professional golf champion took the lead for the first half of the $10,000 St. Louis open golf tournament at Sunset Hill Country Club yesterday and became an outstanding favorite to win when he posted a second round score of 68, which added to his 67 for the first round gave him 135 for the 36 holes.

At the conclusion of 36 holes, the half way mark of the tournament, the following were the 10 leaders:

Tommy Armour	67-68—135
Walter Hagen	69-68—137
Ralph Guldahl	66-73—139
Ed Williams	71-69—140
Al Espinosa	71-69—140
Johnny Manion	71-70—141
Abe Espinosa	69-72—141
Clarke Morse	74-69—143
Harry Cooper	67-76—143
Leo Diegel	70-73—143

Armour displaced Ralph Guldahl the sensational 18-year-old professional of Dallas, Tex., who turned in a 66 for the first round and added 73 for the second for a total of 139.

Walter Hagen, who finished his first round in 69, went around yesterday afternoon in 68, which gave him a total for the two days of 137, two strokes behind Armour and puts him in second place.

The professional champion will contest the final 36 holes today with the 64 players who made the lowest scores in the first two rounds. Today's play will be 18 holes, starting about 9 o'clock this morning, and 18 this afternoon, the final 18 getting under way about 2 o'clock.

Armour played sterling golf yesterday. He did no one thing exceptionally well, but he was driving, approaching and putting with perfection, as may well be imagined when his score of four strokes under par is considered. For the two days, Tommy was nine strokes under par.

He had six birdies on the 18-hole journey and was over par a stroke on one hole, the 220-yard sixth, when he was short of the green with his tee shot, chipped on and took two putts. He might well have had two more birdies, for his putts for birdies on the ninth and fifteenth holes just rimmed the cup.

Armour reserved his most spectacular golf for the eighteenth, where he gave the fans a fine exhibition. His drive was hooked into the trees at the left of the fairway and the only thing he could do was to put his second straight out into the fairway. He did that, ran his approach shot up close to the cup and sank the putt for a par four.

Armour did not make any exceptionally long putts. So accurate were his approaches that he didn't have to.

Guldahl started out in the morning with the first large gallery of the day. Perhaps the gallery had They're Gaining Momentum.

CAN the Cardinals beat the Athletics if they meet in the world series? That's the question fans are trying to answer as the approaching finish of the National League race makes it more and more evident that the Redbirds will face the Mackmen in the season's grand finale.

The prejudice against the National League's candidates left by three successive post-season defeats at the hands of the Yankees and Mackmen, and especially the convincing manner in which those defeats were administered, have imbued many with the thought that the National is a weaker organization. The professional odds makers have also become obsessed with the view that the Athletics can smack any National League club into quick defeat.

But don't be misled by the fact that American League clubs have won 12 out of the 13 world series games played in the past three years, or the fact that the Pirates and the Cardinals in successive years were beaten in four straight games.

The conditions under which the Cardinals came to the front late this season indicate that it has a splendid chance to take the measure of the mighty White Elephants, despite Mahout Mack's experience and capable strategy.

Favorable Facts.

They have a batting average of .310 to the Athletics' .293—a margin of 17 points.

In fewer games, the Redbirds have made 113 more hits and 17 more runs than the Mackmen.

They will take the field with more capable pitchers, who can be used in rotation than the Athletics.

They have the confidence lent by a splendid final stretch drive, during which they have played at the rate of about .800 in games won.

CUB OWNERS UNDECIDED ON RE-ENGAGING JOE M'CARTHY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—William Wrigley Jr., owner and William L. Veeck, president of the Cubs, have not decided if Joe McCarthy will be re-engaged as manager of the club next year.

Taking cognizance of rumors concerning status of the team manager today, Veeck said:

"I realize the biggest question in the minds of Cub fans now is whether McCarthy will be retained. I'd like to relieve their minds, but I can't do it now. When a decision is made I'll let it be known promptly."

Owner Wrigley's opinion was virtually the same. He said he admired McCarthy but 'wouldn't say whether he will manage the club next year."

McCarthy's contract will expire Jan. 1, and both Owner Wrigley and President Veeck insisted nothing would be done about the problem until that time. McCarthy has been manager of the Cubs five years, having taken charge in 1926.

The club officials said they have abandoned hope for the club to win the National League championship, and attributed the team's failure to repeat largely to injuries and misfortunes suffered from time to time during the campaign.

The death of Hal Carlson, injuries to Rogers Hornsby, Charlie Grimm, Lester Bell, Riggs Stephenson, Charlie Root and Fred Blake were misfortunes impossible to surmount, Wrigley and Veeck said.

"I'll admit we probably will lose the pennant," Veeck said. "For a while it seemed as if we would make it, but no one will deny that the Cubs have had a lot of bad luck all season. Think of the loss of Carlson, Hornsby, Bell, Root, Grimm, Stephenson and Blake."

Cards to Accept No More Requests For Series Tickets

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last night by Bill Dewitt, treasurer of the Cardinals, that the club would consider no more applications for tickets for world series games.

Letters making request for tickets are thrown into a pile and a drawing made, and the mail has been so heavy that officials of the club decided to disregard all orders arriving after last night.

DAVE DANFORTH FANS 20 MEN FOR A RECORD

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 20.—In an International League game against Rochester tonight, Dave Danforth, Buffalo pitcher, broke all known records for strikeouts by fanning 20 of the batters who faced him. The nearest approach to Danforth's total, according to the record books, was jotted down by Charles Sweeney, pitching for providence in 1884, when he forced 19 opponents to whiff the ozone.

The modern big league record of 16 strikeout victims was held by four immortals of the game — Mathewson, Rucker, Hahn and Wadell. Danforth surpassed by three victims the International League record held by Leroy Hermann of the Reading Keys and Lefty Grove, famed curver of the Philadelphia Athletics. Hermann set his record of 17 only a few weeks ago in a night game, while Grove's mark was notched under daylight conditions as a member of the seven-time champion Baltimore Orioles.

RICHARDS BEATS KOZELUH FOR PRO TENNIS TITLE

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 20.—With a brilliant volleying attack, that recalled his amateur days, Vincent Richards today won the professional lawn tennis championship dethroning Karel Kozeluh of Czecho-Slovakia. The American scored his victory in four sets, 2-6; 10-8, 6-3, 6-4.

While none too steady at times, Richards was always able to rise to the occasion after dropping the first set. His cross courts, sharply angled, had Kozeluh completely mastered in the closing sets. Kozeluh lobbed in a sensational manner but Richards made brilliant recoveries while it was the European's lob out of the court that gave Richards the first set and the match.

After losing the first set, Richards came back with an array of shots that could not be denied. His withering volleys soon ran out them atch to give Richards back the title which the Czecho-Slovakian took from his in a five-set final last year. The year before Richards defeated Kozeluh to gain the title.

JOE HAUSER BOOSTS HOME RUN TOTAL TO 63

BALTIMORE, Sept. 20. — Joe Hauser, Baltimore first baseman, hit his sixty-second and sixty-third home runs of the season today as the Orioles defeated Newark at Newark, 5 to 1, and brought to three his margin over the record set by Babe Ruth in 1927.

The International League season ends tomorrow with a double-header at Newark. Today's victory clinched second place for Baltimore. Rochester already has won the pennant.

The Internaltonal season comprises 168 games and the American League but 154, but Hauser equaled Ruth's record of 60 in his one hundred and fifty-fourth game and bettered that mark three games later.

"Bucky" Harris Signs to Manage Tigers in 1931

DETROIT, Sept. 20.—Stanley R. "Bucky" Harris will pilot the Detroit Tigers in the 1931 American League campaign.

Announcement was made by the Tiger management today that the young manager had signed a contract for his third year.

Harris came to Detroit in 1929 from Washington, where he had piloted the Senators to two pennants and to one world championship.

TOLAN WINS TWO DASHES IN CANADIAN MEET

By the Associated Press.

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 20.—Eddie Tolan, Negro sprinter from the University of Michigan, captured the 100 and 220 yard dashes at a track and field carnival conducted by the Hamilton Olympic Club here today.

Tolan defeated Leigh Miller of Hamilton by three yards in the century, which he covered in 10 seconds flat over a water-soaked track and into a head wind. Tolan ran the 220 in 22 2-10 seconds.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20.—Ray Benge outpitched Bill Hallahan this afternoon to give the Phillies of Burt Shotten an even break in a double-header and delayed the Cardinals in their drive to clinch the 1930 championship of the National League, but as the Braves kindly nosed out the Cubs and the Pirates trounced the Robins, Gabby Street and his men gained half a game on their nearest rivals.

Flint Rhem, making his first appearance on the hill since his Baron Munchausen adventures with the whisky-pouring banditti of New York, silenced the Philadelphia bats in the first game and a Cardinal uprising in the seventh inning netted seven runs and gave Rhem his seventh straight victory, 9 to 3.

Hallahan didn't have his usual strikeout stuff and the Phillies overcame a three-run lead by scoring once in the fifth and twice in the sixth, and then took advantage of a wild throw by Bill to break the tie and win in the ninth, 4 to 3.

The Cardinals now are three full games ahead of the Robins and Cubs, and each of the three contending teams has six more games to play.

The Redbirds can get no worse than a tie if they win three of their remaining games and the Cubs and Robins win six straight. If the Cubs and Robins each lose one more game, the Cards can clinch the flag by taking the remaining two games from the Phillies and one of the four scheduled with the Pirates at Sportsman's Park.

That Defeat.

Taking up the defeat in the second game, because Cardinal defeats are not commonplace these days, Benge deserved his victory. Time and again the Redbirds had men in scoring position and the stands crowded from end to end hundreds, hanging from the rafters, were yelling that the big parade was starting. But each time Benge was good enough to stop the Cardinals and they did not score after the fifth frame.

Singles by Frisch, Bottomley and Hafey produced a run in the first inning and the Cardinals added two more in the fifth on singles by Hallahan and Douthit, Adams' infield out, Frisch's sacrifice fly and a pop double to left by Bottomley.

Hallahan, aided by a double play in the second inning and another in the fourth, held the Phils scoreless until the fifth. Then Rensa led off with a single to right and Sherlock pumped a double against the right-field wall. Thevenow lined to Frisch, and on Benge's grounder to Adams, Rensa was nailed at the plate. Brickell, however, who had struck out twice, was being taunted by the fans as swinging for exercise, when he popped a single to left to score Sherlock.

Douthit Makes Brilliant Catch.

Pennant Ifs

ALTHOUGH losing the second game of yesterday's double-header to the Phillies, the Cardinals increased their lead and made it just a bit harder for the Robins and Cubs to catch them. Each team now has but six contests to play before the curtain is run down next Sunday.

If the Cardinals break even in their remaining six contests and finish with 90-64 for the campaign, the Robins and Cubs to even tie would have to win six in a row.

Thus, if the Cardinals win four more games, the Robins and Cubs will have absolutely no chance.

The Cardinals have two games remaining with the Phillies and four with Pittsburg. The Robins have one each with the Pirates, Giants and Phillies and three with the Braves, while Chicago has two with Boston and four with the Reds.

The Cardinals have won 10 out of 13 on the present trip, and since Aug. 9, the record is 34 victories against nine defeats, a winning percentage of .791.

By Herman Wecke.

Walter Stewart, ably assisted by a quartet of graduates from the Texas League, handed the champion Athletics, a 4 to 1 defeat in the first game of the Browns semi-final series at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon. In scoring the victory, Stewart gained his season's objective, inasmuch as it was his 20th conquest against but 12 defeats for the year.

But Stewart would not have won but for those Wichita Falls boys. They played an important part in the trimming of Rube Walberg, Connie Mack's southpaw pitcher. For 5 1-3 innings Walberg pitched hitless ball. Then Stewart singled and the boys from Wichita Falls showed their stuff. Levey and Storti banged out singles and Burns coaxed a pass with the bases filled. Storti's single drove in the tying run and that paved to Burns forced in the tally which would have been enough to give Stewart the victory.

Stewart Yields Only 6 Hits.

Stewart twirled a brilliant game to hang up his 20th triumph of the year. He held Mack's sluggers to half a dozen hits and in only one inning, the sixth, when the champions scored their lone run, did he allow as many as two. He had well-nigh perfect control, walking only one batter. And Stewart picked on no cripples, inasmuch as Mack had all his regulars with the exception of Dykes, Bishop and Cochrane in the battle at the start.

The left-hander had real opposition from Walberg. Mack's southpaw had one bad round, the sixth, when the Wichita Falls boys went to work and that proved enough to give him a defeat. He worked the full game, it being the first complete battle he has pitched in many days for the present world champions.

A Pitchers' Battle.

Stewart and Walberg engaged in a sensational hurling duel for the first five rounds, during which time neither scored. The Browns' left hander worked out of a tight spot in the third when with McNair on third and Schang on second, he forced Simmons to pop to Storti and then struck out Jimmy Foxx. Meanwhile Walberg stopped the Browns without a safety.

The Mackmen finally broke through for a run in the sixth, when Simmons bounced a double off the right field wll to strt the inning. Foxx popped out and Moore went down on a fine stop by Kress, but Haas got a hit on his smash which Storti fielded behind second but on which he could not recover in time to make a play, Simmons trotting home.

Then Killefer's men decided it was time to show the 1930 champions of the league a few tricks. One out, Stewart singled for the first hit off Walberg. Levey beat out a slow roller down the third-base line and Storti rapped a real hit to left, to score Stewart. Goslin walked and the bases were filled. Kress hit at the first one and popped to Williams. Burns was patient and walked and Levey scored. Schulte's smash to center scored Storti and Goslin, and Killefer's men were three lengths to the good.

Brownie Notes

MANAGER KILLEFER will send Sam Gray and George Blaeholder against the Athletics in today's doubleheader. George Earnshaw and Bill Shores are due for the 1930 American League champions. The first game will start at 1:30 o'clock.

The final Ladies day of the season, coupled with the fact that the world champions were on exhibition, served to bring out a Saturday crowd of 3500 persons.

Recruits were on parade. The Browns showed Levey, Burns, Storti, and Crouch, late of the Wichita Falls club, while Mack used McNair at second and Higgins at third, giving Bishop and Dykes a rest. Our old pal Wally Schang was behind the bat. Mickey Cochrane having been sent East to get some pointers on the Cardinals.

This young Levey covers plenty of territory. He dashed out to center and out to left to take pop flies. He has a basket catch on the order of Rabbit Maranville of the Braves.

Kress became the Browns first base runner in the fifth in a peculiar manner. He popped to Williams, but was awarded first base by Umpire Hildebrand when his claim that Catcher Schang interfered with his swing was sustained.

Held hitless for five innings, Stewart shattered Walberg's visions of a no-hit game with a safe smash over second with one out in the sixth.

Clinched His Eighth Pennant

CONNIE MACK

His "White Elephants," having clinched the American League pennant last week, will compete in the world series probably against the Cardinals.

Mack has won the American League pennant eight times: In 1902, 1905, 1910, 1911, 1913, 1914, 1929 and 1930. He won the world series in four of these years and lost twice. In the 1902 season no world series was played.

Mack Does Not Expect His Club to Have An Easy Time In Series

By Connie Mack.
Manager, World Champion Athletics.

Well I'm happy; and I am proud of the players who won for me my eighth American League pennant. It was a grand occasion for me in Chicago Thursday afternoon when the Athletics won and clinched the 1930 championship.

My team beat the White Sox while Washington was losing to Cleveland to clinch the pennant.

That Washington team, ably directed by Walter Johnson, made the race close. The Senators went to the very limit to prevent the A's from making it a runaway. The Washington players did not give up until their mathematical chance was lost.

Among the many questions that have been asked me since we clinched the championship, the one I have answered most often was regarding my feeling during the last two weeks. My friends wanted to know whether I really was alarmed.

I will say that when we left the East for the West we had a lead of 5½ games, as we lost a Sunday game in Washington two weeks ago. The Athletics had 11 games to play in the West. I realized that we might have to win at least one-half our games to keep in first place.

Admits He Felt Good.

I hoped to break even in Detroit and Cleveland, for I regarded them as the teams in the West most likely to give us trouble. We did split even with the Tigers, each team winning one of the two in Detroit. Then when we won both games played in Cleveland, I don't mind telling you now that I then felt pretty good about our prospects.

Now that the race is over so far as the American League pennant is concerned, our time will be taken up mainly in preparing for the World Series, and we can't very well point for any one club, since as this is written it is very difficult to say which National League team will be our opponent.

However, the way the St. Louis club has been playing of late, particularly when it defeated the Brooklyn team, we are beginning to think we may be pitted against the Cardinals. At the same time the Brooklyn and Chicago teams still are in the running and there is no way of telling what this last week of the season will bring forth.

One thing is sure: The National League has had a wonderful race, with four clubs fighting for the lead most of the season. And these four carried the fight almost to the wire.

Only One Club Can Win.

Only one club can win a pennant in one league, so it is natural that three teams in the National League will be disappointed. But they may ease their minds with the satisfaction that they played good ball and gave the best that was in them. More than that no team can do.

I am not approaching the world series with any false ideas that because the winner had to fight hard all the way to the wire the A's will find that team worn out. I will have thorough respect for our National League foe, no matter which team eventually wins the flag.

TIGERS AND SENATORS PLAY SHORTEST GAME OF THE 1930 SEASON

DETROIT, Sept. 20.—Playing sensational ball behind the sterling pitching of Lloyd Brown and Waite Hoyt, Washington and Detroit established a league record for the season in brevity of play, today, as the Tigers won the second game of the series, 4 to 1, in just one hour and 20 minutes.

Brown allowed only half a dozen hits to the seven garnered by the Senators off Hoyt, but three of the Tigers' blows were triples by Akers, Doljack and Alexander, while Alexander inserted a homer in the first inning.

FIVE-RUN RALLY IN EIGHTH GIVES PIRATES VICTORY OVER ROBINS, 6-2

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 20.—A five-run Pittsburg rally with two out in the eighth inning today dumped the Robins to their fourth straight defeat and reduced their stock in the pennant market to a very low figure. The Pirates won the game, 6 to 2.

The defeat left the Robins in a tie for second place with the Chicago Cubs, who also were defeated but dropped them to three games behind the league leading St. Louis Cardinals.

Babe Herman's thirty-fourth homer of the season in the first inning and another Brooklyn run off Larry French in the seventh looked good behind the shutout performance that Big Jim Elliott hurled for seven frames but in the eighth, the huge left-hander weakened and Moss and Thurston failed in their attempts to stop the Pirate attack. With two out and a man on second, Southern drew a walk and the two Waners followed with singles to tie the score. Moss appeared to pass one man, then gave way to Thurston. Traynor and Grantham hit two more singles to put the game beyond recall.

Glenn Spencer held the Robins safe in the last two innings while the Pirates scored their final run in the ninth as Heimach finished for Brooklyn.

Ruth Hits 47th Homer, Still Five Behind Wilson

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Babe Ruth hit his forty-seventh home run here today in the seventh inning of the Yankee-White Sox game. He was the first man to face Al Thomas in that inning.

Ruth's blow left him five behind Hack Wilson of the Cubs in the race for 1930 home-run honors.

The White Sox slammed Henry Johnson for five runs in the seventh inning and won the game, 10 to 7.

EDWARDSVILLE MEETS EAST ST. LOUIS NINE

The Edwardsville Regulars will clash with the East St. Louis Giants at American Legion Park in Edwardsville this afternoon. Three weeks ago the Giants defeated Edwardsville by a score of 2—1, Gregory, Edwardsville's pitching ace, will be opposed by Harrison, formerly of the St. Louis Stars.

The lineups:

Edwardsville Regulars—Dyer, third base; Jenkins, center field; Public, first base; Farrell, right field; Gross, left field; Schmidt, second base; Nichols, short stop; Jones, catch; Gregory, pitch.

They have shown grit and aggressiveness by meeting the challenges of three rivals and overcoming them all, coming from 12 games behind just a little more than one month ago, into a good lead.

They have the advantage of a leader who has not made a tactical mistake during the recent big drive of the club.

That's an array of arguments that will not easily be laughed off.

The Strength of the Macks.

THE Mackmen are still formidable. At first glance it appears that the club has fallen off in its work. But another look will convince anybody that this is almost as good as in 1929.

True, the team is not leading by a margin of 18 games, as last year; but the grand total of its season's victories will be about the same. Last year the Macks' total of 104 victories was an American League record. This year the Macks still can equal that performance.

The Athletics have some heavy hitters, they have the standout pitcher of baseball, they have the greatest catcher of the day and they have Al Simmons. The club figures a better fielding team than the Cardinals, on total errors—142 to 175.

But in the principal feature of attack, team batting, and in the main defensive asset, pitching, the Cards undoubtedly have the margin, despite Grove.

Omit Grove and the Mack staff is very uncertain. Even Earnshaw has been banged around and taken out despite his 23 victories.

Rhem with seven straight victories, Grimes, who has been going at a master's grait, Hallahan who is pitching the best ball of his career, and Haines, Johnson, Grabowski, Bell and Lindsey make up a corps of first line defense that Mack can't match.

To say that such a club as the Cardinals has not a good chance to win a series from the Mackmen is to shut one's eyes to facts.

This writer believes that the momentum of the Cardinals' driving finish and the confidence begotten of that memorable climb will enable them to defeat even the powerful Mack machine.

The Bogey Man.

GIGANTIC PRIMO CARNERA will soon be on his way to Europe, where there are still a few gazabos game enough to get into the ring with him. Seemingly there are none in America ready to take the chance—at least none among those heavies in high places who so lately were calling Carnera just "a big, clumsy boob."

If there is one thing more than another that proves Carnera is not a mutt it is the fact that Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling both side-stepped Primo, thereby sacrificing the greatest money gate of the year.

It certainly seems inconsistent to call a fighter a novice in one breath and then in the next turn down a $100,000 flat guarantee to oppose the supposed easy mark.

It's Far Safer.

SHARKEY and Stribling, however, will put on another of their "Waltz - Me - Around-Again-Willy" things at Miami.

The show will not draw half as much as a Carnera bout at Chicago. The reason, of course, is that the winner will get a shot at that easy mark champion Max Schmeling—and the title is worth even more than a bout with Carnera.

It can readily be seen that neither Stribling nor Sharkey has sufficient confidence in his own superiority over Primo to accept a fight with Carnera until after the title situation has cleared. A defeat by Carnera would spill the beans completely.

Both Stribling and Sharkey entertain the same thought about one another. Each thinks the other is "easy." Each feels sure he will get a shot at Schmeling; and each believes that he will win the title, once he gets into the ring with the Black Uhlan.

And so—Carnera is going home without a big shot.

But he is coming back next April and if his European campaign stands up, especially in regard to his match in Spain with Paulino, he will be in a position to demand a chance at the big boys. They can't always escape by calling him a novice and shouting that he is managed by a racketeer.

In the Meantime—

SHARKEY, in the meanwhile, has something on his mind more immediate than Carnera. It is his match with Campolo which takes place next Thursday at New York. Sharkey is a 1-to-2 shot in the theoretical betting; but the boys who look on at the practice work say Campolo is going to surprise fans.

This writer has never seen Campolo and can't say what are his merits. But he is a big tough boy with a discouraging amount of resistance and that is the kind Sharkey is not supposed to like.

Sharkey must win this fight or pass out of the picture. And it would not hurt the pugilistic scenery much if he were missing from the landscape.

Many of his fights have been poor things to view; few of them have thrilled. He built up a reputation at the expense of an aged Negro, who later proved that he had been in total eclipse for some time—Harry Wills. He knocked out Jim Maloney who had a glass jaw and he beat 40-year old Mike McTigue, when a cut caused Mike to bleed so badly the referee halted the show.

Sharkey's most attractive effort was to flatten Tommy Loughran, one of the most overrated fighters the ring has known in some time.

He also won a messed up fight with Phil Scott and shaded Stribling in a Florida bunny cuddle.

On the other hand: Poor old Tom Heeney held him safe. He was beaten by Johnny Risko, Bud Gorman and others. He was knocked out by Romero Rojas and Jack Dempsey; he sidestepped the rugged Paulino; and proved he lacked class and real punch when he had Jack Dempsey at his mercy and couldn't finish him.

So we can spare Sharkey from a championship picture that is all too drab and gray. But what we can not spare is the big behemoth from Italy, a unique figure in the ring and a man of such resistance and power that, until he is down on the floor and counted out, most fans will believe the boxer who can flatten him has not yet put on the gloves.

Cardinals Win and Lose in Two Games With Phillies

Whitney singled against the right-field wall, scoring Klein, and took second when Watkins fumbled the ball on its rebound from the wall. Rensa's infield out moved Whitney to third and he was run down on Sherlock's grounder to Frisch, but while he was being retired Sherlock moved around to third and scored when Frisch, Bottomley and Watkins interfered with each other chasing Thevenow's pop fly and the ball popped out of Frisch's glove for a double.

That tied the score, and while each team had several chances, neither counted until the ninth.

Bottomley doubled with one out in the eighth, but Hafey fouled to Rensa and Brickell ran back for a brilliant catch of Watkins' smash to deep center.

Douthit temporarily saved the game in the home half with one of the best catches of the season. Klein, leading off, hit a tremendous drive toward the clubhouse in center. Douthit was off at the crack of the bat, knowing that if the catch was to be made he would have to make it near the wall that is the foundation of the clubhouse and becomes the right-center field wall.

Just before reaching the wall Douthit looked over his shoulder, made a desperate leap and came down with the ball in his glove. He had to do some quick hip-shifting to change his course and avoid a collision with the wall. The crowd gave him a prolonged cheer for the brilliant play, and it was a beauty.

Whitney Out Stealing Home.

Whitney and Rensa followed with singles and the runners moved up when Frisch fumbled Sherlock's grounder and had to be satisfied with a play at first instead of a doubdle play. Davis batted for Thevenow and was purposely passed, filling the bases, and with a call of two and two on Benge, Whitney tried to steal home, was was tagged out by Mancuso.

Benge opened the Phillies' ninth with a high bounder to the pitcher's box and was safe when Hallahan threw wild to first. Brickell followed with a double against the scoreboard in center, moving Benge to third and Gabby Street didn't hesitate about passing Thompson. It didn't make any difference who the batter was, as the Cards' only hope was to get a double play, starting at the plate.

Barney Friberg quickly broke up the game by swinging at Hallahan's first pitch and sending a hit against the scoreboard. It would have been good for two bases, but as the sacks were all occupied, he was credited only with a single.

Rhem in Fine Form.

Rhem had only one bad inning in the opening game. He gave only seven hits and doled them out one to an inning except in the third, when the Phils bunched a single and two doubles for two of their three runs.

For the Redbirds Douthit started the game by drawing a pass and was forced at second by Adams, who went to third on Frisch's bounding single over second. Bottomley's sacrifice fly scored Adams, but Frisch tried to go to third and was retired.

Gus Mancuso drove a home run into the left field seats in the second inning to give Rhem a two-run lead. The Phillies packed the bases on a double and two passes in the frist frame, but couldn't score and Rhem retired them without difficulty in the second.

Brickell started the third with a hot grounder that slithered off Bottomley's shoe for a single, and Thompson sent him home with a double to right. Rhem struck out Friberg and the dangerous Klein, but Hurst doubled to right center to score Thompson.

The Big Seventh Inning.

Pitching then prevailed and the score remained tied until the seventh. Umpire Moran called a strike that Watkins didn't like and the fighting son of the Texas Panhandle crashed the next offering over the right field screen to break the tie. Mancuso liked the idea and hit another four-bagger into the left field seats.

Gelbert beat out a grounder to Thevenow and Rhem, bunting for a sacrifice, was safe with Gelbert when Charlie beat Hurst's throw to second. Douthit sacrificed the runners along and Adams singled to center, scoring Gelbert and moving Rhem to third, and took second on Brickell's throw to the plate.

Frisch's sacrifice fly scored Rhem. Bottomley's single scored Adams and Hafey's triple sent Bottomley home. Watkins then got his second hit of the inning, a single that drove Hafey home with the seventh run of the frame and Mancuso ended it, after Watkins stole second, by grounding to Thevenow.

Klein Hits No. 39.

The contest was a breeze for Rhem after that, but he didn't ease up.

Klein produced the third and final Phillie run of the game when he hit over the right field wall for his thirty-ninth home run of the season.

Manager Street will not save any pitchers for the Pittsburg series, he announced this afternoon. He wants to win the remaining two games at Baker Bowl and will send Sylvester Johnson and Burleigh Grimes against Shotton's troublesome tail-enders.

Redbird Notes.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20.

Mickey Cochrane of the Athletics attended the double-header, to look over the Cardinal batters.

The crowd was said to be the largest that ever gathered at Baker Bowl. Every seat in the so-called grand stand and bleachers was taken and hundreds of fans perched on rafters. The attendance was estimated at more than 25,000.

President John Heydler of the National League was among the spectators, having journeyed from New York to see the Redbirds, who now stand out as the team likely to represent the senior circuit in the world series.

The fans yelled for the Phils to defeat the Cards until they put on that seventh-inning storm in the opening game and then they cheered for the Redbirds to make a good job of it. And a good job was done.

Four double plays, executed by the Phils helped to hold down the Cardinal total in the first game.

Klein singled to start the second inning of the second game, but Gelbert took a Whitney's grounder, stepped on second and fired to Bottomley for a double play.

Douthit started the third frame with an infield hit to Thevenow and after Adams lined to Klein, Frisch doubled against the right field wall. Klein fumbled and Douthit could have scored, but he didn't have his head up and held third. Bottomley then popped to Whitney, Hafey took a called third strike and the two hits were wasted.

The Cardinals wasted another double and single in the sixth inning. With one out Watkins doubled to center and Mancuso singled to center, Watkins stopping at third. Gelbert grounded to Whitney who started a double play with Thompson as middle man.

BRAVES DEFEAT CUBS, 3 TO 2, SMITH ALLOWS ONLY 6 HITS

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—Boston Braves put on their annual September war paint here today and gave Joe McCarthy's Cubs a 3 to 2 defeat while the Westerner's running mate in the National League pennant chase, the Brooklyn Robins, were losing to the Pirates. The loss still left the Cubs and Robins hand-in-hand in their pursuit of the league-leading Cards.

The Cubs got away to a one-run lead in the first inning when English's triple was followed by Cuyler's infield out. The Braves put going in the third as Smith struck out. Neun and Maranville walked and Richbourg shot a single to right to score two runs. Clark followed with a hit which scored Maranville and Jess Petty was withdrawn from the box in favor of Blake.

Blair doubled to open the Cubs' eighth and English walked. Cuyler's sacrifice fly advanced Blair to third and he scored on Hack Wilson's single.

In the final inning Bell gave the fans a momentary thrill with a lusty wallop to deep right but Richbourg made a sensational catch to squelch any possibility of a rally.

NATIONAL AMATEUR OPENS TOMORROW OVER HISTORIC MERION COURSE

BOBBY JONES TO TRY FOR FOURTH MAJOR TITLE OF YEAR IN EVENT

By Bobby Jones
American Open, British Open, British Amateur Champion.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20. — When the amateur championship begins at Merion tomorrow, it will be on the same course as 14 years ago, but 14 years makes a whole lot of difference in things less permanent than a golf course. When the field tees off there will be very few names on the list which will coincide exactly with those the starter called back in 1916.

Bobby Jones.

This is not meant to sound like an obituary of famous golfers, and really it is not, for most of them are very much alive and still playing good golf; but I cannot escape the feeling of age descending upon us when I run over the list of probabilities for this year's championship and think of what we knew of them in 1916. Increasing pressure of business and the responsibility which goes with it, ever diminishing keenness for the stress and strain of competition after years of experience and what not have caused most of the kingpins of the tournament of 14 years ago to drop quietly from the picture, leaving those who are younger and probably more foolish to carry on with the suffering.

The names which I remember most distinctly in connection with the 1916 championship are, first, of course, Chick Evans, the winner; Bob Gardner, Jesse Guildford, Max Marston, Eben Byers, Frank Dyer, Oswald Kirkby and Gardiner White. Compare that list with this one which includes some of the more prominent possibilities for this year—George Voigt, Von Elm, Sweetser, Johnston, Willing, Moe, Tolley, Goodman, Chick Evans, Francis Ouimet—and mind you this list is made up only of some of those already tried, and does not include one man who might be said to be an unknown quantity.

This 1916 tournament at Merion was, I think, the first championship that Jerry Travers failed to play in at the beginning of his retirement from the game, and as it was the first I had played in, the fact that I was one year late deprived me of the opportunity of watching Jerry in competition or of perhaps playing against him.

One of the most exciting finishes I ever saw, as well as one of the most unfortunate, occurred at Merion in this same tournament. Oswald Kirkby and Gardiner White were playing in the second round, and after a terrific battle they had come to the thirty-sixth hole all square. The eighteenth at Merion then and now is a hole of about 430 yards to a green located alongside a roadway on the left side. On the other side of this road was a practice green and beyond that was another roadway and the clubhouse. White played a nice second shot to the apron of the green, whence a four was not certain but likely. Then Kirkby played and pulled a high iron shot off the left side of the green. The shot was wide enough to be punished but what happened astounded everyone and finished the match definitely. The ball struck in the first roadway, bounded across the putting-green across the second road, up into the clubhouse entrance and came to rest between a large flowerpot and the wall. I don't believe Kirkby could have hit the next shot with anything larger than a toothpick.

It seems a bit funny to me now to look back and reflect how little I knew in 1916 about the men I now know so well. When Frank Dyer and I finished our second round match on the sixteenth green, walking back to the clubhouse we saw the Bob Gardner-Max Marston match in the distance attended by a large gallery. Frank remarked that I played the winner the next day and asked if I knew how they stood. I replied that I did not and added that I supposed the result would make very little difference so far as I was concerned.

In my heart, however, I had a notion that I would rather play Gardner than Marston. I had read avidly the details of the championship the year before at Detroit, when Marston had beaten Travers after being three down with five to play and had lost to Gardner in the semifinal only by missing a two-foot putt on the last green. But Frank set me back a bit when he said I had better hope that I did not have to play Bob Gardner. I don't know that I should have fared any better against Max but I certainly found that I could have done without playing Bob.

something to do with upsetting the youngster for he turned the first nine in 38, four strokes over par. When the spectators realized that Ralph had slipped so badly they decided to turn their attention to somebody else and the moment they did so, Guldahl recovered his nerve and burned up the last nine in 35, three strokes under par for a total of 73 for the 18 holes and 139 for the 36.

Al Espinosa a Factor.

Right behind the two leaders came Al Espinosa of Chicago who turned in a 69 for a 36-hole total of 140 after starting out on the first nine with six threes in succession. He ran into a disastrous position on the seventh hole, however, and finished 5, for a 33. He got going again coming home and finished with 36, two strokes under par. He sank a beautiful surving down hill putt on the 18th green for a birdie.

Johnny Manion, home professional at Sunset was one shot better on his second round than on his first, getting a 70, two strokes under par for a 36-hole total of 141 which gave him fifth place, the best showing by a St. Louisan. Manion played steady golf all the way around. He didn't get down any sensational putts but played well from tee to green. His card:

In .....443 344 454—37—70

Clarke Morse, 21-year-old Forest Park-and Crystal Like professional, placed well up among the leaders when he shot a 69 for a 36-hole total of 143. Clarke played steadily and his driving and approaching were splendid. He didn't do any sensational putting, but he didn't miss many, either.

His card:

In .....443 344 454—35—69

It took a score of 151 or better to get into the finals and there were just 65 players who qualified. Under the rules the 64 scorers and ties play and there were 54 under 150 and 11 who had 151.

Some Stars Who Failed.

There were some good players who failed to make the grade. Among them were Charly Lacey, who failed to reach the finals for the first time in his two years of tournament competition, in England and in this country. He putted himself out of the tournament on No. 10, for after reaching the green of this par five hole in the required three strokes, he took five putts for an eight and wound up with a 77 and a total score of 155.

Bill Mehlhorn, who tied the Sunset record with 64 on his last practice round, failed by a stroke to get in. He had 81 for his first round and although he came back with a great 71, he was out.

Among the others who failed were Emmet Spicer, star amateur, Memphis, Tenn., and Elliot Whitbread, St. Louis district champion; Art Longworth, St. Louis Country Club professional, and his brother Ted from Fort Worth, Francis, Schwartz, Midland Valley.

St. Louis will be represented in the finals by 13 players.

Jim Manion's 70 yesterday which gave him 148 for the two days' play, put him in the lead of the amateurs.

An added attraction which should delight the spectators is promised for noon today. Charles Lacey, the youthful transplanted Englishman, considers himself the longest driver in the world. Jimmy Thompson, the Broadmoor, Colo. pro thinks Lacey is a bit confused in identities. Thomson also hits a long drive. The two will drive it out to a decision at noon today.

Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, will have his athletes out at Sunset Hill this morning.

GALLERY OF 3000 SEES QUARTET OF GOLF STARS PLAY MERION COURSE

By the Associated Press.

HAVERFORD, Pa., Sept. 20.—Predictions that new attendance records would be made for a golf competition at the national amateur championship at Merion Cricket Club next week, seemed justified this afternoon when a gallery estimated at 2500 to 3000 followed Jimmy Johnston, the champion, and three former champions—Bobby Jones, Jess Sweetser and Max Marston—over the course.

This outpouring of golf fans two days before the play officially starts, for the most informal sort of match, caused furrows to appear in the faces of officials of the club as they wondered what they would do next week when the firing begins in earnest.

The attendance today was greater than that attracted by the final of the last championship played at Merion, when Jones defeted Von Elm in 1924.

There was applause in plenty for the champion and two other former champions, but the crowd came to see Jones and every one seemed anxious to have a ring-side seat every time he addressed the ball.

The triple champion made no great effort to break scoring records this afternoon, preferring to try his shots in preparation for the tests to follow.

Although most of the players and all of the spectators would have been glad to take Bob's play, shot for shot, for the rest of their lives, he said he was not playing well.

Asked how he was doing, he replied: "Terrible."

Jones and Johnson played Sweetser and Marston in a best ball match and while all played good golf, there was nothing about the match to cause excitement.

For the first nine holes the scores were very much approximated, Sweetser leading with 36, even par; Jones and Marston scoring about 37 and Johnston 38.

Practically all the leading players were in action this afternoon and most of them will get in a final round tomorrow in preparation for the first qualifying round Monday.

The course was reported in good condition in spite of a distressing appearance of brown patch on two greens and some clover here and there in the fairway.

In the battle of champions, Jones and Johnston defeated Sweetser and Marston, one up, by winning the eighteenth hole, with par fours. Marston took five and Sweetser encountered a lot of last minute trouble. Jimmy was close for his par, but Bob had to sink a six-footer to finish with a perfect figure.

Approximate medal scores for the round were 74 for Jones and 76 each for the other three, although the champion of champions was in two traps and did not bother to play out after his partner halved the holes.

Jones was hitting his woods long and reasonably straight and seemed about to "come on his game." Johnston, too, played the best golf he has shown in recent months.

The approximate cards:

Playing Golf Is Grim Business, Spectators at "Open" Find

"Big Leaguers" of the Game Rarely Give Expression To Their Feelings—Armour Quietly Whistles a Tune.

By E. Roy Alexander

Even the spectators showed the strain as the crack professional golfers of the country fought their grim way through the second round of the $10,000 St. Louis open golf tournament yesterday at the Sunset Hill Country Club.

As on the preceding day, Horton Smith, the big-boned Joplin boy, proved the strongest drawing card. His gallery was always numbered in the hundreds, while smaller groups followed the others. The other members of his threesome were Jimmie Manion, the popular St. Louis amateur, and Charlie Lacey, a youthful professional from Clementon, N. J., who smashes prodigious, whistling tee shots but is discouragingly erratic on his short game.

Gallery of 6500

The second round of the tournament drew a crowd estimated at between 6000 and 7000, while the crowd on Friday was estimated by policemen at 5000. It was not as colorful a group as attended the opening, however. There were fewer women in the galleries, and there was more straggling from threesome to threesome, due probably to the fact that comparatively few spectators have any personal interest in the contestants and are drawn rather by a desire to see golf's big leaguers in action.

There is no monkey business about the way golf is played by the fellows in the upper flight of the professionals. They stand up to the ball, smash it, walk after it, chip it to the green and hole out.

Does a drive go into the rough? Without a change of expression it is lofted daintily to the green. Does a perfect tee shot take a bad hop and pop into a trap? Calmly and briefly the situation is studied and the pellet is flipped toward the flag.

There is no exclamation of disgust, no throwing away of putters when a short putt is foozled and Old Man Par becomes the winner of a hole. Neither is there permitted a look of pleasure when a long putt is sent curling across a tricky green to plop gratifyingly into the cup.

Whistling Tommy

Tommy Armour, the lean-faced professional from Orchard Lake, Mich., who jumped into the lead in the second round with a sparkling 68 for a total of 135, is a particularly interesting study in detachment as he plays. On the tee and green he is maddeningly deliberate, yet his demeanor is pleasant.

As he studies a difficult shot he whistle softly — yesterday it was the opening bar of "There's a Song in My Heart"—and he waggles more than most of the professionals before he shoots. Once, on the fourth green, he stood up from the study of a putt and looked into the middle distance like a man who was trying to remember something. After a threesome ahead of him had made their tee shots, he settled down again to the business of holing out. Noise distracts him, but does not fluster him as it would a less imperturbable player.

Between tee and green Armour habitually talks with his caddy, sometimes discussing the game, sometimes talking about the weather. Like most of the other professionals, he dressed meticulously, but adds an odd note to his attire by a white hat with a green window in the brim and a screen ventilator above.

Gene Sarazen, a sturdy, bronzed man with a broad Japanesque face, talks little around the links, is curt, but not disagreeable when he tells his caddy to hand him a club or stand away from the cup. Leo Diegel, who bears an occupational resemblance to Sarazen and Hagen, in a squareness of shoulder and heaviness of arm, is pleasant on the course, and converses with friends of the gallery between shots, but always with the recollected air of the veteran soldier about to go into action again.

Hagen, who favors long trousers while others wear plus-fours, has always the same poker smile, polite, mocking. A maddening fellow to meet in match play, as many of his contemporaries can testify.

Johnny Farrell is much watched by women spectators because of his reputation for fastidious dress. Yesterday he played around in a pale yellow sweater, green plus-fours, gray-green stockings and white-and-black sport shoes. Farrell's bearing on the course is markedly easy, but he has the professional air. Nothing bothers him.

Refreshing Bobby Cruickshank

The most refreshing of the pros from the spectators' standpoint is Bob Cruickshank, a sturdy, smiling thin-haired Scot, who is enjoying himself in play and wants everybody to know it. He carries on an almost continuous conversation with his opponents, laughs frequently and holds lengthy conferences with his caddy and the caddy's advisers before selecting an iron for a doubtful shot.

The first of the surviving 64 contestants will tee of at 9 o'clock for the first Sunday round. The second round will begin at 2 o'clock. It will be St. Louis' last chance to see golf's royalty in action for this season.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Oswego, sporting the silks of Gallaher and Combs, showed the way to 11 of the finest juveniles in the West, when he easily triumphed in the Dearborn Handicap, carrying a purse of $5000 added. Doris Jean racing for J. Lowenstein, was second and Hillsborough from the R. C. Cadwell stable third.

Oswego was coupled with Back Log which was considered to be the outstanding horse in the race and Jockey K. Russell made the trip from Kentucky especially to ride the latter but it was Oswego that saved the day for the Gallaher and Combs entry by coming from behind when his stable companion began to falter and raced to an easy win.

The race was worth $6480 to the winning stable. The time was 1:24 3-5.

Depeso took Oswego up close to the pace in the early stages and rating the colt nicely came with a rush in the stretch passing Martha Jones, the early leader and Doris Jean drew out to win easily. Doris Jean was prominent from the start, following close to the early leader, but was no match for the fast going winner. Hillsborough came from far back to outfinish the tiring Martha Jones.

Giants Hand Reds Double Defeat

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Giants climbed to within a game and a half of the Brooklyn Robins and Chicago Cubs today as they defeated the Cincinnati Reds in both games of a double-header, while the second place clubs lost. The Giants triumphed, 10 to 1, in first game, and 5 to 4 in the second, making it seven successive times they have defeated Cincinnati.

Clarence Mitchell limited the Reds to eight hits, of which Durocher's homer was the only scoring blow, in the first game, while the Giants walloped their old mate, Larry Benton, and his successors, May and Ash, for 17 hits. They batted around in the sixth, scoring six runs, and counted the rest of their tallies in the seventh.

Merceina Weiss, 14, New Star of St. Louis Tennis

Roosevelt High Student, Besides Winning Several Titles, Found Time to Attend Summer School and Take Piano and Elocution Lessons.

By Damon Kerby.

Merceina Weiss, 14-year-old tennis star, is looking back on one of the most successful seasons experienced in the St. Louis district in the season that is drawing to a close. She holds the Municipal girls' single championship and is co-holder with partners in several doubles tournaments.

This stocky youngster, quiet and unemotional to the point of being classed with Mrs. Helen Wills Moody in regard to having a "poker face" when under the strain of competition, has compiled a brilliant record this year, despite the fact that she has usually been forced to play against girls who are several years older than she.

Her first title of the year was won in June, when, with Adele Shine, she won the girls' district doubles championship. In the girls' district singles she was eliminated in the semifinals by Ruth Ferris.

Going to Des Moines for the Missouri Valley tournament early in July in the midst of the heat wave, Merceina paired with Ruth Bailey of St. Louis to win the women's double title. In the same tournament she was finalist in the junior girls' division.

Playing against girls who for the most part were two or three years older, the young St. Louis star won the Muny singles title, in August, and in the same tournament won the doubles title with Adele Shine as her partner.

Not content with starring in the girls' division, Merceina entered the women's municipal tournament and advanced to the semifinals, where she was eliminated by Mrs. Virginia Dueker, who won the title. Mrs. Dueker later won the national women's municipal singles title at Washington.

In addition to carrying on an active tennis campaign during the season, Miss Weiss found time to attend summer school and take piano and elocution lessons. She is a senior at Roosevelt High, and is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Weiss, 3611 Lafayette avenue.

MERCEINA WEISS.

St. Louis tennis followers expect Miss Weiss to aid in putting St. Louis on the tennis map during the next few seasons.

30-1 SHOT BEATS QUESTIONNAIRE AT AQUEDUCT

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—James Butler's Questionnaire, ranked second only to Gallant Fox in the 3-year-old turf division, again felt the sting of defeat as he finished second to the Rosedale Stable's Live Oak, a 30-to-1 shot, in the Edgemere Handicap at Aqueduct today.

Questionnaire had to carry the heavy impost of 126 pounds, while Live Oak was picking up only the feather of 98, but the horse that raced Gallant Fox to a nose finish in the Lawrence Realization was never a serious contender as the field of seven galloped over the mile and one-eighth. It was the Questionnaire's second defeat to supposedly weaker rivals since the Realization at Belmont Park early in the month.

Live Oak was overlooked by the bookmakers, but a large number of the half-holiday crowd supported him because he was a likely looking long shot. Questionnaire was held at odds-on figures, despite his recent defeat in the Jerome Handicap at Belmont.

With S. Herbert as a part of the light package in the saddle, Live Oak got away on his toes and quickly stepped to the front, followed by the Arden Farm's Sun Edwin. The latter soon stopped, however, as Live Oak drew out to a long lead while rounding the turn.

In the last quarter Questionnaire, which had C. Kurtsinger up, moved up and challenged but Live Oak was still going very easy and just played with the Butler ace through the final sixteenth to win by a length and a half. Questionnaire was three lengths in front of the Butler horse.

The race was worth $6250 to the winner, which stepped the distance in 1:51.

Under a brilliant ride by 19-year-old G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, gentleman jockey, Thomas Hitchcock's 4-year-old Actor won the $2000 added Bushwick Steeplechase Handicap, defeating Joseph E. Widener's McCarthy More, which was making his first start of the year. Actor was the odds-on favorite at 3 to 5 and covered the approximate two miles in 4:12 2-5.

WOOSTER LAMBERTS TOTAL 3107 IN PETERSON LEAGUE

A celebration in honor of Wooster Lmabert's return from Paris resulted in some high class pin toppling by his team with scores of 1109-1013-985 establishing a new season record for the league. Their single game of 1109 also a season record, each member having scores over 200. Lambert 236, Beye 244, Meyer 212, Holmes 216, Nelson 201. The teams rolled on Peterson's alleys.

The Lamberts led by "I. T. B." Meyer won the odd game from the Witter Razz. Pat Spencer was high man for the Razz with 614 total. The Hellrungs led by Thomas with 651, won the odd game from Jule Schmitt's Ready Mixers. Eng. Mulconnery with 615 was high for the Schmitt's.

The South Side won the odd game from the Justin T. Flints. Kastner with 651 and Leicht with 605 were high for the winners. Hahn's 636 and Whitehead's 626 were high for the Flints.

The C. C. Peterson's team won the odd game from the Sunshines. "Juvenile" Knepp with 601 was high for the Petersons.

The weekly prize for high three went to Meyer with 652. High single game went to Niedringhaus with 253.

MARTIN-BREITTS GAIN TWELFTH CONSECUTIVE TENPIN VICTORY

The fast stepping Martin-Breitts again featured play in the Women's Major City League on the Washington Alleys Friday night when they whitewashed their nearest rivals, the Bly-Moss Furniture Co. to run their season's record to 12 consecutive victories without a defeat.

Mrs. Myrtle Schulte featured individual scoring with 567 for the Breitts, aided by Flo Schlenk's 530, while Miss E. Schaefer 527 and Mrs. W. R. Smith 528 rolled well for the losers.

The defeat dropped the Bly Moss squad to third place as the Andersons established a new high three games mark of 2628 pins in making a clean sweep of their series with the Washington Five and advanced to second position, three games behind the Martin-Breitts. Mrs. Lohmueller of the Andersons gave her team 555 pins to lead all individual scoring.

DEVELOPMENT OF LEFT HAS MADE BIG CHANGE IN SOUTH AMERICAN

By Ned Brown, of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. — It's a new Vittorio Campolo who will come back to the ring Thursday night to do battle with Jack Sharkey in another of those elimination tournaments, which will lead the final victor to a match with Max Schmeling in one of New York's ball parks next summer. It will be a vastly improved fighter, over the one who beat Johnny Risko in the Garden last winter, but through the idiosyncrasies of officials, Johnny was declared the winner.

I venture this opinion because in my visits to the Orangeburg training camp I looked Vittorio over and saw him box as he never boxed before. I saw him on the big bag, which to my mind, is the finest medium to show just how a fighter is going along, and if he needs improvement, how he is improving.

Time was when Campolo relied on a most powerful right hand to carry him on to his goal; when he had a left hand that wasn't even a good defensive weapon, and when he used to flick and flail with it rather than use it as the great weapon into which he has rounded it today.

Used Plenty of Lefts.

Vittorio was working on the big bag one day in particular. I wanted to see how his left was working. There he was shooting that left one blow after the other, shooting them with all the power of his 220 pounds behind him, and how he was making the big bag almost hit the ceiling with each swipe. He didn't use a right hand once in a dozen blows.

I was amazed. I approached Lou Fink, who has been training him now for several weeks.

"Where did the big gawko get so much power in that old left?" I asked.

"Ned," said Lou, who is one of the best trainers in the business and who prepared Gene Tunney for his successful fight for the world's heavyweight championship, "that fellow can't miss being the heavyweight champion. You have not been him since the Risko fight, I guess. Well, he has improved 100 per cent in that time. He has a left hand that is the best in the business. He will knock a man down with it now. He doesn't flick it at you now, but with every blow there is a sleep potion for the recipient.

Anxious to Learn.

"I have worked on him to develop that left. He has listened like a child who wants to learn his school lessons. He has listened to me when I told him his mistakes and every time he went out he improved on what he had been doing. I tell you he will surprise Sharkey with that left hand and I wouldn't be surprised to see him drop Sharkey early in the fight with it."

Campolo is boxing marvelously well, too. He has a weaving style which will be hard for any man to fathom and he has acquired the knack of hitting out of that weave, maybe not as dexterously as Jack Dempsey used to do, but good enough.

Besides that, the big Argentine is brimful of confidence. He showed that when he took this match with Sharkey for a mere pittance, in so far as such things go today in the ring. A mere $7500 is what he is getting, and it ranks in his bosom to think that Sharkey would demand $100,000 to fight him. He takes it as something personal and is welcoming the time when he will meet Sharkey and get even.

According to Fink, Campolo has developed a fine defense, too. He has learned how to tie up his man in clinches and besides that, when he gets in close he can shoot a right to the body that nobody can withstand.

Has Come Fast.

So well has Campolo come along in his boxing that Fink lays him off every once in a while until now he has a schedule which calls for him to box only about four times a week, a schedule which he will adhere to until two days before the fight.

This Campolo is ambitious, a fellow who hasn't been discouraged by the way he has been generally ignored in his quest for the high honors of the ring. He was born in Reggio, a town in Calabria, Italy, and not in Buenos Aires, as has been generally supposed. He is an Italian by birth, but migrated to South America when he was a kid of 4 years. He got into the habits of the country, which was then leaning toward boxing, and the honor heaped on Luis Firpo was what really drove him into the game.

Skelly Field, new $300,000 stadium of the University of Tulsa, is to be equipped with a loud speaker system and an electric scoreboard.

Shows Improvement in His Workouts for Sharkey

VITTORIO CAMPOLO, who according to observers, has developed a left hand. He is shown just after his knockout of Tom Heeney.

LINCOLN U. ANNOUNCES FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 20.—The Blue and White Tigers, the gridiron team of the Lincoln University Negro State school of Missouri, are ready to face opponents in eight stiff games this season.

Forty-three candidates reported to Coach Waters for football practice. Their hardest contest will probably be on Oct. 25, when they meet the strong Fisk University eleven of Nashville, Tenn., here, at the Stars' Park.

Lincoln U. Schedule.

Oct. 4—Stowe Teachers' College at Jefferson City.
Oct. 11—Arkansas A. & M. College at Jefferson City.
Oct. 18—Twenty-fourth Infantry at Fort Riley, Kan.
Oct. 25—Fisk University at St. Louis, Mo.
Nov. 1—Tennesee State at Nashville, Tenn.
Nov. 8—Wilberforce University at Wilberforce, O.
Nov. 15—Langston University at Langston, Okla.
Nov. 22—Western University at Jefferson City.

Principia Teams Play 13 Games

The Principia Junior College and Principia Academy football teams will participate in a total of 13 games during the coming season according to the schedule prepared by Leo McCandless, Athletic director. George Kilburn and Bert Clark are coaching the Junior College while McLellan Laughlin is directing the Academy A team.

Both teams will open the season on Oct. 4. The Junior College team meats Central High on that date In addition to meeting two other local teams, Roosevelt and Soldan, the Principia Junior College squad will oppose Jefferson City Junior College, Western Military Academy, Mober

SALISBURYS CAN CLINCH MUNY BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP TODAY

SOUTHSIDERS FAVORED TO BEAT SENTINELS AT FAIRGROUNDS

Another attempt will be made this afternoon to play off the second game of the Municipal Baseball Association championship. Rain and hail interfered last Sunday after four innings had been played. Rain checks issued at that time will be honored today. The admission charge is 25 cents.

Two games are scheduled, each a championship affair. The Guelkers will attempt to score their second straight victory over the Sophomores for the Intermediate title and the Salisburys will likewise try to make it two straight over the Sentinels in the senior division.

When the Salisburys took the first game of the series from the Sentinels they appeared to have an advantage in almost every department of play. In pitching, hitting, fielding and base running the Salisburys dominated the game. It would, therefore, be nothing short of astonishing should the De Molay lads turn the tables today. However, baseball is baseball. The hero of yesterday's game may be the butter-fingered dub of today.

Park Department officials announce that they will make an effort to post on the centerfield bulletin board the score by innings of those games which have a bearing on the tight National League race. This feature held the attention of the fans last Sunday when the Cardinals were playing at Boston.

Starting time of the opening game between the Guelkers and the Sophomores is 12:30 p. m. The second game will start promptly at 3 p. m., even if it is necessary to interrupt the first game.

Soccer Games Scheduled Today

Professional and amateur soccer teams in and about St. Louis will be busy today although the regular season does not open for two weeks.

The Twilight League teams play a double-header at Sherman Park this morning. The Dolans oppose the German Sports Club starting at 10 a. m. and the Andys meet the Gerahgtys in the second game, starting at 11 a. m.

At Beaumont High School field, John Marre's Tabler team will engage in a practice match with the Bly Moss team of the Municipal League. The latter club is managed by Andy Fredrick.

Phil Kavanaugh takes his Coca Cola club to Gillespie, Ill., to meet the team of that town in an afternoon game.

John Burroughs Eleven Looks Best In A B C League

This fall the ABC League elevens will engage in a hot fight for the football crown. Last year the Principia "A" team easily won the title with one of the greatest teams in the history of the school.

All that remains of Principia's last year varsity team are three letter men, namely, Hunkins, fullback, and two linemen, Hersch and Vogel. This year's team will be built around these men. The outlook is not promising, principally because there seems to be no outstanding reserves. Their first game is to be played at Taylor Field with Country Day, Oct. 4.

The John Burroughs "A" team looks promising. With six lettermen as a starter and some fast reserves, the Blue and Gold look forward to a successful season. Last year's halfbacks, Boyd and Proctor, are still with the team but Aikin, Burroughs' star quarterback, has graduated. This position will probably be filled by Depew, a field general with experience on "B" and "C" teams. One of the greatest gaps left by the graduating class was the position of center which was filled by Sample. Burroughs' first game is with Western Military Academy, Oct. 11.

Half-Pint Tommy.

IF Tom Thumb were alive today,
That little chap, methinks,
Would often take time out and play
Upon the Tom Thumb links.

At driving, Tom, perhaps would be
No more than passing fair,
But at the "short" game you'll agree,
That Tom would sure be there.

On those who started poking fun
Perhaps he'd turn the laugh;
Instead of making holes in one,
He'd make 'em in a half.

See by Ben Franklin's old paper where Owner Wrigley of the Cubs discovered ladies' day. He seemed to be surprised that the ladies when offered something for nothing would hop to it.

St. Louis has been having ladies' days as far back as the memory of man runneth. But dear old Chi was bound to pick it up sooner or later.

And never let it be said that the ladies are not appreciative. They'll cheer anything from a dinky little pop foul to a home run with the bases loaded. And they are a delight and a profit to the concessionaire. Hot dog! We'll say they are!

About the only change we can see in the liquor situation is that the old-fashioned lid club is now called a night club.

Lloyd Burdick To Meet Tulsa Wrestler Here

A one-fall engagement between Lloyd Burdick, former Illinois University athlete, and Marshall Blackstock of Tulsa, Ok., announced last night by Promoter Tom Packs, completes the feature portion of an indoor wrestling card to be presented at the Coliseum next Wednesday night. Packs is now trying to arrange a return bout between George Tragos, local Greek heavyweight, and Casey Burger of Phoenix, Ariz., to round out his program of four events.

Rudy Dusek of Little Rock meets Jim Clinstock, Oklahoma Indian, in a one-fall finish tussel, billed as the main event of the Coliseum card and designed to serve as one of a series of elimination tryouts to determine who will be Jimmy Londos' opponent in the N. B. A. champion's next local bout.

George Zaharias of Pueblo, Colo., makes his local debut as the opponent of Fred Grobmeier, Iowa farmer, in the semi-windup, a one-fall affair with time restrictions of one hour. Zaharias, though only 21 years old, has been wrestling professionally for nearly three years. He won a decision over Everett Marshall in the amateur ranks and numbers Pat McKay, Renato Gardini, Firpo Wilcox, John Spellman and Charley Fox among grapplers he has defeated during his pro career. The young Colorado matman also boasts a draw with Rudy Dusek.

The night game was started shortly afterwards. Springfield won in nine innings, 7 to 1.

Sharpe Files $25,000 Suit Against Packs

Suit for $25,000 damages against Tom Packs, wrestling promoter, has been filed by Harry Sharpe, veteran referee and insurance broker, growing out of an injury Sharpe received at the Coliseum the night of Feb. 17 following a match between Jimmy Londos and Fred Grobmeier.

Sharpe charges that he was injured when he was slugged by spectators as he was leaving the ring of the Coliseum, after refereeing a match between Londos and Grobmeier. The referee's version of the affair, as given to the Post-Dispatch last night:

"Londos and Grobmeier were having a hard battle. Both wrestlers rolled out of the ring. At the count of "18" Londos came back into the ring, while Grobmeier failed to return within the 20-count as allowed under the rules. I immediately awarded the match to Londos.

"Londos and his seconds, surrounded by police protection, left the ring. The spectators were still milling about and, although I followed closely behind the police, I was cut off by the crowd.

"A spectator hit me just below the upper right cheek bone with a cane. Immediately thereafter I was hit behind the ear, the blow stunning me and knocking me to the floor. When I regained my feet my assailants could not be identified."

Sharpe was able to leave his home a day or two later, but a reaction set in which compelled him to undergo operations on his jaw, as a result of which many teeth had to be removed. Blood poisoning developed and Sharpe was near death for several weeks. It was months before he was able to resume his business.

He has retained Robert J. Kratky and Gilbert Whitley as his attorneys. He will contend it was his employer's duty to furnish proper safeguards against such attacks.

LES SCHULTE TO MEET WHALEN IN AMATEUR GO

Heavyweight, welterweight and featherweight boxers of championship and near-championship rating in the local field are scheduled to clash Thursday night in three return battles announced last night by Matchmaker Willie Miller as special events on an amateur glove tourney, marking the opening of the indoor season at the South Broadway A. C., 2300 South Seventh boulevard.

Miller has booked Les Schulte of the Business Men's A. C., and Pat "Red" Whalen of the Olympian A. C. for his heavyweight special. Schulte fought his way to the National A. A. U. junior heavyweight throne last season, but he had to step lively to win a close decision over Whalen in a hard-fought bout at the Olympian arena early in the summer.

George Miller, welterweight member of the Business Men's A. C. squad, will have a chance in another feature of the South Broadway card, to square accounts with Johnny Bush, fast-stepping ace of the Tower A. C. team. Miller had Bush on the floor four times during the early part of their rousing debate at the Elks' Club two weeks ago but the Tower A. C. boxer rallied in time to earn the decision on points.

The featherweight special, bringing Walter Olsen of the South Broadway team, and Harry Greb, the Business Men's squad, will undoubtedly settle the question of supremacy, in considerable doubt after their smashing encounter at the Olympian arena a few weeks back. The fans vigorously booed the decision favoring Greb on that occasion.

Joey Parks, Western A. A. U. featherweight champion, and Joe Sansone, lightweight star of the Olympian A. C., are candidates for other special attractions on the South Broadway program, according to Matchmaker Miller, who also announced that 18 boxers have filed entries to date as candidates for pairings in the preliminary events.

Republics of South America, Prematurely Self-Governing, Are Fighting for Stability

By William Jefferson Dennis,
Author of The History of Tacna-Arica.

MINOR disturbances in the Caribbean countries can be passed over as the normal amount of tropical political fever, but when progressive nations like Peru and Argentina stage major revolts to the accompaniment of rumblings in Brazil, Panama and Cuba, with the ink scarcely dry on the new regime in Bolivia, a political phenomenon exists which cannot be dismissed lightly. Friendly observers who had begun to believe that orderly governments had evolved, especially in Peru and the Argentine Republic, are rudely disappointed. They, together with numerous investors and more numerous exporters, naturally are looking for some explanations.

In Peru all conditions for a revolution have existed for two years. The President has had exiled opponents who have never ceased plotting for his overthrow since his entry by a coup d'etat in 1919, but since his re-election with no opposing candidate last year he has been sitting on dynamite. The abortive student uprisings of last year and this spring were not dangerous, although they indicated feeling, but within the army serious dissatisfaction has existed which needed only a leader and an occasion.

The leader appeared in the person of Col. Sanchez Cerro, a veteran of European wars. This officer, from his barracks at Arequipa, headed up the revolt against President Leguia. The nation, while regretting military disturbances, secretly longed for the overthrow of Leguia. This feeling permeated even high army circles and the Ministry. Consequently when Col. Cerro hoisted the standard of revolt in the south, the head of the Cabinet, Huaman de los Heros, resigned.

Will Investigate Leguia Finances.

News of this stirred the ever ready students to parade, nor were they dispersed until actually at the President's gates. The atmosphere was charged in Lima as reports from Arequipa said the revolt had spread to Puno and Cuzco. On Sunday, Aug. 24, Senor Leguia attended the races as usual, but on the way home was followed by demonstrators.

That evening he consulted with high military officials and tried to form a cabinet. Long into the night the President tried to conjure the crisis and had actually sworn in one of the members when a committee of military officers entered and requested his resignation. The newly sworn official attempted to assume charge, but the committee said that nothing less than the end of the Leguia administration would do and that they would go to any lengths to have their way. The aged President acquiesced.

Because of his age and health his punishment for political reasons may be mild, but there will be an attempt to ascertain the status of his financial operations. As virtual dictator of the nation vast budgets were distributed under his direction and rumors questioned his accounting for great sums of money. Zest was added to these rumors by the financial depression which for months has been acute. The failure of the military to receive back salaries, of course, had a bearing on its attitude.

In Argentina President Hipolito Irigoyen, the mystery man, had a more mysterious overthrow. He was not an unconstitutional ruler and only in 1928 was the idol of a popular election. But he was too political to cope with a realistic depression of finances and a wave of revolutionary psychology. His overthrow was a surprise.

Of course, deadlocks in Legislatures and Ministry had caused great dissatisfaction. His own radical party members disagreed with him and he became a man without a party. Being a personalist or individualist he ignored the crisis and assumed indifference generally to people and things. This was accentuated by his reticence, isolation and dislike for publicity.

He was accused of no crimes, but was blamed for inactivity in a great financial crisis, refusing to appoint a national bank director until the bank was injured, naming of favorites in offices and governing without a Congress; the worst charge was that he wanted to become a dictator.

Revolution Dress Suit Affair.

The examples of Bolivia and Peru seemed to stimulate elements opposed to the President to action, and disorders began immediately after the overthrow of Senor Leguia. Ordinary precautions of having the soldiers confined to barracks, guards posted, the fleet assembled at Buenos Aires and the like were taken and the world was surprised when dispatches from Buenos Aires stated that Irigoyen had resigned. This had been urged on him by his own radical leaders and some of his Ministers.

Psychology was responsible for much of his election popularity; he was a man of mystery, refused interviews, snubbed aristocrats, although one himself, lived frugally, aided the poor, believed radical political philosophy, etc., his lieutenants said. He himself was seldom seen; in fact at one time it was declared that he did not exist except in reputation. Even his age was a talking point, since he is actually older than he claimed and looked much younger.

Now when a flesh and blood crisis came the success of the Peruvian military in deposing Senor Leguia seemed to set off an unpremeditated spark and within a few days a great figure in Argentinian history was deposed.

Revolution in South America is no mean affair of the jungle where the dramatis personae consists of hombres with colorful sombreros, fierce mustaches and fiercer machetes. They are affairs of dress suits and top hats, doctors of philosophy and Major-Generals, airplanes, machine guns and cruisers. Buenos Aires and Lima are modern and beautiful cities, even elegant urban centers. The former is the largest Spanish-speaking city in the world, and, after Paris, the largest city of the Latin races. Its boulevards, plazas and public buildings are world famous, but in those civilized surroundings last week men fell limp, withered by the fire of modern arms.

Causes of These Modern Revolts.

Calvary regiments figure in the dispatches; the finest calvary regiment in the world is doubtless the Grenadiers of San Martin. Composed of youths of the best families, clothed with the picturesque uniform of the epoch of San Martin himself and mounted on the finest of thoroughbred horses, it is a crack cavalry unit. Yet in this modern and elegant city disorder and bloodshed have come in this year of our Lord and the Kellogg pact, 1930.

Nobody is more conscious of the causes of these revolutions, and none discuss their cure more than the Latin Americans themselves. There is no exact formula for any nation's revolutions; if there were it would not fit those of another country. Nevertheless some of the generalities made can apply to Argentina and Peru with special explanations.

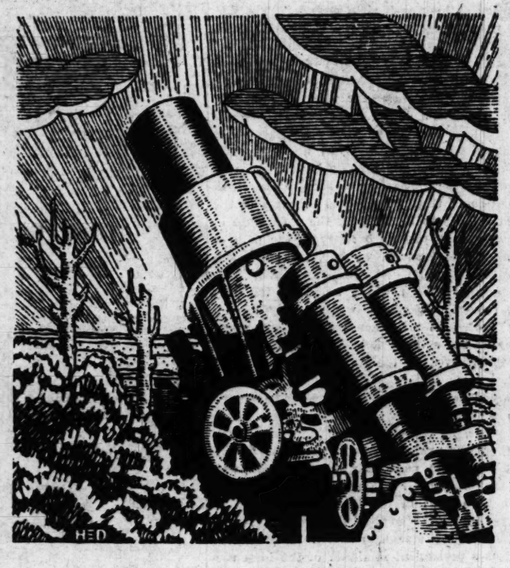
Some think it is the form of War Experts Were Merely Muddlers; Civilian Minds Won World Conflict

England's Greatest Military Historian Reviews Four Years of "Criminal Mistakes"

No Napoleon Appeared on Any Front, and Errors of German High Command Were More Than Matched by Incompetency of British and French Generals — The Older They Were, the Dumber.



President Wilson's Written Words Hurt Enemy More Than American Bullets — Two Yankee Inventions, the Tank and Machine Gun, Were Greatest Factors in Bringing Victory.

By CLAIR KENAMORE,
Of the Post-Dispatch Editorial Staff.

A BOOK on the World War by Capt. B. H. Liddell Hart is a literary event of importance and a historical contribution of the first order. Capt. Liddell Hart, since the World War, has been military correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph and is military editor of the Encyclopedia Brittanica. He is the author of many essays upon phases of the war and his scheme of attack in modern warfare has been adopted by the British Army. He is a student of military affairs of the first rank, and as an author enjoys the peculiar distinction of being accepted as an authority in his own, the allied and former enemy countries. Naturally then, "The Real War, 1914-1918," published in America by the Atlantic Monthly Press and Little, Brown & Co., is a subject of much discussion and dispute on both sides of the Atlantic.

To American readers, probably the most interesting parts of his book will be those having to do with American participation in the war; and on this subject, as on every other, Liddell Hart's method is to shear away the obscuring foliage and permit the reader to look at the bare trunk of the tree. It is a wholesome thing for Americans to get thus the opinions of a free-minded and little biased critic of another nation upon the performance of their own troops in the great war. He does not minimize the immense moral effect of the presence of American troops in France, but he does make clear the very minor part they took in the military operations; and in the achievng of the final victory he gives a much greater weight to the speeches of President Wilson than to the deeds of American soldiers.

Praise for Two Soldiers.

In his capacity of soldier and observer Liddell Hart scans the field for a military genius, and in the four and a half years of war he is able to find but two who show even a touch of the gift which marked Napoleon and Scipio Africanus. These were, first, Capt. Van Hoffman of the German staff, regarded by his fellows as a witty flaneur, but who planned the battles of the Masurian Lakes and forced a vacillating and unwilling commander into action. His insistence put the machine gun in the German army.

The other is Gallieni, Military Governor of Paris, the bespectacled student, who appeared at the British headquarters of Gen. French wearing yellow leather puttees and black button shoes. "No reputable British officer would be seen talking to such a damned comedian," said a British staff officer.

Gallieni's great feat was the attack on Von Kluck's flank in the first battle of the Marne. Gallieni was Military Governor of Paris, an important post, with troops of his own and wide powers of discretion in their use. Both the British and French field armies were in fast retreat before the great German onrush. Information was received by allied commanders on Sept. 2 that the German drive, instead of heading directly for Paris, was passing by to the north, in a westerly direction.

The Saving of Paris.

This news affected nobody but Gallieni, who drew from it inspiration. He seems to have spent the day on the telephone pleading with Joffre to send him troops to strike Von Kluck in the flank, already drawn thin by the headlong drive of the German advance. Joffre could not see it. Gallieni went in person to the British headquarters. Gen. French was absent and could not be reached by telephone. By night Gallieni got to Joffre in person and his fiery and inspired arguments moved the slow-witted French commander. Joffre finally accepted the scheme and the order for the attack in flank was given.

Gallieni was tireless. He stripped the Paris defenses of troops—probably the most desperate gamble that a French commander could take—and the "Army of Paris" struck north of the Marne into the tender flank of Von Kluck. And the first battle of the Marne was over, for the Germans could not stand this menace to their communications, already too tenuous. The invader drew back and established himself along the general lines which became the trench fronts for the years of war. This inspiration, based on knowledge and sound military judgment, has been variously attributed to other leaders, especially Foch and to Franchet D'Esperey. The version given here by Capt. Liddell Hart is that now generally accepted.

That Taxicab Brigade.

In this movement occurred the famous episode of the Paris taxicabs. An unexpected division detrained near Paris but forty miles from the front where Gallieni wanted them to be. The railroad could handle but half of them. Gallieni collected 600 taxicabs, bundling passengers out into the street, and sent them to the point where the division was detrained, loaded them up and sent them to the front. Gallieni himself watched the performance with amusement and said, "Well, at least it isn't commonplace."

Capt. Liddell Hart's book begins, as do virtually all such works, with a discussion of the causes of the war, and while he brings little else new to this theme, he throws a light upon one hitherto dim and strongly interesting point.

In the exchange of messages immediately preceding the declarations of war, the Kaiser grew nervous through a fear that his descent into war would be too obvious to posterity and that he would stand condemned as having forced a war upon Europe. Apparently he had no moral concern at doing this or fear of the outcome. But there was a certain dread that history might regard him as a maniac who had set fire to the world. The German ultimatum to France demanded to know if France would remain neutral in a Russo-German war and gave her eighteen hours for a reply. If she agreed to remain neutral, France must hand over to Germany the fortresses of Verdun and Toul as a pledge. This last clause was added by Von Moltke and naturally destroyed the last faint hope, if, indeed, there ever was one, of peace. The only reason he could give for this was that all Germany's military plans were made and the orders drawn, and these provided for a war on two fronts, against Russia and against France and to accord with his plans and that everything might move smoothly. Von Moltke must have France in the war.

Concerning the great captains of the British forces Liddell Hart has not much to say that will bring solace or comfort to any of them.

French, Haig and Joffre.

Gen. French was a weakling, unsure and uncertain, and never quite ready. Haig, who succeeded him, was the beau ideal of the cavalry officer, believing that he commanded by divine grace, that his orders must eventually bring victory, and apparently never having a new idea in the entire course of the war. He spent his soldiers lavishly, fondly confident his country would replace them.

Of the French, Joffre was an incurable optimist who always thought that victory was just around the corner and never had any sound evidence to bolster this belief. Foch was a suave gentleman trained in the wars and without a streak of military intelligence beyond that of any of his assistants. His one idea was to attack. Petain and Mangin were somewhat better, especially Petain at the time he was sent to Verdun to hold that "heart of France" after Joffre had "declassed" and taken away its big guns.

Petain had two great pieces of luck. A fortunate bombardment by French long-range guns destroyed all of the German 17-inch howitzers. The other stroke of good fortune was the blowing up, possibly by an airplane bomb, of the great German artillery park near Spincourt where 450,000 heavy shells were stored, unwisely kept fused.

In the American view, Liddell Hart falls into the accepted error of British writers in attributing to the land soldiers of Great Britain a greater part than they really played. There seems to be an unconscious conspiracy on the part of European writers to minimize the efforts of the French armies and to exaggerate the importance of the British. This, in a way, is natural for British writers who served in the war, since, to a soldier, his own piece of the battlefield seems unquestionably to be the most important of the whole front.

In considering the German commanders, it is shown clearly that Ludendorff was always the brains and Hindenburg ever the figurehead, although it is Liddell Hart's opinion that Falkenhayn was the most scientific General on the side of the Central Powers, but he was fatally handicapped by a "penny wise and pound foolish" habit which hampered him when great effort was necessary and tripped him when he was well under way.

The Transcendent Error.

The inactivity of the British battle fleet is well and ably accounted for and the effect this had upon the potency of British arms is well presented. "The shadow of the submarine was longer than the shadow of Nelson's column." England's war machine always had been an amphibious one, the land force or the sea force being the principal performer and the other force acting as an adjunct. But in this war her soldiers were sent to fight out of sight or sound of their navy, and this brought about a great rattling of dead bones in the military offices in London.

To Capt. Liddell Hart the greatest crime of the war and the transcendent error in a long tragedy of errors was Paschendale. This mud hole, where the High Command sent so many thousand British soldiers to die, has taken such a hold upon his mind that it possibly has affected his rational view of his officers. One gathers that, if he could, he would bring to courtmartial every staff man who sent new troops into Paschendale to die. He relates that after the Germans had withdrawn a high officer had himself transported to that field, and when he had seen what there was to see he burst into tears and said, "and we have been sending troops into this."

Argonne-Meuse Unnecessary.

The first action of the first American army was the pinching out of the St. Mihiel salient, a good job expeditiously done, but Capt. Liddell Hart cannot understand why the pincers which Gen. Pershing applied here should have had on their right jaw two regular divisions and six National Army divisions, while on the left jaw, which had the same distance to travel and the same opposition to encounter, there was only one division, and that a National Guard division. The scheme of "limited objective," which ruined Falkenhayn abandoned by most other leaders as antiquated, hampering and futile, was employed here by Gen. Pershing and because it was enforced the greater bag of prisoners got away. Gen. Pershing's orders, which Liddell Hart has read with great care, he finds to be confusing and obscure, and, all in all, he thinks that the staff work was amateurish and calculated to lose lives of soldiers. The St. Mihiel operation was a dream battle come true.

The Argonne-Meuse battle was entirely dif-

No Serious Danger to Republic Signified in Recent Election In Germany, Marx Declares

He Ascribes Large Radical Gains to Resentment Against "Unjust Versailles Treaty" and Demagogic Agitation.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.

SELDOM has an election day been looked forward to with keener interest both in the country concerned and foreign countries than that on September 14 when the new German Reichstag was elected to succeed the parliament that had been dissolved on July 15 because of its vote to annul the emergency order of President von Hindenburg which had been made necessary by the severely distressed financial situation.

For months a tremendous agitation had been carried on by the National Socialists, the Radical right, who had elected 32 Reichstag deputies in the election of May, 1924, had dropped to 14 in the election of December, 1924, and then to 12 in May, 1928. There was something distinctly feverish about the whole situation. The German people were dismayed at the heavy burdens imposed upon them for the next eight years by the Young plan. The severe economic crisis which exists in the whole world naturally made itself felt in Germany in an especially high degree. The road was clear for an unbounded opposition without any sense of responsibility. Vast sums have to be found by the Reich and the municipalities for almost 3,000,000 unemployed. Although it was summer, unemployment showed only a trifling decline and the obviously false assertion of the opposition that the difficult German economic and financial situation was the result of the mistaken policies of the Bruening Cabinet found all too readily willing ears. It was easy for those irresponsible demagogic elements to stir up the people's passions. And hence the gains of the Radical parties, both of the right and left, were generally expected.

Vote Heaviest in 11 Years.

Alfred Hugenberg, leader of the German National party, also incomprehensibly welcomed these menacing indications with an approval which was assuredly not genuine. This man who had accomplished the feat of actually disintegrating the once strong Conservative party boasted that his party and the National Socialists together had a chance of securing a majority in the new Reichstag. Instead of that, the number of German National deputies drops from 103 in December, 1924, and 73 in May, 1928, to about 40. This shattering catastrophe for the party was brought about by an utterly false policy—the senseless campaign against the acceptance of the Young plan and the mad demand that Germany should refuse to pay any reparations. The efforts of the German People's party and the Democratic party to bring about the union of all the bourgeois elements unfortunately failed. The Democratic party felt itself so weak that it even changed its name, and under the designation German State party entered a badly matched alliance with the young German order which stands politically to the right.

Possible Combinations.

Thus it came to the dismaying result of Sept. 14. Not since 1919 has such a great percentage of the electors voted. The participation varied from 80 to 90 per cent. The Socialists, heretofore the strongest party in the Reichstag, maintain this position although with a loss of about ten seats and come back to Parliament with 143 deputies. The second strongest party is that of the National Socialists with 107 deputies against 12 in the last Reichstag. Then come the Communists with 76 and the Center, the only bourgeois party that made any gains, with about 70 deputies. These numbers will be somewhat increased by adding together the surplus votes in the various election districts. These however, will not materially alter the situation.

The question now arises: What is the outlook for the formation of a Cabinet and the lines to be followed in Germany's political life in view of this result of the Reichstag election? The number of the Reichstag deputies now amounts to about 575 which means that any Government with a majority back of it must be supported by at least 288 deputies. The coalition of the Socialists, Center, German People's, State and the Bavarian People's party so-called, no longer commands a majority. Hence another party must be added, possibly the Economic party with about 25 deputies, in order to secure the required majority. Such a coalition would have about 300 votes. The coalition of the moderate right from the German Nationals through the People's party and the Economic party to the Center and the Bavarian People's party would have only about 230 votes. The parties heretofore represented in the Bruening Government, even if one adds the Christian Socialists and the Peasant party hardly reaches the 200 mark. The Treviranus group which seceded from the German Nationals was able to elect only two deputies. A coalition of the Socialists and the National Socialists and Communists would command about 330 votes, but such a union is unthinkable in any circumstances.

As the situation is, the only majority which actually possesses the necessary inner coherence would be the great coalition with the addition of some smaller parties. This would be the only one that would give any promise of continuance of the foreign policy heretofore followed by Germany. But even if a Government should be formed with the support of this majority of some 300 votes, it would mean a very difficult task for its leaders.

Disturbing Elements.

If the National Socialists as they have at times intimated, should work together with the Communists to disturb the orderly course of Reichstag activities, this could be effected without much difficulty. For the from 180 to 190 deputies who are determined to hinder and confuse the proceedings of Parliament by all possible means, form a disturbing element which is not to be underestimated. An earnest and grave warning must go out to all the bourgeois parties in Germany irrespective of what policies they have heretofore represented, to lay aside all petty partisan wishes and interests in view of the extraordinary dangerous position in which Germany now finds herself and to make common cause with like minded parties with the sole aim of furthering the welfare of the whole German people. It must in particular be expected of the Socialists that they abandon their petty policies of the last months which were aimed at capturing votes and that they regard the welfare of the state higher than partisan interests. Chancellor Bruening and his party, the Center, have for years shaped their policies along these lines. The reward has come. The Center is the only non-Socialist party which despite all the responsibilities it has borne since the founding of the republic, has increased importantly the number of its electors and hence its Reichstag representation.

Any serious menace for the pre-

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy, or predatory poverty.

Why Bridges Were Covered.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE editorial in the Post-Dispatch on the subject of "the covered bridge mystery contains many amusing reasons for the old covered bridges, now almost as scarce as hen's teeth.

When I was a boy I lived on a farm near Decatur, Ill., and frequently drove to that city for lumber and other heavy commodities. There was a covered bridge across Stevens Creek, a stream of the larger size, and my recollection is very vivid of the horses and mules shying slightly as they would enter this bridge but quieting down immediately thereafter because their view of the stream and objects far below was cut off, and the interior of the covered bridge allayed their nervousness.

H. B. MORSE.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE discussion as to why bridges were covered in the old days: I wonder why the obvious reason was overlooked, that is, in order to protect what was under the cover, the same reason used for covering a house or a barn or any other building. The bridges were built almost entirely of wood and the covers naturally added some years to the life of the structures.

R. E. NORRIS.

Berryville, Ark.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THERE really isn't any mystery connected with the covers over covered bridges. In the days when cattle were driven about the roads it was necessary to cover bridges in order to get the stock to cross over. Otherwise the cattle would wander off into the stream on either side or perhaps jump off if they got on the bridge at all. With covers and the ends built up like open doors the bridge presented the appearance of a barn. This explanation is that of an old man I asked near the covered bridge on Gravois road over a creek not far from Morse's Mill.

OTTMAR ROTHACKER.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR discussion of the origin of the covered wooden bridge stirred many pleasant memories of childhood surrey and buggy trips in Indiana when the covered bridge was a delightful adventure on the high road. The covering and walls served the same purpose as blinders for spirited horses.

GEORGE H. SHARE.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN the early days bridges were built by craftsmen who were skilled in forming spans with trusses by assembling various timbers with mortise and tenon joinery. These joining places to remain rigid had to be kept hard and dry. If water was permitted to enter it would soften the wood. Ice would burst out the mortises. As these craftsmen knew how to construct rigid structures entirely out of wood timbers, they also knew how to preserve their spans and trusses. It was easy to repair the siding and roof, without interfering with traffic, but to repair a single truss might block the traffic for weeks or months. A covered bridge when properly taken care of will last four times the life of an open bridge under the same traffic load.

WILLIAM D. HENRY.

Greenville, Ill.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I ONCE asked an old timer why bridges were covered. He was one of the builders of a covered bridge.

His answer was: "Back in my days, when automobiles were unknown, everybody drove a horse and buggy. And quite often when coming to a stream the horse would balk and refuse to go across. Also when driving cattle, sheep, etc., to market, it wasn't nearly as much trouble to get them through the covered bridge. Anyone who has ever tried to drive a bunch of hogs across an open bridge can easily understand this."

WILLARD MABREY.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

BRIDGES were originally covered because that was the only way people knew how to build them. Some of the advantages were the protection of nails and flooring and travelers from the elements and the safeguarding of horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. There once were many covered bridges in Ohio, where was born 77 years ago.

WILLIAM B. BOLIN SR.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN the early days horses, the main source of transportation, were inclined to be more wild and scary on a bridge over a stream, so the old philosophers of that day hit upon the idea of covering the bridges over like a barn. Then they could be driven across without trouble or delay.

Later on as the population increased horses became more tame and sophisticated and the old covered bridges began to disappear a board at a time. Then came automobiles, and anybody who says they do not try to make it across whether the bridge is there or not, does not know his moron.

Now that we have settled that, let's see if we can't do something about getting the cover charge off the Eads Bridge, then go out and help the Cardinals win another world's pennant.

OUR VANISHING FARMS.

There are 4342 fewer farms in Missouri than there were in 1925. That announcement has been made by the director of the census. The figures, it is explained, are preliminary and subject to correction. It is further explained that any tract of land of less than three acres which yielded agricultural products to the value of $250 last year is classified as a farm in this calculation. Yet, with all allowance for possible errors and methods of reckoning, the truth, recorded by each decennial census for the last 30 years, is again emphasized that people are leaving the land.

It is obvious, therefore, that the mechanical inventions that have ripped through the deadly isolation of the farm have not stopped the tribal movement to the cities. Notwithstanding the radio has brought the news and the music and the wise cracks of the world to once marooned farm houses, and the automobile has resolved the erstwhile loneliness of the country into the chatty, visiting relations of the compact community, the glamour of the city still fascinates and lures.

The real glamour of the city is found, of course, in its reputedly greater economic opportunity. Where or when that credo originated we have no idea. "The boy who made good in the city," returning in the fullness of fame and fortune to dazzle the companions of his barefoot years, may have first appeared in the Athens of Pericles. Certainly he is an immemorial prodigy. He has strutted the stage of history. But never was urban opportunity so boisterously proclaimed, so opulently heralded, as in the hectic decade of American mass production that collided headon with reality on an October morning a year ago.

Since then the contrast between the city's golden plenty and the country's penury has faded from the picture. If the country can never know the flowing abundance of the city in its flood-tide of prosperity, neither can the country know the city's destitution when gripped by hard times. There are no bread lines in the country, no endless tramping search for a job, no prospect of a roofless day when the rent can't be paid, no resort at last to the agencies of charity.

But youth will never be dissuaded from adventure by the hazard of the chase. If desertion of the land is to be stopped it is patent some way must be discovered for seating agriculture side by side with industry at the table of opportunity. This is an imperative obligation which our statesmanship and industrial leadership must meet. For the earth, as symbolized by Diana of the Ephesians, is now, as then, the great mother who must nurture us all. Goldsmith's familiar lines carry an eternal truth:

> Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
> Where wealth accumulates and men decay.
> Princes and Lords may flourish or may fade,
> A breath can make them as a breath has made.
> But a bold peasantry, their country's pride,
> When once destroyed can never be supplied.

Missouri's story of vanishing farms is told more or less by every other state. It is a challenge to all the urban captains and kings. If the land dies the captaincies and the kingdoms must inevitably perish.

THE REVEILLE OF THE RUBAIYAT.

Five years ago the announcement that 135 more quatrains of Omar Khayyam had been discovered in an old Calcutta bookshop would have been but the saddest of reminders. Leave them there, we would have said disconsolately—what good could there be for more of the Tentmaker's stanzas in this weary land? In those days of Calvin the Wise we couldn't find use for the quatrains Fitzgerald immortalized, let along take on any more. But today, ah, today! Dejection turns to hope; the valley of the shadow yields to the promise of a brighter day. In this autumn of our discontent news of finding more verses of the wilderness singer is a happy omen, one which portends the Tomorrow when the Empty Cup shall again be filled with the Balm of Life—the Grape, the Grape that can with Logic absolute the Two-and-Seventy jarring Sects confute. More of Omar's quatrains! Bring them on. Most of us are ready now and to those still slumbering the shrill reveille of the Rubaiyat:

> Wake! For the Sun who scatters into flight
> The Stars before him from the Field of Night,
> Drives Night along with them from Heaven, and strikes
> The Sultan's Turret with a Shaft of Light.

ONE BY ONE.

Eight years ago the United States Senate voted 46 to 32 in favor of seating Truman H. Newberry of Michigan, trail blazer for candidates who would buy their seats in the Senate. Today only eight of the 46 who voted to admit him are still in office. They are Hale of Maine, Keyes of New Hampshire, McNary of Oregon, Oddie of Nevada, Phipps of Colorado, Shortridge of California, Smoot of Utah and Watson of Indiana. On the other hand, of the 32 who voted to bar Newberry, 24 still retain membership, many of them leaders, including Borah, Capper, Jones, Norris, Ashurst, Caraway, Glass, Harrison, King, McKellar, Robinson of Arkansas, Swanson and the two Walshes.

The case, then, is simply this: while occasionally one of the 48 divisions of the United States may overlook its duty to the rest of the nation and send to the Senate a candidate who has been guilty of excessive campaign expenditures, the people of the country at large soon register effective protest. The rapid retirement at the hands of the electorate of Senators who voted to seat Newberry was so impressive that when Frank L. Smith of Illinois came up for the oath of office five years later, after having spent $458,782 in behalf of his candidacy, including $125,000 contributed by Samuel Insull, Chicago utility magnate, the Senate voted 61 to 23 to bar him.

Already those who voted to seat Smith are beginning to suffer the fate of those who voted for Newberry. Of those favoring Smith, three are no longer members of the Senate, three decided not to stand for renomination and three have been defeated in the primaries. Deneen of Illinois, Blease of South Carolina and Ransdell of Louisiana are the Smith lame ducks. Blease was one of the two Democrats who voted for Smith, and Ransdell, who was absent when the resolution was voted on, had made it known that he would have voted for admission. Several others who voted for Smith are in a most precarious position as Nov. 4 draws near, Pine of Oklahoma and Steck of Iowa, for example.

The retirement to private life of Senators who voted for Newberry and Smith is an impressive record, one which justifies faith in representative government. Mrs. McCormick of Illinois and Secretary of Labor Davis of Pennsylvania may present themselves at the next Senate for admission. They may press cases for the oath of office, but as they do so their excessive campaign expenditures will be as millstones around their necks. They can be seated only by the consent of the Senators themselves, and the fate of the supporters of Newberry and Smith will be a grim reminder of how effectively the voters of the country at large can protest.

EDUCATION IN A PROCRUSTEAN BED.

William Jennings Bryan University opened its doors to its first freshman class in the Rhea High School building at Dayton, Tenn., Sept. 18, pending the completion of its own college building.

In the words of its prospectus, it is to be "an institution which recognizes revelation and accepts the supernatural." Under the provisions of its charter it can appoint no one to its faculty who will not profess belief in the direct inspiration and infallibility of the Bible, the virgin birth, the story of creation as presented in the Book of Genesis, "the bodily resurrection of all persons, judgment to come, the everlasting blessedness of the saved and the everlasting punishment of the lost." The charter further provides that "this platform shall never be changed or amended, but shall constitute the religious belief of the institution as long as it shall endure." The personnel of the faculty has not yet been announced, but the prospectus assures us that "the highest educational and scholastic standards will be observed from the beginning and all teachers associated with the institution for the first year will have either a doctor's or a master's degree."

The new college frankly proclaims its purpose to elevate dogma above inquiry, creed above science, authority above reason. It proudly embraces as its educational goal the inculcation of belief rather than the stimulation of thought. It thus proposes at the very outset to deny to its students the experience of a real education, by placing barriers in the path of their thought. Its purpose, we feel, is a mistaken one. Teachers of ability and character will not subscribe to ancient creeds which stand in the way of honest research. Students will scarcely respect or follow professors who nominally accept views which they do not actually hold. Nor will religious belief be well served by the forcible suppression of criticism.

William Jennings Bryan made a valuable contribution to American life. For many years, better than any other, he represented the interests of the common people as against those of the powerful minority. It was Bryan, more than any other man, who prepared the ground for the growth of progressivism which bore fruit in the legislation enacted in the early years of the Wilson administration. It is a pity that his lasting memorial should be one which will stand as a permanent reminder of the least useful phase of his great career.

THE GULL'S WAY.

No man who asks only for a tall ship and a star to steer her by could be a dodger. Love of the white sail's shaking, blown spume and a gray mist on the sea's face goes hand in hand with forthrightness regardless of fear or favor. And so John Masefield in London, speaking over the radio to an American audience, settled once and for all the controversy which has been raging among our critics over his famous poem, "Sea Fever." All the trouble was about the "go" in its first line: "I must go down to the sea again, to the lonely sea and the sky." Some of the best minds said "go" didn't belong there, others insisted that it did and the middle-grounders held the word was needed in print but not in a spoken rendition. Without consideration for the personnel of the groups, the Poet Laureate decided the question with an unequivocal inclusion of "go." It was a "clear call that may not be denied" and as it sounded the wind blew like a whetted knife. And now that the matter is settled, as someone wrote in about the covered bridge mystery, let's go out and help the Cardinals win the pennant.

A CONTRAST.

The most commanding figure in the Republican party today in the United States is Dwight Morrow. If Mr. Hoover were serving his second term Mr. Morrow would be generally accepted as his party's next presidential candidate.

Gov. Roosevelt of New York occupies a comparable position in the Democratic party. Were he in vigorous health he would be first in the field for the Democratic nomination for President.

What raised Mr. Morrow to his present stature? Not his professional career as a lawyer, striking as it has been. Not his financial acumen, though impressive enough to win the purple of a Morgan partnership. Not his success as Ambassador to Mexico, fine as that was. Mr. Morrow achieved presidential size by his unequivocal demand as a candidate in New Jersey's senatorial primary for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Like Mr. Morrow, Mr. Roosevelt is a man of distinguished parts, with a larger experience in practical politics and with the same courage of his convictions. He, too, spurning evasion, demands the repeal of the eighteenth amendment where a lesser politician might have kept silence or indulged in meaningless twaddle.

What a contrast the sincerity of these two men is to the craven deportment of their respective parties in Missouri!

If O. Henry were only in South America now!

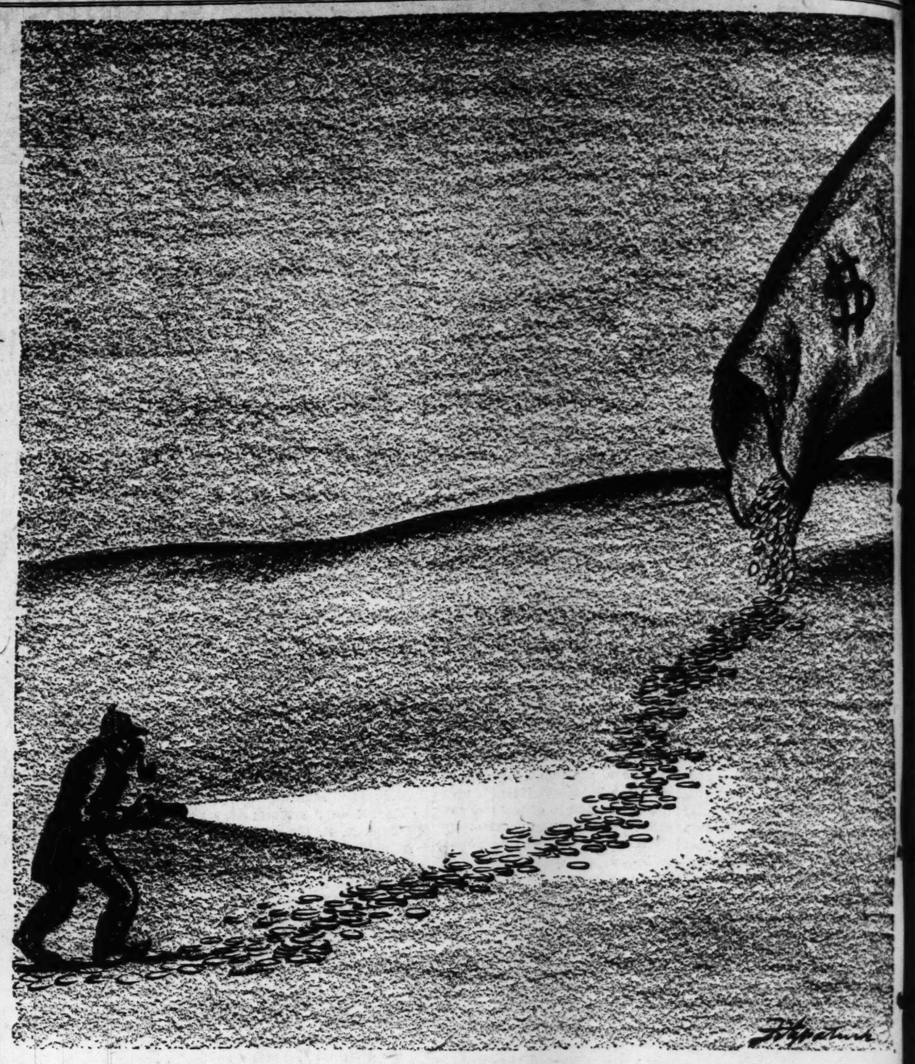
Now about that Peruvian professor's remarks concerning Christopher Columbus at the Americanists' Congress in Berlin. We have always stood for educational progress and put great reliance in scientific research. Hard as it will be, we can in time, we suppose, learn to regard the discoverer of America as a Catalonian corsair instead of the son of a Genoese wool weaver. The adventurous spirit whom we had always thought of as befriended by Spanish royalty could finally, we guess, become a rebel against King Juan II of Aragon. Evidently we could make up our minds to supplant the voyage of the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria by way of the Canary Islands and Sargasso Sea with a trip of Danish seamen via Iceland, Greenland and Labrador. But as for accepting a date other than 1492—never! That year is one of the eternal verities. It belongs with the stars. A beacon light to children groping in the dim corridors of history, its fixity steadies men and women shaken by the constant flux of a changing world. We serve notice here and now—1492 to the end of time. It was ever thus, and ever shall be, world without end. 1492. Amen.



NOT HARD TO FOLLOW MRS. McCORMICK'S TRAIL

The Purpose of the College

Duty of university is to supply society with group of superior individuals, to become its leaders; too often, in our present materialistic age, this is lost sight of; American civilization cries for reform which only those versed in the humanities can bring; modern youth on the whole is ready to answer the call.

Written for the Post-Dispatch by Otto Heller, Dean of the Graduate School, Washington University.

THE aims of college training could hardly be more intelligently and high-mindedly defined than was recently done by a dozen Dartmouth undergraduates: "It is the purpose of the college to provide a selected group of men with a comprehensive background of information about the world and its problems and to stimulate them to rational thinking, philosophic understanding, creative imagination and esthetic sensitiveness, and to inspire them to use these developed powers in becoming leaders in service to society."

To be told so unequivocally by those young men that their mind is set on leadership, and to fathom their intentions, gives comfort to the soul of the "humanist." They purpose to win prestige for character and intellect; they will set so many good examples that in the end the nation may conquer its characteristic aversion to putting its best men into its foremost places.

Under a democratic scheme of government more than under any other scheme, the decisive public influence should be wielded, not by the richest and craftiest and most domineering, but by the most enlightened, upright and best educated citizens. To the indictment that this is an aristocratic way of thinking, I plead unreservedly guilty. Aristocracy means, simply, the rule of the best. A commonwealth cannot reach greatness and excellence save through its worthiest elements; therefore, democratic society is in duty bound to create its own aristocracy, lest bestness languish and perish from public life.

In no way can the university give better account of itself than by supplying the body politic with an ample contingent of superior individuals. Our society today needs leveling much less than it needs leavening, and the university ought surely to furnish the most effective fermentum. Having laid the solid foundations of material prosperity, the people of this country are entitled to a richer civilization than our men of light and leading propagate.

Culture is a condition of social life that begets noble incentives. The gain of surplus property and power is not in itself a noble end. Accordingly, a society in which money-making has become the one irresistible motive of private action and wealth the principal criterion of public esteem—as is unquestionably true of our America—has either not yet found the ways to culture or has recklessly forsaken them.

When foreign nations lament their lapse from the older graces of living and describe it as "Americanization," they implicitly label this country as the crassest exponent of high living and low thinking. From sheer force of habit, we excuse our materialism with that stale and misleading phrase about our youngness, and thus unload the blame upon our pioneer ancestry. At the same time, we keep telling the world in no subdued tones of voice that day by day in every way we are getting bigger and better—until we ourselves fall under the magic spell of the formula.

Not often are we so rudely jarred out of our prosperous self-complacency as when Prof. Charles Eliot Norton, in his day an illustrious embodiment of the finest American traits and traditions, eloquently enlisted a graduating class at Harvard into patriotic service. "Go forth, young men," said that great teacher at the end of a baccalaureate address, "to your mission among your people. Your mission is to civilize this prosaic, materialistic, decidedly vulgar and dearly beloved America of ours."

The call to a like mission is still seasonable. Since Norton's time the people of the United States have become unquestionably the richest, probably the most progressive, in the world, possibly even the most intelligent, but certainly not the most ambitious in any spiritual respect. We have created no independent arts and letters. We have produced hardly any genius. The American theater is moribund, and the current surrogate for American drama is controlled by unlettered immigrants with both eyes to profit and without any suspicion of their artistic responsibilities. Our music is both good and original—if you will ask Mr. Otto H. Kahn—only, when it is good it isn't original, and when it is "original," it is apt to be, God help us, by George Gershwin.

Also, it appears that our personal habits have to be constitutionally amended by our good Sheppards and Volsteads and such like paragons of pastoral rectitude. We are growing in intolerance of the religious, political, economic dissenter. In our tolerance toward murder, highway robbery, housebreaking and every form of violence, we have already achieved the international and historic maximum, while in the more refined peculations we are bravely "forging" ahead. Our civilization cries for reform.

It is questioned in many quarters whether the youth of the day is as ready as was Prof. Norton's audience to answer the call to that patriotic mission. I think we can make ourselves easy on that score. We are being treated ad nauseam to harangues against the alarming demoralization of the young tribe, their ruthless selfishness, irresponsibility and irreverence. But the retrospective ladies and gentlemen who show themselves so scandalized as they contrast their caricature of modern youth with their self-portraits, nobly retouched by the magic of distance, are victims either of presbyopia or a big loss of memory. The worst that can justly be said of the young man of today is that he is not a whole lot better than his father was before him; and for his excuse it stands to reason that such faults as he possesses are not wholly unconnected with his bringing up.

Whether an educational system is good or bad is determined by the influence of its total tone and spirit on human behavior, and not by its size, expensiveness, or the temerity of its innovations. One may not disparage the youth of today without condemning our obsolete "modern" education for its vagaries, extravagances and instability. But in spite of their glaring and inexcusable shortcomings, the unprejudiced observer will have to admit that, viewed by and large, our schools are better than they were when they were worse than they are.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.

SENATOR HARRY HAWES of Missouri is going to quit public life and devote his time to a cause which lies very close to his heart—conservation. The big and genial Missourian has announced that he will not be a candidate to succeed himself next year—that when his term expires he will accept the presidency of a nature conservation commission endowed with $10,000,000.

The outdoors has a no more ardent champion than Senator Hawes. An enthusiastic and expert fisherman and huntsman, during a period of a half century he has gone to the wilds to escape the "too-sureness" of the city.

In his own words: "The camp fire makes the radiator more endurable for me; the flapjack, the bacon and the browned fish bring the 'come-back' after hard work and the hotel menu."

SINCE he has been in Congress—first as a Representative and then as Senator—Senator Hawes has done much for conservation. He introduced a bill which closed the District of Columbia to the commercial sale of black bass. Incidentally, his love for this species prompted him to write a book, "My Friend the Black Bass," which was published last March.

Hawes introduced and obtained passage of the Upper Mississippi River Fish and Game Refuge bill. He played an important part in the passage of the Fish and Game Sanctuary bill. And he is now a member of the Migratory Bird Conservation Commission.

He regards conservation both as a duty and a pleasure, believing that the ultimate success of the movement rests with the individual. Instead of sending a lawyer to call upon the polluter of streams, he advises that the guilty one be confronted by a committee of diplomatic men and women.

"I ALWAYS keep in mind," says the Senator, "that there are other things besides fishing. Sometimes the conservationist goes too far. He makes himself obnoxious by unreasonable demands. The thing to do is to adjust yourself to the changing conditions even though it interferes with the old 'fishin' hole' and the favorite spot upon the river. We cannot stop development."

Senator Hawes' gospel as a conservationist is that chivalry and "being a gentleman" should be shown in one's contact with nature and wild things just as in relations with fellow men.

In his estimation, the highest type of man is the one who carries with him to his boat, or to the banks of a stream, the same consideration and courtesy that he exchanges with his fellows in his office, in the ballroom, the theater or the church.

HAWES' HEART'S DESIRE.

From the Springfield Daily News.

HARRY HAWES sure started something when he announced his decision to quit the Senate. When you are thinking about smart boys, don't overlook him. He is achieving his heart's desire in addition to avoiding a lot of grief.

great. It was a nightmare. The staff work was slightly better and the performance of some of the commanders, especially Liggett, meritorius; but the battle was unnecessary, served no good purpose, and had objectives which were impossible. The loss of men was futile and the only good which came of it, Liddell Hart thinks, was that it prepared the American army for the forward movement of Nov. 1, which had promise of success even if the enemy had not already collapsed.

According to records collected with great care by Capt. Liddell Hart, these were the forces employed in the offensive of Sept. 26. The left wing attack through the Cambrai-St. Quentin section of the Hindenburg Line was made by 40 British and two American divisions; it was opposed by 57 German divisions. On the right wing in the Meuse-Argonne sector, there were 23 American divisions and 31 French divisions. As American divisions were about twice the size of French divisions, this would approximate 60 European divisions. Opposing these there were only 20 German divisions. But the line was very strong. Of the 2700 guns which prepared the way for the American advance, all were French and half of the gunners were Frenchmen.

Criticism of Pershing.

The objectives of the Meuse-Argonne attack were far too ambitious, in Liddel Hart's opinion, and "Pershing's orders were by no means clearly worded." This obscurity resulted in confusion after the first day's advance, and although Liggett saw the error, he could not overcome the defects. The confusion behind the line seemed ruinous to the orderly Frenchmen, who had practiced war for four years. Clemenceau visited Foch and bitterly said, "Those Americans will lose us our chance of a big victory before winter. They are all tangled up with themselves. You have tried to make Pershing see. Now let us put it up to President Wilson."

The author's final comment on American participation, particularly on American staff work, is as follows:

"With a somewhat brusque disregard of French feelings, Pershing issued a message that he wished the American army to have 'the honor of entering Sedan'—although it was now in the French sector of advance. Pershing added the encouragement or incitement, 'boundaries will not be considered as binding.' The message was passed to the corps without being shown to Liggett, and as a result the Forty-second Division on the left of the army raced for Sedan. But the vague wording produced a still more unmilitary, indeed, a burlesque, result. For the First Division—Pershing's favorite —from the center corps had also started to race thither by night, crossing the divisions of the I Corps and throwing them into confusion as it impetuously swept through them. It capped the farce by taking prisoner the commander of the Forty-second Division. Liggett, however, intervened with prompt action and vigorous language, to restrain both divisions and allow the French the courtesy of entering Sedan, thus to wipe out the bitter memory of 1870."

Too Much for Soldiers.

An opinion which has risen and spread since the Word War is that the military mind, grooved in century-old channels and rigidly trained in a military school, is not fitted to cope with the problems of a modern war, which is really not only a nation in arms, but a nation in conflict. Liddell Hart, a man of war from his youth up, seems to accept this view. A great war is too big a problem for a man whose whole life has been devoted to the study of tactics or strategy. It is big business, as an American would view it, and must be handled by men who can grasp big problems. Thus he finds Kitchener woefully narrow and incapable, and Lloyd George, who probably never fired a gun, the ideal chief of munitions.

In each of the warring countries it seems that no satisfactory progress could be made towards organization and efficiency until the civilian mind had been brought to the task. This was particularly true of England and America.

One of the most difficult ideas for the professional soldiers to grasp was the tremendous defensive power of modern offensive weapons, particularly the trench mortar and the machine gun; and it was not until civilians had forced the soldiers to accept proved facts that the British would accept the machine gun at its true value.

The Germans early put the staff work in the hands of young Generals. The allies, particularly the British, kept it in the hands of their old Generals as long as they could, and the mistake was paid for in terms of thousands of lives.

The author points out, quite strenuously for him, that the [illegible] things most potent in war and which in this instance finally turned the tide of battle were American inventions—the machine gun and the tank.

A Monumental Book.

This book of less than 500 pages is a monumental thing. The list of books which the author has read to acquire information for his book occupies 17 pages. Whether the reader agrees or not with the conclusions, he must give to Captain Liddell Hart the palm for a brilliant production, ruthlessly direct and without fear or favor. The book would be a great destroyer of reputations were not so many World War reputations already

This book of less than 500 pages is a monumental thing. The list of books which the author has read to acquire information for his own book occupies 17 pages. Whether the reader agrees or not with the conclusions, he must give to Capt. Liddell Hart the palm for a brilliant production, ruthlessly done and without fear or favor. The book would be a great destroyer of reputations were not so many World War reputations already destroyed; and, unquestionably, the greatest number of useless notables are to be found, according to Liddell Hart, in the British roster. He seems to regard Sir Henry Wilson, Gen. French's Chief of Staff, as the champion and most priceless dumb-bell of the war.

For a conclusion of the whole matter, the author returns to the copy book maxim of the War College that the issue of victory or defeat is in the mind of the commanders. He finds that the German disintegration began on Aug. 8, 1918, when Ludendorff, becoming convinced that his troops had lost their punch, himself fell victim to the fear of defeat, and from that moment on, was beaten.

South American Republics Fighting for Stability

government that causes revolts, inferring that a better constitution would help matters. The fact is that the Latin-American nations have led the world in the number and excellence of constitutions framed and revised. A little more difficulty in revising their constitutions would be better. But they have experimented far in advance of most countries with charters.

Peru's Indians Good Racial Stock.

The basic difficulty in orderly government has been in the lack of national social solidarity. This lack was due to many things, among which should be mentioned lack of geographical and industrial intercommunication, through the scarcity of good roads, lack of intellectual intercommunication through illiteracy and the inadequacy of post routes; lack of colonial parliamentary background before independence, and afterward lack of democracy. Too great a gap exists between landed aristocracy and servant classes. Distrust of official morality has also been common.

At the close of the Rosas tyranny an Argentinian statesman said that what was needed was more population. He reasoned that if more immigrants would come and populate the nation wels, wild gauchos and scattered provincial governors would not be warring against themselves and against Buenos Aires. But the floods of immigration came to the Rio Platte and Buenos Aires with 2,000,000 people has revolted as it did with 200,000.

More recently Garcia Calderon urged European colonization for Peru on the grounds that the Indians were racially incapable of making a greater nation. However, anyone who has lived among Peru's Indians must disagree, for they are good racial stock.

Were Unprepared for Independence.

These nations have a strangely romantic and tragic heritage, a composite bas-relief of vice-regal splendor, pious missionaries, corrupt ecclesiastics, barbaric tribal strength and rugged areas. Out of it all Miranda, San Martin, Hidalgo, Bolivar, Sucre, Cordoba and their kind sought to build nations. Sam Adams' group of patriots in Boston had no complaints at all comparable to those of South American patriots.

The very money they had loyally raised, millions of pesos, with which to free their King, Ferdinand VII, from the clutch of Napoleon, was turned against them after he had been restored to his throne by the Holy Alliance; they were to be punished for having presumed to set up juntas to govern themselves while their King was Napoleon's prisoner. There was no alternative; they had to resist punishment, and fought for and obtained independence before they were ready for it. They had no previous parliamentary experience in colonial assemblies so were wholly unprepared for republican forms of government.

Our own national development was under better conditions. A good class of settlers came; a century of parliamentary training in colonial English assemblies preceded our launching forth as a nation; community solidarity existed, especially in New England, Virginia, New York and Pennsylvania; a Northwest Territory to form public lands and mutual fear of recapture by England solidified the new republic; while a wide romantic West drained off our adventurous spirits.

United States courts early asserted their independence from executive interference; this is important. In Latin America leaders set themselves up as dictators and in places courts still are afraid of the executive.

In religion also the United States has been fortunate. The Jeffersonian plan of having no official church has been a greater blessing than most people realize. In Latin America political unrest has been greatly affected by grave ecclesiastical troubles. Once in Chile during a struggle between church and state over a civil marriage law the women sided with the church and the men upheld the state, with the result that there were no marriages performed for over a year.

So it can be seen that these republics have had difficult problems to solve. In spite of this they have made great progress.

Just to what degree the recently deposed presidents of Peru and Argentina were traditional dictators is an interesting point. For both Leguia and Irogoyen it was a case of misinterpreting a great initial popular vote as a mandate to do as they pleased. In the first election of Legula after his coup d'etat, he received a large popular vote and in Argentina, in the more recent election of 1928, Irigoyen polled 1,000,000 votes.

Money Depression Partly to Blame.

Both claimed to champion the laboring man. Both advocated radical labor legislation to offset communistic agitation. Both were good advertisers and both enjoyed large international reputations. Both were intensely devoted to aggrandizing their countries. Both were rather old. That is as far as the parallel goes.

In Peru, Legula was practically absolute dictator, brooding no opposing party; he was the only candidate at the election last year and naturally won. No newspaper criticised or denounced him and no man of importance opposed him with impunity. He had the constitution revised at will, extending his term and obeying his desires.

Irigoyen was a constitutional but not a normal ruler. He had opposition in Congress, and newspapers denounced him if they wished. Instead of having been in office for 11 years straight, plus a previous term, as Legnia had been, the Argentine executive had served only since 1928, having served a term before from 1916 to 1922. But he employed extra-legal methods, sending commissions backed by soldiers to replace State governments and deposing officials arbitrarily.

Irigoyen was reputed to be honest, while Legula was accused of sending large sums of money abroad; but if Irigoyen was refused money by his Congress he sometimes employed extra-legal methods securing funds from national and private banks, leaving it to Congress to save the country's credit.

The financial depression of this year was the occasion rather than the cause of Legula's downfall. This was partly true in Argentina, but financial depression and the psychological effect of the Peruvian revolt were more important factors. Two years ago Legula should have read the signs of the times and not have been a candidate for re-election. Even then numerous monuments erected to him earlier in his regime were being mutilated and smeared with filth, but he merely ordered them taken down.

Coalition Is Obvious Remedy.

It is not probable that the net result of these revolutions will be unfavorable to the United States. At present in Peru in the reaction against everything Legula-istic there is a wave of anti-Yankeeism and a strike is threatened against a large copper mine owned by North Americans. A demand for a financial reckoning with some companies enjoying concessions secured from Legula is being made but the Peruvian people will not be misled by demagogery and will continue to absorb the normal amount of Yankee products on a purely business basis.

In Argentina as a diplomatic offset to the loss of the personally friendly Legula will be the gain of a leader not so cold to the United States as Irigoyen. Business in either case will be governed by economic rather than by political considerations. Of course, if adherents of Irigoyen should rally to his defense and civil wars similar to those of the days of Rosas, Mitre and Roca should develop, business would suffer a real setback.

Since the cause of revolutions in South America is its heritage of extreme actions and reactions by dictatorial leaders in vindictive parties in lands lacking social solidarity, the remedy naturally is conciliation of these parties and more social solidarity. If the party in Peru now led by Sanchez Cerro continues the traditional policy of persecuting enemies, and it punishes the followers of Senor Legula even as sternly as he did the Pardoists and Durands, when the people become tired of the new regime or a new financial crisis comes the outs may fight to become the ins.

If Provisional President Uriburu of Argentina relentlessly pursues the Radical party leaders as did Rosas, the same will be true in Argentina and history will repeat itself, continuing this epidemic indefinitely. It is a most difficult poltical problem when what was supreme patrotism yesterday can become high treason tomorrow; that is the worst part of revolutions.

URGES FARM LOAN BUREAU TO TAKE OVER COTTON CROP

Senator George Suggests That All Be Held Until Next Year.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. — The Federal Farm Loan Bureau was asked today by Senator George (Dem.), Georgia, to take over cotton from the growers at current prices and hold it for a year awaiting better prices for the growers.

In a letter to Commissioner Best, of the Farm Loan Bureau, Senator George said: "Someone is bound to make a profit on the 1930 crop. Why not let the farmer, who grew it, have a chance to make the profit?"

George said interest and partial payments would be due this fall on about $500,000,000 in farm land loans now being carried by Federal Farm Mortgage Banks.

"The cotton farmer cannot pay his fertilizer bills and taxes and make his land payments with 10-cent cotton," George wrote. "Foreclosures will get the farms. The farmers will be out of doors and the interest payments will go unmade."

Why the No-Wringer EASY Washer

Saves More Time and Labor than any other washer

No Man, Woman, Child or Garment was ever injured by the No-Wringer Easy Damp-Dryer!

PERHAPS the first appeal of the No-wringer EASY Washer is safety . . .

But it is more than safe. It saves more time—more labor—more clothes than any other washer. With it there are no more broken buttons, fasteners or hooks. No stretching or distortion of woolens. No deep, hard-to-iron creases in clothes. No water to lift or carry. No effort in rinsing or wringing.

The day of slowly hand-feeding clothes into squeezing wringer rolls is swiftly passing. With this new No-Wringer EASY Washer, the wringer is replaced with a Damp-Dryer located in an enclosed compartment.

It takes a whole tubful of clothes—8 pounds at one time—and whirls out the water in less than two minutes. All you do is touch a lever.

It takes out more water than wringing does. The clothes are left evenly damp. Line-drying is speeded up.

It easily handles bulky things like blankets and feather pillows that will not go through a wringer.

Speed is also gained by doing two things at one time. Six full-size sheets or their equal in other clothes, are washed thoroughly and gently in the washing compartment while six more sheets are damp-dried and rinsed in the Damp-Dryer.

A Week's Washing Free

An actual demonstration in your own home—with your own clothes—will prove these facts. Phone the nearest EASY dealer and he will bring a new EASY to your home and do next week's washing free.

Exceptionally low payment down.

Your little finger does the heavy work with EASY Ironer

Fit comfortably to iron. A touch of your finger applies or releases 100-pound ironing pressure. Irons everything including shirts, blouses, dresses, etc. A touch of the control converts ironer into a Presser. Step in and iron several pieces yourself to test the ease and simplicity.

EASY WASHERS & IRONERS

German Republic Not in Danger According to Marx

publican constitution is not to be feared despite the mighty gains of the radicals of the right. The Government coalition referred to above stands unconditionally for the Weimar constitution. Any uprising against it would be put down by dependable police and if necessary by the Reichswehr. And at the same time such a majority guarantees the continuance of the foreign policies heretofore prevailing. Even if the National Socialists and the Communists should join hands with the German Nationals and the small parties in order to refuse further payments under the Young plan, they would have at the most 250 votes at their command, whereas at least 290 would be necessary for a majority. It is almost beyond doubt that the former policy of understanding is assured now as before by a majority in the Reichstag. For in addition to the German People's party and the Economic party, several of the small parties of the right will support every measure that can help to insure peace. This goes without saying for the Center and Socialists.

Despite the monstrous agitation of the radicals of the right and the unreasonable attitude of the German Nationals, Germany's attitude toward foreign countries has in no wise become more menacing than it was as the last Reichstag was constituted. The task of directing domestic policies and especially of securing the passage of the important and urgently necessary financial and taxation measures, will, however, present extraordinary difficulties in the new Reichstag and will make most unusual demands on the abilities of the Government leaders. But the need of the hour will compel a good solution.

"Oppression" by Allies.

In any event, however, the attention of foreign countries and especially the former Entente lands must again and again be directed to evil effects evoked by the unjust Treaty of Versailles which exceeds all bounds of fairness and by the monstrous payments of tribute which the Young plan imposed upon the German people—payments which undesirably far exceed its resources and abilities. People treated in such a measurelessly exaggerated and unjust manner cannot but be driven into the arms of radicalism and the result can show itself in absolute desperation.

Fortunately the foreign countries as is evidenced by repeated statements from authoritative economic circles, are also beginning more and more to realize that this continuous oppression of a civilized nation must be stopped, and that a more sensible apportioning of the burdens of the war must be made. Even the victorious states are coming more and more to see that the how was overstrained when the war indemities were imposed. It is to be hoped that this realization may very soon bring about decisions that correspond with justice and wisdom. This would not only be to Germany's interest but also to the best interest of the victorious states.

ARMY BLIMP FORCED DOWN, RETURNED TO SCOTT FIELD

Carried by Truck After Broken Piece of Propeller Punctures Gas Bag.

The United States Army blimp TC-253 was taken back to Scott Field yesterday by truck. It was forced down on a farm six miles north of Edwardsville, Ill., Friday night when the tip of a propeller broke and punctured the bag.

PART FIVE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 21, 1930 PAGES 1—14G

Announcement, Which Comes as a Surprise, Is Made at a Dinner Given by Miss Jane Burns—Wedding Arrangements Not Decided.

AN engagement taking precedence over other social news of the early autumn season, is that of Miss Mary Lees Kennard, daughter of Mr. John Burton Kennard, 4960 Pershing avenue, and Rolla Wells Streett, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark Streett, 26 Kingsbury place. The news, which comes as a surprise to society, was announced last night by Miss Jane Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burns, at a dinner at the Burns home, 30 Lenox place.

Miss Kennard is the second of last year's debutantes to announce her engagement, and the first of her own coterie of four, including Miss Jean Ford, Miss Cynthia Polk and Miss Burns. They played together as little girls, graduated from Mary Institute and Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., in the same class, went abroad together the following year, chaperoned by Mrs. Atwell T. Lincoln, and finally made their social bows last season, and were leaders of the debutante set. Miss Kennard was first special maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet's ball, when Miss Ford was queen, and was presented formally at a dinner dance given by her father at the Bellerive Country Club.

Miss Kennard's family has been socially prominent for generations. She is the granddaughter of the late Mrs. Samuel M. Kennard, 4 Portland place, whose death last year, removed a well known social leader. Her sister, Miss Elizabeth, is Mrs. Harold T. Jolley, and her brother, John B. Jr., married Miss Elizabeth Scudder. She recently returned with Mr. and Mrs. Jolley and their family from her father's summer home at Harbor Point, Mich. Mr. Streett spent part of the summer at Wequetonsing, Mich., near by, where he visited Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Wells at their cottage.

Mr. Streett is a graduate of Choate School in the East and Princeton University, class of 1926. He is a member of the St. Louis Country Club, and is also of a family long identified with civic and social life in St. Louis. He is grandson of Rolla Wells, for whom he was named, and is a sister of Mrs. Lindell Gordon Jr., who as Miss Maud Miller Streett was Veiled Prophet's consort as was his mother, the former Miss Maud Wells. Mr. Streett's brother, Douglas Streett, married Miss Anne Victor Davis in January of this year. He has a younger brother, J. Clark Streett Jr.

The dinner table at last night's party, bore an arrangement of Easter lilies as a center piece, with silver bowl of lilies of the valley at each end, and was lighted by ivory tapers in branched candelabra. The announcement was made informally by the hostess preceding the dinner.

The wedding arrangements have not been decided upon.

Maids Announced For Veiled Prophet

THE Veiled Prophet ball of 1930, scheduled for the evening of Oct. 8 at the Coliseum, is to be known as a debutantes' ball. Contrary to the report which emanated from the Prophet's den last week that because of the unusually short list of debutantes a group of last year's buds would be invited to serve as maids of honor a second time. The names as they appear this week include only the young women who will make their bow during the new season, and those who will attend the ball and leave immediately for college.

As was true of the matrons, the list of maids is not official because of the delay in responses, due to absences from town, but the following young women have been invited to sit in attendance on the royal dais as maids of honor of the Prophet and his Queen:

Miss Blanche Louise Adami, Miss Laura Mary Allen, Miss Audrey Betts, Miss Georgia Bewley Black, Miss Jane Blackmer, Miss Mary Jane Baumes, Miss Ella Belle Bowmer, Miss Jane Allen Connett Miss Virginia Leigh Cook, Miss Mary Elizabeth Costigan, Miss Mary L. Dana, Miss Christine Fordyce, Miss Jane Perry Francis, Miss Ruth Carolyn Glasser, Miss Louise Goddard, Miss Alice Devoy Heinrichs, Miss Grace R. Horse Show Committee To Hold Informal Dinner

THE St. Louis National Horse Show Committee, comprising 100 local horsemen, have been invited to attend an informal dinner next Wednesday night at the Racquet Club, during which will be held the final general meeting before the horse show which opens at The Arena Oct. 11.

Ben G. Brinkman will preside, and matters pertaining to show arrangements will be discussed. Additional members are to be admitted into the Bit and Bridle Club, a St. Louis equestrian organization taking active part in the promotion of horse shows in this district. Members of this club have been instrumental in the selling of almost all boxes available for the National Show, despite the fact that it is three weeks away. Committees will be formed to arrange social functions for the visiting exhibitors, in addition to ring and trophy committees.

St. Louis is expected to put in a strong bid for honors. Its chances in the roadster classes have been strengthened with the purchase by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Treadway of Valley View Farms, High Ridge, Mo., of Fair Virginia, a costly mare, from George Brandeis of Omaha.

Delbridge, 4 Enright avenue, will be married Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Duhring. The Rev. William Rowe of Westminster Presbyterian Church will officiate. Only the families and relatives will be present.

Mr. Delbridge and his bride will motor through the South as far as Dallas, Tex., on their honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Stebelman, 5 Vernon avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rose Stebelman, to Ralph Rudman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Rudman, 1228 Blackstone avenue.

Mrs. Ida Weinbach, 5157 Cabanne avenue, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Julie Weinbach, to Sam H. Bensky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bensky.

The marriage of Miss Lucille Tallafer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Y. Tallafer of Eldorado, Ark., and Dr. Claude L. Guinn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Guinn of Eldorado, took place at noon yesterday at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Dr. Edward S. Travers officiating.

The parents of the bride and bridegroom came from Eldorado to be present at the wedding. Dr. Guinn and his bride will make their home at the State Apartments, 3658 West Pine boulevard. She was graduated from Ward-Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn., and the University of Kansas.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Margaret Mary Spitzberger, daughter of James B. Spitzberger of the Gatesworth Hotel, to Clinton Jerome Karst, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Karst, 5422 Washington boulevard. His mother was the former Miss Adele Plaisance of New Orleans.

Miss Gotzberger was graduated from Monticello Seminary, and Mr. Karst was graduated from Culver Military Academy.

Cards were received several days ago telling of the marriage Sept. 6 at Toronto, Ontario, of Miss Margaret Dowzer of Batesville, Ark., and Hugh Jackson of Toronto. The wedding took place at the Danforth United Church with Dr. Watch officiating. Only the members of both families were present. The bride wore a gown of African brown canton crepe the skirt in tunic style, the bodice trimmed in folds of eggshell chiffon. Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served at the Royal York Hotel, with Mrs. James Milne of Webster Groves, a sister of the bride, as hostess. Out-of-town guests included Mrs. W. B. Parrish of Chicago, Robert Smith of Pittsburg, Pa., and John Dowzer of Batesville, Ark., brothers of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson will reside at 2 Cardinal place upon their return home from a trip to Atlantic City and Washington.

The engagement of Miss Katherine Van Norstrand Treat, daughter of Mrs. Edwin M. Treat of Plainsfield, N. The marriage of Miss Florence Elise Blood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Blood, 31 south Rock Hill road, to Herbert C. Grosskop, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Grosskop, 5422 Wabada avenue, took place Thursday at noon at the Webster Groves Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. David M. Skilling officiating.

The decorations at the church were in green and yellow and golden brown. Palms in the background made a setting for large baskets of the two shades of roses carried by the bride and her maid of honor, and of a lighter shade of yellow gladioli.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of golden brown chiffon velvet made in princesse lines with long skirt. The bodice had as its only trimming a yoke of Beige chiffon with a tracery of embroidered beads in the golden brown and deep dream shades. She wore a small hat of the same velvet turned up at the right side with a tiny cluster of the pink rose buds under the narrow brim. She carried an arm bouquet of Pernet roses and lillies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Eleanor Blood, wore a frock of mulberry velvet made on the long straight lines, with a fillet of deep cream chiffon at the neck line, and tiny puffs of the same shade finishing the sleeves at the wrist. She carried an arm bouquet of Lancaster roses. Her shoes and small hat were of the shade as her gown.

Mr. Grosskop had as his best man Hilbert Wangerlin of St. Louis. The ushers were Mervyn Warren, a brother-in-law of the bride, and John Pollock, whose engagement to Miss Eleanor Blood was announced several months ago.

A wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents followed the church ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Grosskop will take possession of their home at 350 Spring avenue after they return from a motor trip through the Ozarks.

Miss Genevieve Carrher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Carrher, 750 Heman avenue, and Frank A. OSCAR JOHNSON BUYS FARM, 1500 ACRES, IN WAYNE COUNTY

Said to Have Paid About $45,000 to Mrs. Hiram Newton Holladay.

Maryland Acres, the 1500-acre Wayne County farm of Mrs. Hiram Newton Holladay, has been purchased at a price said to approximate $45,000 by Oscar Johnson, 38 Portland place, whose father was a founder of International Shoe Co.

The farm, which is but slightly smaller than Forest Park, includes two miles of St. Francois River bluffs, several large springs and about 200 acres in cultivation. It provides excellent hunting and fishing. Mrs. Holladay, who has leased an apartment at 5555 Pershing avenue, acquired the place several years ago and remade its 80-year-old log house into a 12-room modern house of colonial design. Johnson, who is visiting in California, has installed a manager and plans to use the farm as a country place and direct its cultivation.

SONNENFELD'S CELEBRATES ITS GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Employes Present Gold Carafe to Leopold Ackerman, President of Company.

Celebrating the golden anniversary of their store, employes of Sonnenfeld's yesterday presented an engraved solid gold carafe to Leopold A. Ackerman, president.

"Fifty years ago, this store was a small millinery shop," Ackerman said, responding to the presentation. "I have watched it grow into a large specialty store. Its reputation has been built on fair dealing and fashion rightness. I hope that in the next 50 years it will continue to merit that same reputation."

Fifty full length portraits, depicting women of fashion from 1830 to the present, decorate the main floor of the store. They were painted by Helen Nedderhut, young St. Louis artist, and are copies of color plates in Godey's Lady's Book.

Exhibited on the apparel floors are costumes of 1830 and an old Sonnenfeld newspaper advertisement, heralding the sale of "fancy feather-trimmed Parisian bonnets at 75 cents upwards."

The Natural Way to Beautify Your Skin

Mercolized Wax will make any skin velvety-smooth, white and flawless. Just pat it on your face, neck and arms each night before retiring. The discolored film of aged surface skin is gently flecked off in tiny, invisible particles. All such blemishes as freckles, tan, pimples and liver spots are completely cleared away. Your skin is then soft, smooth and youthful. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. Use a little Silmerine when arranging hair and it will hold waves in shape and keep all loose straggling ends in place. Will free scalp of oiliness and dandruff. Liquid Silmerine gives a neat, well-groomed effect. At all drug and dept. stores.

HEALTH ORGANIZATIONS IN SESSION TOMORROW

Eight Missouri Bodies to Hold Joint Three-Day Meeting.

Eight Missouri health organizations will open a joint three-day meeting tomorrow at Hotel Statler. Annual meetings of the Missouri Mental Hygiene Society, the Missouri Social Hygiene Association and the Missouri Tuberculosis Association will be held during the period.

Robert W. Kelso, director of the Community Fund, will speak on "The Integration of Health Agencies," at a joint dinner tomorrow evening. Dr. Max C. Starkloff, St. Louis Health Commissioner, and John C. Tobin, president of the Tuberculosis Association, also will speak.

The evolution and significance of personality will be discussed at a luncheon of the Mental Hygiene Society Tuesday by Dr. John B. Morgan, author and psychologist, of Northwestern University. Dr. William B. Nelson is president.

Lectures and tuberculosis and demonstrations will be given by the staffs of Washington and St. Louis University medical schools and Koch Hospital at their own auditoriums.

The principal speaker at a joint meeting Tuesday evening at the St. Louis Medical Society auditorium will be the Rev. Alphonse Schwitalla, dean of the St. Louis University Medical School. Dr. Stuart Pritchard, Battle Creek, Mich., also will speak on tuberculosis.

The Social Hygiene Association will be addressed by Dr. R. L. Russell of the State Board of Health at a luncheon meeting Wednesday. His subject will be, "The Public Health Aspect of Social Hygiene."

ST. LOUIS BUSINESS EXECUTIVES TO VISIT FIVE ILLINOIS TOWNS

Party Will Make Trade Extension Tour in Special Busses Thursday.

Five towns in Southern Illinois will be visited Thursday by a group of St. Louis business executives, who are to make the trade extension tour under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce Sales Managers' Bureau.

Leaving Nineteenth and Locust streets at 6:30 o'clock Thursday morning in special busses, the party will arrive at Benton at 10 o'clock in the morning and at Harrisburg shortly after noon. Eldorado will be visited early in the afternoon and Carmi at 4:40 p. m. A dinner hour at Mount Vernon will be the last stop.

Stops of an hour at each place will be made, with slightly longer periods allowed at Harrisburg and Mount Vernon. None of the cities on the tour was visited on a similar trip through Southern Illinois last year.

FUNERAL OF EX-JUDGE KLENE AT 2:30 P. M. TOMORROW

Masonic Organizations Will Be in Charge of Burial Services at Cemetery.

Funeral services for former Circuit Judge Benjamin J. Klene, who died at his home, 5804 Pershing avenue, Friday night of a cerebral hemorrhage, will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, at the Alexander funeral chapel, 6175 Delmar boulevard. Burial, under the direction of Masonic organizations, will take place in Valhalla Cemetery.

Judge Klene, who was 72 years old, was educated at Washington University and served successively as State Senator, Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction, and one term, beginning in 1916, as Circuit Judge, being defeated for renomination on the Republican ticket.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Annie M. Klene, and four sons, Leonard W., Wilbur M., Benjamin C., and Homer G. Klene.

FUNERAL OF MRS. J. R. COOKE

Wife of Banker Is Buried in Calvary Cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Margaret Larkin Cooke, who died of cerebral hemorrhage at the De-Paul Hospital Thursday, were held from the family residence, 14 Lewis place, to the Visitation Church, Taylor and Evans avenues, yesterday morning. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

Mrs. Cooke was the wife of John Rutherford Cooke, vice president of the First National Bank. She was a daughter of the late James Ross Larkin and a great-granddaughter of John Mullanphy. Besides her husband, she is survived by two brothers, Thomas H. and B. M. Larkin, and three sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Lewis, Mrs. Annie T. Oliver and Miss Jane C. Larkin.

BIBLE-MISSIONARY MEETING

At Giddings Presbyterian Church Oct. 20 to 24.

A Bible and missionary conference under auspices of Mizpah Community Center will be held at Giddings Presbyterian Church, Washington boulevard and Sarah street, Oct. 20 to 24.

Out-of-town speakers will include the Rev. Max I. Reich of Philadelphia, the Rev. John S. Conning of New York, the Rev. H. S. Brown of Chicago and the Rev. Russell Paynter of Philadelphia.

Rotary Club Chicken Fry.

A chicken fry and outing for members of the Rotary Club and their families will be held today at the Griesedieck Farms. A program of music, entertainment and sports has been arranged.

Electrical Trade Board Speaker.

W. W. Reddle, manager of the arc welding department of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., East Pittsburg, Pa., will be the principal speaker at a meeting of the industrial section of the Electrical Board of Trade at 8 o'clock the evening of Sept. 30.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

DR. F. H. STALEY TELLS OF ROVER SCOUTING

Returns From Visit to British Isles Where He Studied Older Boys' Group.

A two and one-half months' study of Rover Scouting, an older boy activity without parallel in United States scouting, was made during the summer by Dr. Forest H. Staley, scoutmaster of Troop 98 of St. Roch's Church, who returned two weeks ago from his second visit to the British Isles in as many years. Staley first became interested in English scouting at the international scout jamboree at Birkenhead, England, where he attended as a member of the St. Louis delegation.

The Rover Scouts are an organization of young men above 18 years old. A part of the scout organization, they have their own separate "crews," corresponding to Boy Scout troops and Cub packs. The majority of the membership is composed of former Boy Scouts who have grown old enough to become eligible. They wear a regular uniform.

The motto of the Rovers is "Service"—service both to the country at large and to scouts, whom they assist as much as possible. In a sense, they act as counsel and guides for the younger scouts.

The British organization, therefore, is all-inclusive: the Cubs for boys too young to become scouts, the Boy Scouts themselves and the Rovers for young men above 18. Each group has its own activities and program but all co-operate. The United States has Cubs and Boy Scouts, but nothing for older scouts but assistant scoutmaster commissions.

During his visit, Dr. Staley attended an international Rover Moot at Glasgow, Scotland. The moot was similar to the international jamboree, Rovers being present from several nations. Sir Baden-Powell, founder of the boy scout movement, was guest of honor at the moot.

Staley was accompanied back to St. Louis by an English scout, Scout Bert Hilder, who, with eight years' experience in British scouting, will become an assistant scoutmaster of Troop 98. On his last trip Staley brought back another English scout, Reginald Bonham, who wished to come to America to study medicine. He is now a scout in Staley's troop.

Troop Notes

West District.

Tenderfoot candidates were initiated into Troop 2 of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, at the last meeting of the troop in preparation for a formal investiture ceremony to be conducted at the next meeting. The initiation was followed by a resumption of inter-patrol contests, which are part of a fall contest started at the previous meeting. Charles Barnhart led his Flying Eagle patrol in a program of stunts.

Troop 30 of the Y. M. T. A., was reorganized a week ago Thursday evening, at a meeting attended by 35 scouts. Melvin Hertzman, Arnold Singer, and Edward Hopper were appointed junior assistant scoutmasters; Stanley Lopata, Francis Klein, Harry Rothman, Bob Carp, Gilbert Seidel, patrol leaders; and Joe Leibovich, scribe. Gilbert Harris, who recently returned from a trip through Old Mexico, spoke to the troop on the people and customs of that country and gave an account of a bull fight. The meeting was concluded with a banquet, after which an officers' meeting was held. Joe Katz, an Eagle Scout from Chicago, was a guest at both the troop and officers' meetings.

Scout Robert Veitch was made senior patrol leader of Troop 5, of the West Presbyterian Church, at the first fall meeting of the troop. Lewis Trowbridge, Palmer Spurr and Herbert Malley became patrol leaders, and Howard Burnits was made scribe. Former Senior Patrol Leader Dickson Stauffer advanced to Eagle Scout rank during the summer, raising the troop's total to three.

Troop 113, of the Church of the Messiah, resumed its regular meetings, Sept. 5. Eight scouts of the troop attended Camp Irondale during the summer, and seven of them advanced to a higher rank. The advancements included one bronze eagle palm, one life scout, one star scout, two first-class, and two second-class. The Wild Horse patrol ranked first, and the Silver Foxes second, in an inter-patrol contest based on the principle of the Carparall.

New officers are to be elected soon by Troop 246, of B'Nai Amoona. The troop has also outlined a regular system of test passing and scout advancement.

Troop 98 of St. Roche's Church is spending this week-end at the Tree House Camp at Irondale. Forty-five scouts of the troop attended Camp Irondale during the summer, 35 being together at one section of the Ranger Camp. Five were admitted into the Order of the Arrow: Scribe William Durbin, Junior Assistant Jack Ferguson, Senior Patrol Leader Fred Weber, Bugler Charles Coyle and Assistant Scoutmaster Earl Bischoff. The troop has an active membership of 80.

North District.

Troop 3 of the Grace Holy Cross Church has changed its meeting to Monday. Troop Committeeman Herzog and two other visitors were present at the meeting last week. Herzog made a short talk. The troop is planning a hike to the Meramac State Park, near Sillivan, Mo.

Troop 39 of St. Paul's Evangelical Church, has resumed its regular Friday night meetings. Although activities to a great extent were suspended during the summer, the troop held a number of hikes and camps. The hikes included one to the bear pits in Forest Park, several to Lambert-St. Louis Field while the endurance flyers were up, two to the Chain of Rocks, and a 3-day camp at the Meramec State Park. Several members of the troop also attended camp at Irondale. During the State park camp the troop conducted a program of swimming, treasure hunts, cooking, eating, monkey drill, nature study, test passing and games.

Troop 150 of the Scullin School is planning to aid in the distribution of Veiled Prophet posters in the Wellston District. The troop resumed its regular meetings Sept. 5 with 25 scouts present at the first assembly.

Scouts William Guetiebler and Carlo Koenig were elected patrol leaders at a recent meeting of Troop 149 of St. Paul's Methodist Church. The meeting was conducted by Acting Scoutmaster Hunt. At its conclusion, luncheon was served.

South District.

Scout Sam Bjorkman has been appointed junior assistant scoutmaster of Troop 247, of the Froebel School. Announcement of his appointment was made by Scoutmaster Sparwasser at the regular troop meeting Sept. 12. At the same meeting the troop was reorganized into four patrols, the Flying Eagle, Swallow, Bob White and Standing Bear. Scouts Earle Schaad, John Noel, Arthur Thornton and Milton Sparwasser were appointed patrol leaders. A hike to the Chain of Rocks was taken by 20 scouts and the scoutmaster last Sunday. Several tests were passed. The troop is planning a minstrel show and dance, to be held at Swiss Hall, Nov. 1.

The Mothers' Club of Troop 168 of St. Pius' Church has resumed its regular monthly meetings. Plans for the coming fall and winter were announced by Scoutmaster Metzger at the last meeting of the troop.

Discussion of the troop exhibit at the coming Merit Badge Show occupied most of the meeting of Troop 194 last week. The troop just recently returned from a 10-day camp on W. C. Lusir's farm near High Ridge, Mo.

Scout Karl Kirberg has been appointed scribe of Troop 178 of the Scruggs School, succeeding Scout Irwin Cordes. The troop was reorganized into new patrols at the regular meeting last week, with Scouts Irwin Kolkhorst, Louis Schmitt, Roland Stanley, and Sidney Cline as patrol leaders. A program of activities, including an inter-patrol contest, starting this month and ending in February, was announced by Scoutmaster Louis F. H. Schmitt. The Tiger patrol won the last inter-patrol contest held in the troop. The scouts are spending this week-end at their camp on the Meramec River.

EAGLE SCOUT APPLICATIONS MUST BE IN BY WEDNESDAY

Badges to Be Presented at Fall Court of Honor in Scottish Rite Temple Oct. 6.

Applications for Eagle Scout badges to be presented at the Fall City Court of Honor, to be held at the Scottish Rite Temple Oct. 6, must be filed at local Boy Scout headquarters, 505 Chemical Building, by Wednesday, according to William Puffer, educational director of the council. Applications for Star, Life, and Eagle palms must be filed by Saturday.

Filing of the applications is necessary in order for the council to meet the national requirements, and make necessary preparations for the awarding.

The court will present only those badges mentioned, plus Standard Troop insignia, Scoutmasters' keys, and Scout Leaders' Training Certificates. The only merit badges that will be awarded will be those needed by scouts to qualify them for one of the higher badges.

THREE GIRL SCOUT LEADERS TO GO TO CAMP DELLWOOD

Training Course to Be Followed by National Convention at Indianapolis.

Three St. Louis Girl Scout leaders, Misses Lydie Seavers, Louise Oram and Ruth Grove, will attend a training school for Girl Scout leaders at Camp Dellwood, near Indianapolis, next week. The training camp is being conducted in connection with the sixteenth annual National Girl Scout Convention, which will be held at Indianapolis Oct. 1-4, immediately after the training school is concluded.

The training school is designed to teach the leaders the latest developments in girl scouting and scout training, as well as troop management, camping and other phases of the girl scout program. The convention will be devoted largely to discussion of the five-year expansion plan of the organization.

About a thousand girls and women from all parts of the country are expected to attend the convention and training school.

REAL ESTATE

PART SEVEN.

NEW SPECULATIVE INTEREST IN CIVIL COURTS LOCALITY

OTHER PROPERTIES NEARBY SOUGHT

Prices Enhanced Since Widening of Chestnut St. Block—New U. S. Building to Increase Values.

By Berry Moore

Aroused speculative interest in real estate in the vicinity of the new Civil Courts building is reported, with new offers for Market and Chestnut street corners east of Twelfth boulevard.

The northeast corner of Eleventh and Market streets is said to be a prize which is attracting more than ordinary attention. Many offers recently have been submitted for this holding, which, according to real estate circles, is a magnet for speculators or promoters with large building plans.

The site faces the new Civil Courts building and is diagonally opposite the block bounded by Market, Eleventh, Twelfth and Walnut streets, decided upon for the new Federal building, and is essentially one for a representative structure. It has a frontage of 105 feet on Eleventh and 90 feet on Market. The property is held under a 99-year lease, acquired several years ago by the Forward Realty Co., of which Joseph Darst is president.

A 35-story building has been designed for the southeast corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets in this block, owned by Albert Wenzlick, veteran real estate man, which it is planned to erect as soon as business conditions warrant. Wenzlick has had several opportunities to sell the corner at profitable prices, but he has declined to surrender it, having elected to retain it in fee as a permanent investment. The prominence of this corner has been increased by the widening of Chestnut street.

Another Available Corner.

The northwest corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets is another available site. Constituting the key to this quarter of the block, it is of exciting decided interest. It is owned by clients of Cornet & Zeibig, who are offering it for sale or for lease. The northeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Chestnut street was recently taken under an option as a site for a lofty building project. It is held under a 99-year lease by Arthur J. Fitzsimmons, Michael Kinney and William Kinney, clients of Cornet & Zeibig. Building promoters also have been nibbling at the southeast corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets, owned by Lucas heirs.

The property of the McNichols Furniture Co., of which Harry McNichols is proprietor, consisting of a commodious six-story building at 1020 Market street, is another attractive holding. This building, commanding North Eleventh street as it does, has a unique commercial value as one of the most conspicuous features of this part of the city. Negotiations have been under way for it several times during the last two years. Approximately 40 feet will be taken off this side of Market street in the widening of the street between Twelfth boulevard and Seventh street, involving damages to the structure to be adjusted by the city.

Prices Have Climbed.

Prices of property in these blocks have been revised upward to some extent since the widening of Chestnut street between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, and of Eleventh street between Market and Chestnut. A plaza has been created about the new Civil Courts building to the material enhancement of real estate values.

The revised prices apparently also anticipate further enhancement in values, with the erection of the new Federal building on the Market street block. The projected widening of Market street, between Twelfth boulevard and Seventh streets, is also mentioned as a factor in this connection. Plans also are expected to materialize soon for building up the south side of the Bell Telephone block with a structure conforming with that occupying the north half, cited as showing what is on the calendar in this district.

This would extend the offices of the Southwestern to the Chestnut street side of the block with the probability of stores or real estate offices on the Ninth and Tenth street side.

The prevailing impression is that the Memorial Plaza will serve to stabilize the business district east of Twelfth boulevard. The downtown area would be further entrenched with the execution of the river front project.

NEW SPECULATIVE INTEREST IN CIVIL COURTS LOCALITY

OTHER PROPERTIES NEARBY SOUGHT

Prices Enhanced Since Widening of Chestnut St. Block—New U. S. Building to Increase Values.

By Berry Moore

Aroused speculative interest in real estate in the vicinity of the new Civil Courts building is reported, with new offers for Market and Chestnut street corners east of Twelfth boulevard.

The northeast corner of Eleventh and Market streets is said to be a prize which is attracting more than ordinary attention. Many offers recently have been submitted for this holding, which, according to real estate circles, is a magnet for speculators or promoters with large building plans.

The site faces the new Civil Courts building and is diagonally opposite the block bounded by Market, Eleventh, Twelfth and Walnut streets, decided upon for the new Federal building, and is essentially one for a representative structure. It has a frontage of 105 feet on Eleventh and 90 feet on Market. The property is held under a 99-year lease, acquired several years ago by the Forward Realty Co., of which Joseph Darst is president.

A 35-story building has been deemed for the southeast corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets in this block, owned by Albert Wenzlick, veteran real estate man, which it is planned to erect as soon as business conditions warrant. Wenzlick has had several opportunities to sell the corner at profitable prices, but he has declined to surrender it, having elected to retain it in fee as a permanent investment. The prominence of this corner has been increased by the widening of Chestnut street.

Another Available Corner.

The northwest corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets is another available site. Constituting the key to this quarter of the block, it is exciting decided interest. It is owned by clients of Cornet & Zeibig, who are offering it for sale or for lease. The northeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Chestnut street was recently taken under an option as a site for a lofty building project. It is held under a 99-year lease by Arthur J. Fitzsimmons, Michael Kinney and William Kinney, clients of Cornet & Zeibig. Building promoters also have been dabbling at the southeast corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets, owned by Lucas heirs.

The property of the McNichols Furniture Co., of which Harry McNichols is proprietor, consisting of a commodious six-story building at 1020 Market street, is another attractive holding. This building, commanding North Eleventh street as it does, has a unique commercial value as one of the most conspicuous features of this part of the city. Negotiations have been under way for it several times during the last two years. Approximately 40 feet will be taken off this side of Market street in the widening of the street between Twelfth boulevard and Seventh street, involving damages to the structure to be adjusted by the city.

Prices Have Climbed.

Prices of property in these blocks have been revised upward to some extent since the widening of Chestnut street between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, and of Eleventh street between Market and Chestnut. A plaza has been created about the new Civil Courts building to the material enhancement of real estate values.

The revised prices apparently also anticipate further enhancement in values, with the erection of the new Federal building on the Market street block. The projected widening of Market street, between Twelfth boulevard and Seventh streets is also mentioned as a factor in this connection. Plans also are expected to materialize soon for building up the south side of the Bell Telephone block with a structure conforming with that occupying the north half, cited as showing what is on the calendar in this district.

This would extend the offices of the Southwestern to the Chestnut street side of the block with the probability of stores or real estate offices on the Ninth and Tenth street side.

The prevailing impression is that the Memorial Plaza will serve to stabilize the business district east of Twelfth boulevard. The downtown area would be further entrenched with the execution of the river front project.

Residences Recently Completed in City and County

One of the twenty residences now under construction in Bel-Nor. Julius E. Tarling, architect.

EXTENSIVE BUILDING IN HUNTLEIGH VILLAGE

P. J. Orthwein Occupies French Chateau; Other Homes Nearing Completion.

The last six months have witnessed much building activity in the Village of Huntleigh. The French chateau of Mr. and Mrs. Percy J. Orthwein, built on an 18-acre wooded tract, is completed and now occupied by them. This residence, one of the most pretentious in St. Louis County, represents an investment of approximately $250,000. It was designed by Maritz & Young, Inc., architects.

The new brick colonial residence of Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Jones is nearing completion, and the owners expect to take possession by the middle of November. Designed by Study & Farrar, architects, it is one of the most perfect examples of colonial architecture in St. Louis. The house is 148 feet long and the rooms are large. Every consideration has been given to true colonial detail. The house and grounds, comprising 10 acres, represent an investment of approximately $175,000.

The new residence of Mr. F. B. Adkins is another colonial house, nearing completion. This house, built from plans by Albert & Graves, architects, is situated on a five-acre tract landscaped under the supervision of John Noyes. The owner has dug down 484 feet to obtain a natural water flow to serve two lakes which will form an attractive feature of the premises.

The new residence of French architecture being built by Edward L. Bakewell, to further establish the character of the Village of Huntleigh, is rapidly nearing completion. It is on a most pretentious scale. Bakewell reports that inquiries from prospective purchasers show a healthy undertone for estates of this type in St. Louis County. The house stands on a knoll in the center of nine acres, surrounded by beautiful estates. Maritz & Young were the architects, the landscape work was done by Peter Selzer's Studio Gardens.

The house is being decorated by Pokorny Galleries. A feature is a terrace connected with a rock garden. A gardening expert has been brought from California to develop this property.

This house has 11 rooms. The living room is 22x32 and all other rooms in proportion. It is heated by the very latest type gas boiler and has ample garage facilities.

The Village of Huntleigh, incorporated a year and a half ago, is the smallest in the United States. Due to the private restrictions on most of the property in the village limits and to the recently enacted zoning ordinance, it represents perhaps the most highly restricted area in St. Louis County.

The Denny road, recently widened and concreted, is now open to southbound traffic from the Clayton road. It was at the instance of the Board of Trustees of the Village of Huntleigh that the State Highway Commission built the bridge over the creek which rounds its way through the village.

The property owners on both sides of the Denny road propose to erect a uniform fencing in the village; 500,000 honeysuckle vines have been ordered to embellish the banks on both sides of the road, and climbing rose bushes of uniform color will be planted every 10 feet along the road through the Village of Huntleigh. There are approximately 40 miles of winding bridle paths in this section.

McDonald Reports Sale of Residence.

TIRE FIRM HAS OPTION TO BUY DELMAR LOT

Purchase May Be Made in Next 10 Years by Firestone Company.

It was disclosed yesterday that the 10-year lease acquired by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. of the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue gives the privilege of purchasing the property at a commensurate price. The lease call for an annual gross rental of $9000. A one-stop station is to be erected by the Firestone company on the site.

The site has a frontage of 110 feet on Delmar boulevard and 157 on Hamilton avenue. It is owned by the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association.

The building now occupying the site formerly housed Cafferata's cafe. It is to be razed to make way for the new super-service station. Negotiations for the lease were handled by the real estate department of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. The lease established a record valuation for ground in this block.

WHITTIER-DELMAR CORNER LEASED FOR FILLING STATION

The John S. Blake & Bro. Realty Co. reports leasing the northwest corner of Whittier and Delmar for Frank Dallavalle to the Wide Way Tire and Battery Co., Jacob and Louis Jacobs, proprietors, for nine years. The Wide Way Tire and Battery Co. also has leased the southeast corner of Bridgeton and Natural Bridge roads from Frank Tabor and will immediately start the erection of a filling station. This station is close to Lambert Field.

FURNITURE MAKERS LEASE WASHINGTON BL. QUARTERS

The Rothberg & Gallant Parlor Furniture Co., now at 3123 Washington Boulevard, has leased, through David D. Lynch & Co., for a long term of years, the entire west section of the second floor of the Wrought Iron Range Building on Washington Avenue, between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets.

While Rothberg & Gallant have been in the furniture manufacturing business less than a year, this move will treble the amount of space they are now using. The new quarters will contain over 16,000 square feet of floor space and will front on both Washington and Lucas avenues for a distance of 120 feet, with a depth along the east line of Twentieth street of 135 feet. Fronting on three streets it is particularly adapted to the needs of the company's type of manufacturing.

M. H. Rodemyer & Co., which represented the Wrought Iron Range co., as exclusive agents, reports the price paid per square foot as being the most satisfactory and in keeping with the prices obtained during the last 18 months for like space in this building.

YECKEL, EARICKSON & CO. OPENS TWO NEW HOMES TODAY

Yeckel, Earickson & Co., Inc., announces the opening today of two new English-style homes built by William Dettermann, at 5503-7 Nottingham avenue. Many of the latest improvements in modern bungalow construction are featured. The location is one of the newest in South St. Louis.

DIMMITT-RICKHOFF-BAYER REPORTS ITS SALES FOR WEEK

The Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co., Inc., reports the following sales for the week:

3242 Longfellow, 12-room residence, for James Keithly Construction Co. to a client; 7221 Tulane, single flat, for R. B. Nash to Edgepark Realty Co.; 5832 Mackland, stores and flats, for John A. Givens to Bruce Roper; Chippewa and Hereford, apartment and stores, for Lorenz Mueller to James A. Keithly Construction Co.; 6215 Bowman, 8-room residence, for Bruce Roper to John A. Givens; 8331 Milan, bungalow, for Edgepark Realty Co., to R. B. Nash; vacant lot, Nottingham and Hampton, St. Louis Hills, for James A. Keithly Construction Co. to Lorenz Mueller.

SOL LOEWENSTEIN TO OPEN NORMANDY ADDITION TODAY

Sol Loewenstein will open the second addition of 12 new bungalows, today in Normandy. The first addition of these bungalows has been completely sold. This subdivision is in the 1000 block on Bermuda avenue, Normandy, and can be reached by driving out to 7300 Natural Bridge road, then turning right for three blocks, turning right again, going half a mile on Bermuda avenue, to 1002.

EFFORT TO CLEAN UP DOWNTOWN SECTION

Realty Exchange Appoints 'Better Appearance Committee' for the Task.

With the Veiled Prophet festivities approaching, and with the prospect of the world baseball series to bring visitors to the city, a Better Appearance Committee, to tackle the job of cleaning up the downtown district, has been named by President Daly of the Real Estate Exchange.

Arthur H. Fuldner is chairman of the committee, and other members are Fred C. Breitt, Charles M. Walters, Fred G. Zeibig and Phil H. Zepp. In its first conference the committee decided to make these requests of the real estate agents managing downtown properties, and of property owners:

"1. Keep windows of vacant premises clean, especially those on the first floor.

"2. Do not permit anyone to place advertising posters in windows or on the exterior of vacant premises.

"3. Agents for property in the congested district should agree on a maximum size for 'For Lease' signs, say, not to exceed 3 by 9 feet.

"4. Owners or agents should not permit tenants to place large muslin banners on the exterior of stores or on the upper floors of loft buildings.

"5. When downtown stores are rented to temporary tenants, a clause should be inserted in the rental agreement making it necessary to get the approval of owners before placing any signs on the interior or exterior of the premises (temporary tenants usually plaster up store front with cheap, unsightly posters).

"The Police Department should make every effort to prevent sign-posting agencies from tacking up or placing signs in the downtown district, and something should be done, either by ordinance or by asking the co-operation of downtown merchants, to stop sandwich men from parading the streets with banners advertising 'going out of business sales,' removals, etc., for these banners advertising 'going out of business sales' have been very harmful to high-class merchants and others interested in the development of the downtown district."

IVANHOE PARK BUNGALOWS SOLD BY HAUER-LUSTKANDL

Hauer-Lustkandl, agent for Ivanhoe Park, reports the sale of several of the bungalows being erected by George C. Karr. These houses are modern and are sold complete with garage. Each home is on a plot 40 by 160 feet and all streets, walks and sewers are made.

Location is 3500 south on Watson boulevard and then west two blocks on Oleatha avenue.

WENZLICK ANNOUNCES NEW SUBDIVISION

Woodland Tract at Rock Hill and Laclede Part of Original Grant Farm.

Contracts have been let for the grading of two miles of winding drives through the dense 80-acre woods at Laclede and Rock Hill roads in St. Louis County. This woods formed a portion of the historic Grant Farm, once owned by Gen. U. S. Grant, and adjoins the 40-acre tract which contains all of the original buildings of the farm.

In 1808 William Lindsey Long laid out the farm and built the house, which is the oldest still standing in Greater St. Louis. When Lieut. Grant was stationed at Jefferson Barracks, the farm was called White Haven, and was the home of the Dents. As Fred Dent had been a classmate of Grant at West Point, it was natural that Grant should meet Dent's sister, Julia, at White Haven. After the marriage of Grant and Julia Dent, they lived at White Haven for some time. In the south room, two of the Grant children were born. Later, Grant built the cabin known as Hardscrabble, which was then more than a mile from its present location.

This development, when completed, will be known as White Haven Forest. The contract for the streets has been let to F. A. Grant, a local contractor. It will be necessary to remove more than 850 trees for the roads alone. This property will be restricted, and developed as a beautiful setting for fine homes.

The property is owned by Albert Wenzlick, and is being developed by the Albert Wenzlick Real Estate Co.

FIVE HOUSES ARE UNDER WAY IN LAKE FOREST SUBDIVISION

Construction of a new home for E. L. Muckerman on the south side of Ranier drive in Lake Forest subdivision has been begun. This is the fifth home under way in this subdivision at the southwest corner of Clayton and Hanley roads, which was put on the market last fall.

Street lights and an underground system of electric wiring are under construction.

Shaw & Francis, Inc., report the sale of a lot to Richard D. Kerckhoff on the south side of Overcrest drive, in Lake Forest.

CARPENTER STEEL CO. TAKES LEASE ON FOREST PARK BL.

The Carpenter Steel Co. of Reading, Pa., has leased for a long term of years, through David D. Lynch & Co., the premises at 4063-65 Forest Park boulevard.

This move will increase the space now used by the steel company and will enable it to establish several new lines acquired in a recent consolidation in the East. The premises are in the Paradise Building, owned by Brauer Brothers, Inc., at the northeast corner of Forest Park and Sarah street. Brauer Bros. were also represented by David D. Lynch & Co.

This firm reports considerable increase in inquiry for space during the last three weeks, which is in line with the prediction that the coming of fall would see a revival of leasing activity.

LEASES THROUGH JONES BROS. IN THE ART STUDIO BUILDING

The corner store in the Art Studio Building at the northwest corner of Heman and Enright avenues, University City, has been leased through Jones Brothers Realty Co. to O. Farbstein, who will operate the Perlee Novelty Shop. Another store in the same building, 709 Heman, has been leased to the American Bathroom Fixture Co., which specializes in equipping large apartments and hotels. The second floor of the building has been remodeled into studios and offices and three new tenants have been added, namely, the schools of Carrie Pitcher Johnson, Alice Jones Wientge and Lisbeth Hoops, who conduct the teaching of various forms of dancing and expression.

WESTERN WORLD FARM PLAN

Inter-American Conference Approves Two Policies.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—How to improve the agricultural situation in the Western Hemisphere was discussed by representatives today at the first inter-American conference on agriculture, forestry and animal industry.

Recommendations included crop stabilization and creation of a pan-American agricultural bank to handle rural credits. The desirability of continuing the inter-American conferences was emphasized by delegates, and formal provision was made for a second meeting to be held within the next five years at a time and place to be set by the Pan-American Union.

St. Louis Industrial Area Abuts Its Coal Supply

Ninety-Three Per Cent of the 10,000,000 Tons of Coal Consumed Annually in the District Is Obtained From Contiguous Mines.

One of the big advantages which the St. Louis industrial district has over many other manufacturing centers, is the abundant coal supply available.

In a folder published by the St. Louis Industrial Club, the St. Louis district is described as being located at the west-central edge of the extensive eastern interior coal field. The close proximity of the major producing areas in this field makes this district the natural focus of large tonnages at comparatively low freight cost.

Ninety three per cent of the approximately 10,000,000 tons of coal consumed annually in the district is drawn from mines within a 110-mile radius of St. Louis.

Location of Mines.

The inner group, contiguous to the St. Louis industrial district on the east, supplies 56 per cent of the coal consumed annually; this tonnage requires but 26½ miles weighted average rail haul.

Coal from the Duquoin district, averaging slightly higher in quality and coming a distance of 74 miles, supplies 13 per cent of the demand.

The Southern Illinois district, comprised of Franklin, Williamson and Saline counties, produces the highest grade of Illinois coal. Twenty-four per cent of the supply comes from this field, the distance averaging about 110 miles.

West Kentucky coal has found a market here during recent years and supplied last year 4.8 per cent of the total demand. The remaining groups supplied 2.2 per cent of the tonnage consumed. There is also a limited additional tonnage of special-purpose coal which moves in from the East Kentucky-West Virginia fields.

Reserve Deposits.

Reserve deposits in the Eastern interior field are of such extent, occurrence, thickness, continuity and quality as to insure an abundant supply of bituminous coal for all present and future needs.

Vein No. 6, from which most Illinois coal is derived, extends continuously from North-Central Illinois south to Wester Kentucky, and from Wester Illinois east to Western Indiana, varying in thickness from 6 to 9 feet in the inner group and from 7 to 11 feet in the Southern Illinois district. There is also the No. 5 vein, about 5 feet in thickness, which extends under much of this territory and is as yet practically untouched.

TRANSPORTATION WEB SURROUNDS ST. LOUIS

This City Is the Second Largest Railway Terminal in the United States.

Served by 19 trunk-line railroad companies operating 29 lines, the St. Louis district constitutes the second largest railroad terminal in the United States.

These trunk lines, with their parent and subsidiary companies, constitute 49.58 per cent of the total railroad mileage of the United States. Their aggregate mileage is 117,432, of the total of 234,942 of all Class 1 railroads.

Aside from the trunk-line railroads there are four short lines, or coal roads, serving the district. There are also three electric freight-carrying interurban lines affording package-car and carload freight service and five railroads exclusively engaged in switching.

As the largest railway terminal in this part of the country, and the second largest in the United States, St. Louis is the center of a transportation web which directly reaches every point in this newly awakened territory.

Freight Rates Break Here.

East and west freight rates "break" at St. Louis. Fundamental advantages of time, economy and service, particularly to the markets of the South, West and Southwest, operate in favor of shipments originating in St. Louis.

Export Trade With Mexico.

A large export trade with Mexico is also being developed over railway lines which originate in St. Louis and lead directly through the Southwest to the border cities

The advantages in time and economy are here very marked. Less-than-carload shipments arrive at Laredo, Tex., from St. Louis in four days, at El Paso in four days and at Mexico City in seven days.

The great majority of manufactured goods entering the country of Mexico by rail either originates in or passes through St. Louis.

Heavy shipments of bulky goods also find advantageous all-water routes via the Mississippi River and New Orleans to the Mexican ports of entry.

GOVERNMENT AND STATE WORK HELP SPEED UP INDUSTRY

Road Building and River Improvement Work Scheduled for This Season.

The United States Government and the States of Missouri and Illinois are contributing in a large way to the relief of the industrial situation of the St. Louis area through advanced road building programs.

The Federal Government has asked for bids on $800,000 worth of river improvement work on the channel of the Missouri River. The contract is expected to be let soon with the intention of starting the work at an early date.

In St. Louis County the expenditure of the $10,000,000 road bond issue fund is under consideration. The State Highway Commission has also outlined a road program for St. Louis County.

The Illinois road building program calls for the expenditure of $37,000,000 instead of the $32,500,000 originally set aside for the purpose. A portion of amount will be spent in the Illinois section of this industrial district. Much of the work is already under contract.

STABILITY OF DISTRICT

Business Not Built on Booms and Temporary Inflations.

According to one of its oldest inhabitants, St. Louis and the St. Louis industrial district has always been free from booms and other temporary inflations.

The stability of the district and its industrial progress, according to authorities on the subject, are indicated in the uniform annual population increase, increase in building activity, assessed valuation of property, value of products and number of wage earners employed in industry.

St. Louis Industrial Area.

This district is homogeneous, dominated in its economic and social life by the central city and fostered throughout in its industrial development by the Industrial Club of St. Louis. Industries largely owned in St. Louis and controlled from central offices in the city are found throughout the district.

LOWER PRICE RANGE MARKS WEEK'S TRADE IN STOCKS

Measured by the Averages, the Drop for the Period Is Approximately 6 Points —Market Around Late August Levels.

SLIGHT GAINS IN SATURDAY'S MARKET

Two-Hour Trading Session Seems to Indicate Little More Than the Familiar Week-End Readjustment of Trading Accounts.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. — The stock market this week moved out of a slow decline into the largest selling movement on Friday since early last month.

Trading in the earlier sessions was characterized by a dullness usually associated with midsummer, but the pace quickly accelerated on Friday, when the bearish professionals, aided by a wild rumor or two, uncovered a considerable volume of stop-loss orders.

As measured by the averages the drop for the week was approximately 6 points, which puts the market back to around the late August levels.

The unfavorable interpretation placed on the German election results at first glance gave the market a poor start on the week. There followed reports of a status quo in steel production, severe dividend reductions and a distinct dullness in share trading on rallies.

Meanwhile the bull market in bonds continues. This is regarded as perhaps the most encouraging sign that has so far appeared since a steady advance in bonds invariably precedes recovery elsewhere.

Stocks Firm Yesterday.

Stocks firmed today and closed slightly higher, although the net gains were so small that the movement of prices in the quiet two-hour trading session seemed to indicate little more than the familiar week-end readjustment of professional trading accounts.

Execution of overnight selling orders at the opening sent quotations a point or so lower during the first half hour, but when the offerings had been easily absorbed professionals showed no desire to try for a further extension of the decline and the market hardened. A rally pushed prices moderately above the previous close and the profit taking set in, to reduce the advances, gains in a sizable list of prominent and active issues amounted to fractions.

Grains, especially wheat, steadied, but the extreme advances were small and both commodities closed slightly lower. Wheat finished unchanged to ¾c off, reflecting to some extent a lack of export demand. Corn eased ¼c to ¾c on week-end selling. Cotton's net losses ranged from one to five points.

The stock market was forced to worry along without much encouragement concerning the state of trade, which remains unsettled.

The president of an important coal-carrying railroad said that business conditions were becoming more cheerfully viewed and expressed a belief that although sentiment was "a trifle ahead" of actual improvement, the situation was on the upgrade. Bank clearings for the week showed the same proportionate decline from a year ago that has been appearing for some time.

No Haste to Cover.

Holders of the short position in the stock market were in no hurry about covering and attempts at squeeze were absent. U. S. Steel was pushed upward rather vigorously for a time and rallied about a point and a half, but closed only ¾ net higher. Sheet shares, together with the utilities, figured largely in the early selling.

Among the leaders making gains of half a point or less were American Can, General Motors, Radio, Bethlehem Steel, Woolworth, International Nickel, General Electric and Anaconda. American Telephone was stronger, closing more than a point higher, while Consolidated Gas, du Pont, Gillette, Goodyear, Foster-Wheeler, Stout, Webster and Auburn Auto rose about the same extent. International Harvester, Beatrice Cream

Measured by the Averages, the Drop for the Period Is Approximately 6 Points —Market Around Late August Levels.

SLIGHT GAINS IN SATURDAY'S MARKET

Two-Hour Trading Session Seems to Indicate Little More Than the Familiar Week-End Readjustment of Trading Accounts.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. — The stock market this week moved out of a slow decline into the largest selling movement on Friday since early last month.

Trading in the earlier sessions was characterized by a dullness usually associated with midsummer, but the pace quickly accelerated on Friday, when the bearish professionals, aided by a wild rumor or two, uncovered a considerable volume of stop-loss orders.

As measured by the averages, the drop for the week was approximately 6 points, which puts the market back to around the late August levels.

The unfavorable interpretation placed on the German election results at first glance gave the market a poor start on the week. There followed reports of a status quo in steel production, several dividend reductions and a distinct dullness in share trading on rallies.

Meanwhile the bull market in bonds continues. This is regarded as perhaps the most encouraging sign that has so far appeared, since a steady advance in bonds invariably precedes recovery elsewhere.

Stocks Firm Yesterday.

Stocks firmed today and closed slightly higher, although the net gains were so small that the movement of prices in the quiet two-hour trading session seemed to indicate little more than the familiar week-end readjustment of professional trading accounts.

Execution of overnight selling orders at the opening sent quotations a point or so lower during the first half hour, but when these offerings had been easily absorbed, professionals showed no desire to try for a further extension of the decline and the market hardened. A rally pushed prices moderately above the previous close and then profit taking set in, to reduce the advances, gains in a sizable list of prominent and active issues amounted to fractions.

Grains, especially wheat, steadied, but the extreme advances were small and both commodities closed slightly lower. Wheat finished unchanged to ⅜c off, reflecting to some extent a lack of export demand. Corn eased ⅛c to ⅜c on week-end selling. Cotton's net losses ranged from one to five points.

The stock market was forced to worry along without much encouragement concerning the state of trade, which remains unsettled.

The president of an important coal-carrying railroad said that business conditions were being more cheerfully viewed and expressed a belief that although sentiment was "a trifle ahead" of actual improvement, the situation was on the upgrade. Bank clearings for the week showed the same proportionate decline from a year ago that has been appearing for some time.

No Haste to Cover.

Holders of the short position in the stock market were in no haste about covering and attempts at a squeeze were absent. U. S. Steel was pushed upward rather vigorously for a time and rallied about a point and a half, but closed only ¼ net higher. Sheel shares, together with the utilities, figured largely in the early selling.

Among the leaders making net gains of half a point or less were American Can, General Motors, Radio, Bethlehem Steel, Woolworth, International Nickel, General Electric and Anaconda. American Telephone was stronger, closing more than a point higher, while Consolidated Gas, du Pont, Gillette, Goodyear, Foster-Wheeler, Stone & Webster and Auburn Auto rose to about the same extent. International Harvester, Beatrice Creamery and Columbian Carbon were also in demand.

SLOWER TRADE IN LOCAL STOCK LIST LAST WEEK

International Shoe, National Candy, Moloney Electric and Curtis Mfg. Have Lower Ranges of Over a Point Each.

The St. Louis Stock market showed a lower price trend on a smaller aggregate turnover during the week just ended on the exchange. There were exceptions. Southwestern Bell preferred, Securities Investment and Key Boiler Equipment were higher. Wagner Electric closed ¼ lower.

International Shoe and National Candy ranged down more than a point. Moloney Electric also was off over a point at one time. Fractional declines took place in Fulton Iron, which sold at 1, in Coca-Cola Bottling and Ely-Walker.

In the banking share group, declines for the period were shown by three or more institutions stock.

United Railways 4s sold at 67 to 67¼, the latter being ¼ higher in value.

ery and J. I. Case improved 2 or more and International Business Machines was up 5.

Western Union was weak, dropping 5 points on small turnover. Eastman Kodak, Standard Gas, Nash Motors, Loew's and American Power & Light eased moderately. Johns-Manville, Standard Oil of New Jersey, North American and Montgomery Ward closed unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were mostly firm, although some of the Latin-Americans sagged. The Spanish peseta jumped about 20 points.

SMALL DECLINES SHOWN BY COTTON AT CLOSE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—A moderate volume of trading was reported in cotton here today but it seemed to be pretty well divided between buying and selling orders and prices fluctuated within a range of 5 to 6 points. The new December contract, for instance, ruled between 11.01c and 10.96c, closing at 10.98c, compared with 11.01c at the close of the previous day. The final tone of the market was steady at net declines of 1 to 6 points. Spot quiet, mids, 10.85c.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 4 points under some overnight selling orders which seemed to include a somewhat larger proportion of hedging than recently. The trade was a considerable buyer at the decline and prices steadied up a point or two right after the call. The support was by no means aggressive, however, and the market eased off again under scattering realizing or liquidation combined with Southern, local and Wall Street selling. The new crop months sold off from 10.82c to 10.77c and March from 11.29c to 11.22c and closing prices were within a point or two of the lowest.

According to local brokers, Southern hedge selling has been a little more active since the close of last Thursday, but there has also been an increase in the volume of trade buying around or slightly below the 11-cent level for December contracts. These two factors seem to come very near striking a balance during today's trading. Business otherwise was attributed largely to week-end evening up and further liquidation of near months partly in the way of switching. At the close the old style October contract was selling 4 points above the new and old December was 6 points above the new contract for that delivery. No special news feature was particularly emphasized in connection with the narrow fluctuations or trading.

Liverpool was about as due on the New York close of Friday. Later on cables said there had been scattering liquidation and hedging in that market but that the spot demand for cotton cloths was well maintained with an increased turnover reported at the Shanghai stations. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 94,000 bales, against 92,080 last year and 81,708 two years ago.

BUSINESS NOTES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—A vigorous fall demand for household electrical items has developed in the New York market and producers expect a bigger business this month than was handled in September last year. The buying now being done by stores, it was pointed out, covers supplies which customarily are purchased during the summer months, and is confined to articles wanted for immediate sale. Coffee urns, percolators and electric toasters are the leading items at present.

An appeal to manufacturers to help Santo Domingo business men by being lenient with credit was sent out today to members of the National Association of Manufacturers by officials of the organization in New York. The notice calls attention to the damage done by the recent hurricane.

The improved business during the past week in the hosiery line has extended to the half-hose division and a decided pickup in sales was reported in the primary market. Wool mixture fancy half-hose is being bought more actively, despite the fact that the weather has not been of a nature to encourage purchasing.

WEAK AND UNCERTAIN CLOSE ON THE GERMAN BOERSE

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—The German Boerse was again weak today and continued weak and uncertain to the close of the market.

Declines in pivotal shares ranged from 3 to 9 per cent.

The banks, considering intervention useless in view of the prevailing nervousness, bought only the material they required. The result was that the weaker shares suffered.

Elected to Chamber of Commerce Board.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Junius P. Fishburn of Roanoke, Va., was elected a director of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at a meeting of the board today.

He succeeds W. M. Wiley of Sharples, W. Va., who was made vice president of the chamber for its southeastern division several months ago.

WEEKLY COPPER REVIEW

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Two successive quarter-cent declines in the export price of copper brought the price down to 10.80c f. a. f., or to a parity with the domestic level of 10.50c, which is now being quoted by all producers for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley. Although a slight increase in buying from Germany developed late in the week, the foreign demand had not broadened materially. Domestic consumers remained out of the market, although it was reported that they would be interested in offerings at concessions. The domestic price, however, was said to be firmly held at 10.50c.

Continued weakness abroad depressed the tin market and prices were easy.

Lead was quiet, with the demand small and prices steady.

Zinc was quiet and steady, with buyers generally indifferent.

Antimony ruled quiet, but prices held about steady.

Wall Street News and Comment

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—C. W. Nash, president of Nash Motors Co., says the "one certain method" of overcoming unemployment, the loss of confidence which has affected practically every section of the country and general business depression "is to begin building things that people in this country need at a cost which eliminates a maximum of the old easygoing overhead and brings out the highest possible value at the lowest possible selling cost." He added that such a manufacturing policy "is the one way to increase the value of the dollar to a point where buyers will re-enter the market in volume."

The Central Railroad of Brazil is inquiring for 10 type 2-10-4 locomotives, Railway Age reports. The Illinois Steel Co. has ordered 8 roll transfer cars from the Lorain Steel Co. The National Tube Co. is inquiring for 10 standard gauge car trucks.

World output of slab zinc showed an increase last month over July, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports. Production in August totaled 93,185 tons against 92,771 tons in July. The figures, however, showed a decrease from an output of 96,302 tons in June.

August sales of Dominion Stores totaled $2,117,776, a decrease of $154,093 from August last year. For the first eight months the years sales were $16,225,265, a decrease of $41,289 from sales for the corresponding period of 1929.

The early average crude oil production in California for August was 605,499 barrels, compared with 606,517 barrels in July, the American Petroleum Institute reports. Stock figures covering all products held by the principal marketing companies at all points in the Pacific Coast territory, including British Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii, at the end of August totaled 31,223,700 barrels, a decrease of 1,002,155 barrels during the month.

Daniel Williams, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, has been elected a director and chairman of the board of the Buffalo & Susquehanna. George M. Shriver, executive vice president of the B. & O., has been elected a director of the Buffalo and Susquehanna.

Among the first-class railroads to report the result of August operations was the Chesapeake & Ohio, including the Hocking Valley, which showed net operating income for the month amounting to $4,288,785, compared with $4,692,363 for the corresponding month last year.

Sterling Morton, president of the Teletype Corporation, the purchase of which by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was announced yesterday, disclosed today that the foreign business of the corporation was sold about two weeks ago to a subsidiary of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. Mr. Morton said that sales of the corporation this year will be somewhat under the total of $12,000,000 for 1929.

E. E. Loomis, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, said today that a more cheerful outlook is being taken on general business conditions. "I think," he added, "that this sentiment is a trifle ahead of the actual improvement, but at the same time business is on the upgrade rather than standing still or slowing down."

NARROW MOVEMENTS TO PRICES ON THE CURB

Activity Above Recent Half Day Sessions Sales Totaling 225,800 Shares.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Price movement in the Curb market followed a narrow groove today, and the list closed steady. Activity was far above recent half day sessions. Turnover totaling 225,800 shares.

The principal development of the session was the appearance of half hearted buying that checked the decline which has continued throughout the week with few interruptions. Bearish operations at the start of the session pushed most of the active stocks slightly below the previous close but declines were held within fractional limits as new support levels were established. There was a partial rebound toward the close and some market leaders registered small net gains. Changes generally were of small proportions.

The steady tone of the market was sharply delineated by the activity in utility stocks which have been the principal target of sellers. Electric Bond and Share was traded between 76⅜ and 77¾, a very narrow movement in contrast with previous sessions, and was ⅛ higher at the close. Niagara Hudson, United Gas, Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line, Brazilian Traction, United Light and Power A, Middlewest Utilities, International Superpower gained up to ¾ of a point. American Superpower was steady. American Gas and Electric yielded 2 points.

Petroleum issues attracted little support. Cities Service, Standard of Indiana, Vacuum, Houston and Imperial closed virtually unchanged. Standard Oil of Ohio broke into new low ground for the year, off 1⅞ net, and Gulf Oil and Humble worked lower on thin sales.

Specialties and industrials were mixed. Technicolor, Translux, Newmont Mining, were very firm. Diamond Match declined to a new year's low. Canadian Marconi was very active and steady. Good buying appeared to support Segal Lock and Hardware. Motor and aviation stocks were narrowly irregular.

Goldman Sachs was the strongest stock in its group, advancing ½.

WHEAT FUTURES RISE BUT FAIL TO HOLD GAIN

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Sept. 20.—The wheat market closed unchanged to ¼c lower following a temporary substantial upturn on Secretary of Agriculture Hyde's communication to the Chicago Board of Trade relative to charges of Soviet short selling wheat. The local market, however, followed Chicago in reaction when the Chicago board claimed the privilege of "hedging" was open to the world. Liverpool wheat closed 1⅛d to more lower, the setback being credited to Russian and Canadian offerings of wheat. Rain in Argentine also was called factor. Corn closed ⅛d to 1d lower.

December wheat opened at 84⅛c, May wheat 91c, December corn 86⅜c and May corn 89c.

In the cash grain market, soft wheat was unchanged to ½c lower. Offerings were light and buyers supplied their needs from local stores. Sales of No. 1 from elevators were reported at 13,000 bushels. There were some unfilled orders in the market and inquiry was fairly fair, but the demand was limited to bright starchy grain. Dark types sold only at reduced levels. Sales of No. 4 were on a basis 6c above the Chicago December figure. Hard wheat was down ½-2c. There were only a few cars on sale, some of which were held on shipping orders. There was pretty good inquiry for good No. 1 Western wheat. The only sale of No. 1 was a car of Illinois on a basis ½c below the Chicago December figure. No. 2, with protein strength was offered to arrive from the West on the basis of 1c above the Kansas City December figure for 12 per cent, 2c above for 13 per cent, 3c above for 13½ per cent and 4c above for 14 per cent f. o. b. Kansas City. Corn was steady to 1c lower. There was a good demand for the yellow and the basis as compared to futures was ½c to 1c higher. The chief buyers were industries. Oats were steady to ½c lower. There was a good demand and the available supply cleared closely.

Local wheat receipts, which were 130,000 bu. compared with 128,800 a week ago and 60,200 a year ago, included 54 cars local and 39 through. Corn receipts, which were 72,800 bu., compared with 68,000 a week ago and 61,600 a year ago, included 31 cars local and 21 through. Oats receipts, which were 44,000 bu. compared with 35,200 a week ago and 44,000 a year ago, included 18 cars local and 2 through. Hay receipts were 15 cars local and 25 through.

Closing grain prices were as follows: December wheat, 84c; May wheat, 91c; December corn, 85¾c; May corn, 88¾c.

WHEAT CLOSES NERVOUS, UNCHANGED TO LOWER

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Grain prices rose and fell today chiefly in accord with alternating developments with regard to charges made that the Russian Government was disorganizing market values here by selling large amounts of wheat short.

After a hesitant start, wheat jumped up 2¾c a bushel, responsive to word of moves in connection with trades of Russian agents, but near the end of the day prices fell off to new bottom records.

The late weakness of wheat was about simultaneous with news that President John A. Bunnell of the Board of Trade had telegraphed to Secretary of Agriculture Hyde saying the board was a recognized world market, and that hedges protecting grain in all positions, were customarily placed here.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at a fractional rally from the day's bottom figures, and unchanged to ¼c lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to ⅞cff; oats ¼-⅜c up, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2c.

Increased selling pressure which became manifest during the final hour of wheat trading swept March and May deliveries of wheat and December and May deliveries of rye down to the lowest price levels reached yet this season, although the greatly diminished switch, replacement of stocks lately, was encouraging back to 1906 for a correspondingly time of year.

Earlier in the day, buyers of future deliveries here were in a majority, but the buying ceased after a lively advance. Then rapid zigzag fluctuations set in and the market flopped downward fast as the time for the final notice drew near.

Contributing to nonetheless of wheat values were fresh share setbacks in quotations at Liverpool with dispatches from there saying the reason was further offerings of Australian wheat at relatively lower prices. There were also messages telling of rains in Argentina, where crops have recently been adversely affected by dearth of moisture. On the other hand, friends here of price support were inclined to stress today on assertions that top estimates of Canada's exportable surplus of wheat are but 48,000,000 bushels and that even if this total is relied upon as accurate there still has been much wheat accounted more than in full.

Despite possibilities of frost tonight in Northern Illinois and Northern Indiana, corn prices broke sharply when wheat suffered a crash tumble. Throughout the day, corn and oats paralleled closely the action of wheat, corn at one stage showing fine firmness in the absence of any selling pressure.

CATTLE AND HOGS ARE LOWER FOR THE WEEK

Swine Prices Off 25 Cents for Most Part, Some Lights 50 Cents.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Sept. 20.—(United States Department of Agriculture).

CATTLE—Receipts the past week approximated 19,728, as compared with 21,301 the previous week and 25,904 during the corresponding period last year. Stronger prices on the bulk of steers in the week's initial trade were followed by a downward reaction that set in late Tuesday and persisted throughout the week's remaining sessions. Sharp losses were scored on practically all fleshy stock, replacement cattle alone maintaining a steady price level. Compared with the previous week's close, the market declined 50c to 75c on native and western steers. Heifers, mixed yearlings and medium bulls, beef cows off 25c to 50c, low cutters and cutters 25c down, and vealers $1.25 lower. In steers the top reached $13 for 1076-pound yearlings and 1128-pound matured steers, averaging 1234 pounds, and 1055-pound average brought $12.50, with top on western steers $12.90. Beef cows registered at $7 for top, while medium bulls made a high of $6 early in the period. Vealers at the best time reached $13.50 and several lots of feeder steers sold up to $11. Over the week's run of 1,450 pounds brought $9.25, $10.50 and $11. Quite liberal receipts of stockers and feeders for the week were reported, with bulk of $7.50 to $11. Other medium weight steers, or those averaging 1100 to 1195 pounds, ranged from $8 to $10, bulk $9.65 to $11.15. Lightweight steers ranged from $7 to $13, the majority selling from $8

FISCHER—In loving memory of our dearly beloved mother, Anna Fischer, who departed this life four years ago, Sept. 22, 1926:
A precious one from us has gone,
The voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by HER CHILDREN.

FOAN—In loving memory of my darling husband and our dear daddy, Fred Foan, who departed this life suddenly, Sept. 24, 1929.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN. (c)

HARE—In memory of our dear husband and father, William Hare, who passed away Sept. 23, 1926.
We think of you in silence,
No eye may see us weep,
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.
Sadly missed by WIFE AND DAUGHTER.

KAPPAUFF—In loving memory of my dear husband, John S. Kappauff, who departed this life three years ago Sept. 20, 1927.
A precious one from us has gone,
The voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN. (c)

KESSELHEIM—Emma, in loving memory, who died Sept. 27, 1929.
We think of you in silence,
No eye can see us weep;
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.

IN MEMORIAM

PFEIFER—In memory of Joseph Pfeifer, who departed this life Sept. 20, 1928.
His memory is as dear today,
As in the hour he passed away.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, MOTHER AND SONS.

PFINGSTEN—In loving memory of our dear little mother, Pauline Pfingsten, who passed on Sept. 23, 1926.
Her beautiful life will live forever in the hearts of those who loved her.
MOTHER AND THE PFINGSTEN FAMILY.

PROBST—In loving remembrance of my dear husband, August Probst, who departed this life, Sept. 18, 1929.
One year has passed since that sad day,
My dear husband passed away.
I saw him suffer, heard his sighs,
With aching heart and weeping eyes.
I saw him sinking, hour by hour,
Yet could not stay death's awful power;
But now he calmly sleeps at last.
All pains, all aches, all suffering past.
Sadly missed by WIFE AND SONS.

REID—In memory of Bertha Reid who passed away Sept. 23, 1929.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary trouble and trials are past
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore
Till God called her home to suffer no more.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND THOSE WHO LOVED HER.

ROACH—In loving memory of our dear mother, Laura Roach, who died Sept. 22, 1929.
No one knows how much we miss you;
No one knows the bitter pain
We have suffered since we lost you;
Life will never be the same.
Sadly missed by her daughters,
MRS. ROY TABLER AND MRS. FRANK SMITH.

SCHAEFER—In loving memory of our beloved husband, Joseph Schaefer, who died Sept. 23, 1929.
Sad and sudden was the call,
For my dear husband was called by all;
We little thought that on that day
He would be called so far away.
His LOVING WIFE, MOTHER, SISTERS, BROTHERS AND FRIENDS.

SCHAPPERT—In memory of my dear sister, Mary L. Schappert (Nurse), who died Sept. 19, 1923.
My heart seems withered in sorrow,
The time is lonesome and blue,
I dread the expected tomorrow
You don't know how I miss you.
Sadly missed by your lonely sister,
GEORGIA COWLES. (c)

SEYMOUR—In loving remembrance of our dear daughter and sister, Beulah Seymour, who departed this life Sept. 23, 1929.
Sad and sudden was the call
For our dear sister loved by all;
We little thought that on that day
She would be called so far away.
Sadly missed by mother and sisters.
MRS. CASTELEN AND DAUGHTERS. (c)

VOLLMER—In loving memory of our dear son, Carley Vollmer, who passed away Sept. 24, 1915.
Gone but not forgotten. Sadly missed by FATHER AND MOTHER. (c)

WARD—In loving memory of Thomas J. Ward, who passed away Sept. 21, 1927.
You're not alone, father dear.
Never shall you be
As long as life and memory lasts,
We shall remember thee.
Sadly missed by WIFE, CHILDREN, GRANDCHILDREN, RELATIVES AND FRIENDS.

WIELAND—In loving memory of my dear husband, William Wieland, who died Sept. 18, 1926:
Nothing can ever take away
The love our hearts hold dear;
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrances keep them near.
Sadly missed by WIFE.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PART TEN — ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 21, 1930 — PAGES 1— 4K

Show Season Opens Tonight

Shubert First to Get Going With Eugenie Leontovich in the Comedy, "Candle Light"—Casey Players, Under Direction of Mary Hart, Start Saturday in "Apron Strings"—Ethel Barrymore Coming West to Try Out "Scarlet Sister Mary."

THE dramatic season gets under way in St. Louis tonight with the Shubert reopening its doors for Eugenie Leontovich in "Candle Light" and on next Saturday night the Casey Players start a new run of stock offerings with "Apron Strings," a new comedy which, so far, has been played only in New York.

Leontovich, who, scarcely a year ago, practically unknown in this country and almost unheralded, was seen here in the delightful role of Mrs. Pepys in "And So To Bed." Since her appearance here, Leontovich duplicated her success in Chicago and other large cities. "Candle Light," her present vehicle, is a Viennese comedy which was presented by Gilbert Miller last season at the Empire Theater in New York. Written by Siegfried Geyer, one of the younger European farceurs, it enjoyed runs in Vienna and Berlin. The English adaptation played for 16 months at the Criterion, London. Gilbert Miller commissioned P. G. Wodehouse, playwright and novelist, to provide the American version, which is said to sparkle with witty dialogue and saucy situations.

Leontovich has the role of a servant-maid, masquerading as her mistress to win the affections of a prince, who turns out to be only the prince's valet. "Choose neither women nor linen by candle light," an old proverb, applies as the text of the story, which all takes place one evening in a bachelor apartment.

ALL of the members of the Casey Stock Company reached St. Louis during the past week and began preliminary work on "Apron Strings," the comedy which will start the season going next Saturday night. Mary Hart (Mrs. Arthur Casey) has been in town for some time getting the theater in shape for the opening and seeing that work was under way on the scenery.

The advance sale of seats for the season has been remarkably large, Miss Hart reports, and the indications are that the Casey Players will repeat the success of last year. Plays will again be given for periods of two weeks with longer engagements if the customers show a continued demand for seats. It is settled however that "Apron Strings,' the opening bill, will be kept on for only two weeks for Mae Robson, who will be the visiting star in the succeeding attraction, "Mother's Millions," is under contract to appear on Oct. 5 and her New York engagements will not permit a later date.

Among the players who will be seen in "Apron Strings" will be Pierre Watkin, May B. Hurst and Arthur Pierson, who were members of last season's company, and Sue Conroy, Cathryn Capel and Philip Lord, newcomers.

Willard Robinson, Louis Tanno and Ted Dean, who are also new to the organization, are in the city although they do not take part in the opening attraction.

✡ ✡ ✡ ✡

GETTING back to Mme. Leontovich of whom St. Louis theater goers know so little save for her charming performance in "And So To Bed," it has been reported that she was the toast of Imperial Moscow in the days of the Czar. She was the wife of one of the city's richest men and had her own theater. She had jewels, a country estate, and social position. Then came the revolution and she had to flee from Moscow. Her husband and brother were killed, her riches were seized and she sold her jewels to bribe her way out of Russia. In Paris, where she made her way, she scarcely had enough to eat. She deemed herself lucky to get an engagement as a featured player in a revue there.

The Shuberts brought the revue to this country but it was a failure. Leonie, to earn her modest living, became a chorus girl in the Winter Garden Revue. She next accepted a job in the chorus of "Blossom Time," but her histrionic ability couldn't remain hidden. After a year in the chorus she was assigned to a small role and when an actress with a foreign accent was needed for the role of Mrs. Pepys in "And So To Bed," Leonie received the part. Her name went up in light by the time the play reached Chicago, and in "Candle Light" she is reported to have more than clinched her high repute in her adopted country.

OF interest to theatergoers is the announcement that Ethel Barrymore will give her first performance of the title role of "Scarlet Sister Mary," the play made by Daniel Reed from the novel by Julian Peterkin, at Columbus, O., next Thursday night. She then will appear for one week in Cleveland and one week in Pittsburg, opening in New York in her own theater on Tuesday, Oct. 14.

Probably no theatrical announcement in recent years created the universal interest as did that of Miss Barrymore's intention of acting Si-Maye, the Gullah Negress in Mrs. Peterkin's unusual story. Her first appearance in this character is her first as a Negress, and will reveal another phase of her art in sharp contrast to anything she hitherto has done in the theater.

The world premiere of "Scarlet Sister Mary" in Columbus also marks the stage debut of Miss Barrymore's daughter, Ethel Barrymore Colt, who represents the fifth generation of the famous Barrymore-Drew family in the theater. The original plan was that Miss Colt was to wait for Miss Barrymore's second production of the season, but the daughter persuaded her mother to let her first appear in "Scarlet Sister Mary."

Except for a group of singers, the entire company supporting Miss Barrymore is composed of white players. Prominent in the cast will be Estelle Winwood, Beatrice Terry, Georgie Drew Mendum, Anita Rothe, Ethel Barrymore Colt, Walter Gilbert, Horace Braham, William B. Hack, John Roseleigh, Leo Kennedy, Burke Clarke, Malcolm Soltan, Marcel Dill, Alan Campbell, Dan Bagnell and Wilbur Cox. In all, there will be 60 people in the production.

JACK DONAHUE, the dancing comedian, last seen here with Marilyn Miller in "Rosalie," several seasons ago, will follow "Candle Light" into the Shubert with his successful musical comedy, "Sons O' Guns." The piece is to open its season here on Monday night, Sept. 29. Donahue's leading woman will be Gina Malo and the cast and production comes direct to St. Louis after an all season run at the Imperial Theater in New York.

Little Theater Will Start Building Fund

THE Little Theater of St. Louis plans for its 1930-31 season will be detailed to more than 100 season subscription campaign workers, at a dinner at the theater, 812 Union boulevard, tomorrow night. According to G. Alex Hope, business manager, an unusual series of plays is contemplated, including "The Constant Nymph" by Margaret Kennedy and Basil Dean; "Right You Are," by Pirandello; and "The Mask and the Face" by Chiarelli. The first of these will be presented early in November. Frederick Kitson Cowley, for three years the professional director, returns this year.

A feature of this year's program will be the application of two cents of each ticket sale to a building fund for a badly needed new theater, to provide the city with a little theater production center comparable to those in Dallas, Pasadena, Indianapolis and Cleveland.

Old Mellers Coming Back

Two Film Companies Rushing Work on Screen Version of "East Lynne," and a Couple of Others Are Turning Out Talkies of "Resurrection"—Chaplin Finally Completes "Circus Life"—A St. Louis Girl Who Rose to Fame via England.

NOT since the days of the old stock company at the ancient Imperial Theater have St. Louis audiences looked upon "East Lynne." Movie customers for the most part have never heard of the guaranteed tear-wringer but now they are going to learn all about it for, whether or not it indicates a scarcity of movie material, two Hollywood companies simultaneously are falling back on that old standby for feature pictures.

The ancient sob-melodrama, for years a reliable box office attraction for stock companies and tent shows, is to be presented by Liberty productions in what they call a "modern, bobbed-haired version" retitled "Ex-Flame," while Fox offers a talkie that will be, with few changes, much like the old silent picture.

Ann Harding will do the honors for Fox, and Marion Nixon, who thus far in her cinematic career has been only sweet and good, will portray the unhappy heroine for Liberty.

By coincidence, two companies are planning to re-make "Resurrection," in which Dolores del Rio leaped to fame on the silent screen.

Universal has John Boles and Lupe Velez co-starring in its strictly non-musical version of the Tolstoi story, but Tiffany, which had the idea first and even went so far as to build a few sets, and have a musical score written, has not yet selected its leads. For them, the picture is stamped "postponed," but will be produced ere long.

In Universal's version Boles will sing a song or two, but the studio, apparently having read the wall-writing in regard to musical pictures, emphasizes that the songs are only those which Tolstoi had in his novel, and not the offspring of Tin Pan Alley.

Once before, years ago, did movie companies strive to beat each other to release with the same story. Theda Bara's "Romeo and Juliet" reached the screen about the same time as Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne's.

NEITHER of these two old timers are particularly cheerful dramas but the fans who go to the cinema palaces to be amused will cheer up with the announcement that, after some two years of work, off and on, Charlie Chaplin has completed "City Lights" and it will be sent on the rounds of the picture houses early this winter. There will be no dialogue in the film for Chaplin is sticking strictly, as far as conversation goes, to the silents, but there will be a synchronized music score, much of the music being composed by Chaplin—who plays the violin, organ and other instruments—and natural sound effects. Chaplin, who writes, acts, directs, casts, produces and edits his own pictures, will turn to his first job of synchronization in ten days. It is interesting to note that one who has been so versatile in the silent film brings to the field of sound synchronization a background in music that far exceeds that of the average film-maker. The versatility of Chaplin, who has been all things to the cinema, is now enhanced.

Let there be no mistake on one point: Charlie Chaplin is the champion of silent pictures and there is no disposition on his part to be anything but that. It is, in this connection, no secret that the entire motion picture industry is awaiting the showings of "City Lights." It is, also, no secret that Chaplin and the few who have been permitted to see "rushes" of the picture regard "City Lights" as the funniest Chaplin vehicle yet offered the public. "The Circus," his last film, shattered even the high record of "The Gold Rush."

✡ ✡ ✡ ✡

CECIL CUNNINGHAM, known as an English stage comedienne, who is playing a feature role in "Anybody's Woman" at the Ambassador this week, is really a St. Louis girl, born and bred right here. She sang in a local church choir from the time she was seven until she was seventeen, when she left home to go to New York and on the stage. Her first work was in the chorus of "Mlle. Modiste" in 1906. In 1912 she leaped into stardom in the title role of "The Pink Lady," replacing Hazel Dawn.

In 1919 she appeared in the first production of the Greenwich Village Follies. In 1925 she was in "Kid Boots" with Eddie Cantor. Vodvil occupied her time until her trip to London in 1927.

She was in England visiting friends during the Christmas holidays when Jack Hylton heard her sing and persuaded her to take bookings in London. The result was that she played a solid 19 weeks in the variety houses of London and in a musical production, "Merry Mary."

Miss Cunningham looks English, speaks with an English accent, and has an English name and mannerism—but she is St. Louis born just the same. Her father was Patrick Henry Cunningham, old-time ball player, one of the great outfielders of his day and a player with the old St. Louis Browns.

AND still another Missouri girl who, a year ago was a private secretary to a broker, is today a screen actress with the promise of a great career ahead. That's the meteoric rise of Jane Keith, flaxen-haired Kansas City young woman, who is featured in "The Sea Wolf," the talking picture based on Jack London's thrilling story, at the Fox Theater this week.

Leaving the University of Chicago to enter the business world, she became the secretary to a Michigan City broker. A Hollywood visit last year brought Miss Keith an introduction into film circles and small parts in "The Florodora Girl" and "Whoopee" resulted.

On the eve of her return to Michigan City, she heard that Alfred Santell was looking for a heroine in the forthcoming "Sea Wolf." She arranged a meeting with the director and took a test, competing against 140 other applicants for the part, the majority of them experienced actresses.

Summoned next morning to Director Santell's office, she was handed a pen with the request, "Sign right here, please."

BY OTIS SKINNER

The writer has just completed a celluloid version of his famous play, "Kismet." He enjoyed the experience to such an extent that he plans to film another of his plays. Otis Skinner has more than 50 years' theatrical service to his credit. He made his debut in "Woodleigh" at the Philadelphia Museum in 1877. He was leading man with Modjeska for five years. His favorite role is "Shylock."

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 20.

IT is an amazing city, this Hollywood, a spot put on the map entirely by the motion pictures. To the Easterner, like myself, who comes within the charm of its appeal, it is a town of youth and gayety. It seems to be living in a continual state of Mardi Gras. Moving picture premieres are matters of real civic importance.

On the evening of my arrival from across the continent, I discovered the city en fete, quite bursting with excitement. Illuminated airplanes swept the sky, crowds surged through the streets and hundreds of searchlights shot their shafts to the stars. Vehicular traffic was almost at a standstill. It seemed to me that the Pope, Mussolini, King George, the Prince of Wales and Queen Marie must have arrived, and that President Hoover and Lindbergh were there to welcome them. Upon making some timid inquiries I learned that it was all because "The Dawn Patrol" was having its premiere!

I have ceased to marvel at these exhibitions. It is but natural that Hollywood, where entertainment is born and reared for the recreation of the universe, should be a town of joy and festivity, Hollywood has a lurking twinkle in its eye. Even in the stress of the intensive work at the studios you're never quite sure when a laugh is going to break forth. Or at whose expense.

IT was in the silent picture version of my old play, "Kismet," in 1920, that I made my initial acquaintance with the films and the intricacies of the studio.

In those days I received whispered warnings from my initiated friends and from studio officials. I was informed that I must forget the theater.

We of the regular stage were looked upon somewhat askance by the old line silent film folk. We referred to them rather tolerantly as the "Movies." They retorted by calling us the "Speakies." I felt myself wholly persona non grata. Everybody seemed to look to me to be decidedly "high-hat."

But I approached my task with due humility. I had much to learn and I knew it. I asked questions right and left and I profited by my instructions. I had been told that it was in the power of the cameraman to make you or mar you. If he didn't take a fancy to you he could throw your features into repellant shadows and make you look like the very devil.

I confided my fears to Tony Gaudio, who has since that day achieved a brilliant success in the camera field. I invited him to lunch at the little studio cafe.

"Tony," I said, "I'm told that if the cameraman doesn't like me he is going to ruin me. Well, there's only one way out of it. You've got to like me! Whenever I am doing the wrong thing you tell me. I am in your hands."

When I saw the "rushes" I felt that Tony had thrown me a life line and my fears abated. He must have liked me. Anyway, he produced some beautiful photography.

BUT really I needn't have been so apprehensive. I was an actor and actors should know how to act. This was my old play, "Kismet," and I had presented it for three long seasons in the theater.

It was a strange new art, this cinema, but not so unapproachable if only you did your work quietly and slowly in the close-ups.

That was 10 years ago. We are all "speakies" now. Hollywood has become the Great White Way of Manhattan, and where formerly only the motion picture actors were to be seen the personnel of the stage has merged with that of these silent people.

But with the newer order has entered a new timidity; and, perhaps, a new inspiration—the microphone. If it isn't an encouragement, at least it's a terror, and terror moves us to desperate deeds.

No longer do we hear the studio orchestra—a piano, a violin and a saxophone droning out sad ditties for emotional scenes, and melodramatic "hurries" for the

Behind the Screens

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 20.

NOT all of the cinema city's characters are in the movies. For instance: Peter, the Hermit: He is a middle-aged recluse who occasionally comes down from his hillside shack to wander about the city. He wears two pieces of clothing — a pair of trousers cut off at the knees and a sport shirt of khaki. He is always shoeless and his beard grows down to his chest and his hair to his shoulders.

MARION DAVIES

He once was "in pictures" but he quit them because there were too few roles and too little pay for those he did get. A burro is his companion; he lives on vegetables and he is deeply religious.

Jim, the barber: He may have another name but no one ever uses it. Jim is the stars' permanent waver and regular bobber. Because he has a reputation of being the confidant of his celebrated clients, many others less noted visit him. But he never tells tales.

The Dummy: He is a deaf mute who has sold papers in front of a boulevard cafe for several years. His customers are regular and many of them go out of their way to buy his wares. When his best patrons go away he is at the train to bid them goodby and there again to greet them when they return.

SYLVIA: Through her efforts stars are kept in shape and hence in pictures. Besides being a masseur extraordinary, Sylvia has quite a reputation as a wit. Gloria Swanson, Marion Davies, Constance Bennett, Mary Lewis and Ramon Novarro are some of her regular clients. Regulars get rates; others, $25 an hour, with results guaranteed.

Dan Toby: Chubby, smiling, red haired. He sells clothing during the daytime. His nights are given to announcing; no event seems complete without him. His fog horn voice and natural humor could silence a communistic uprising.

Oscar, the bootblack: He is a fixture on the Paramount lot, where he is "Nine Ball" to everyone. He knows official decisions before the casting director is informed. He has shined the shoes of more famous persons than any other shiner in town.

Henry: Once he sang in the Metropolitan. Now he owns a popular eating place and when he isn't assisting in the direction of a Chaplin picture he operates his cafe. He is fat and cheerful and his last name is Bergman.

RUTH CHATTERTON will play three roles in "The Right to Love," but only two of them at the same time.

In the first part of the story she will be a girl of 18 and a woman of 40; in the second portion she will be a grandmother. In many of the scenes she will be literally talking to herself.

RUTH CHATTERTON

It sounds confusing, but motion picture technicians are in their glory when they are taking voices and characters out of films and putting others in their places.

Miss Chatterton will speak the dialogue of one of her characters while someone else says words which she will speak later. When the scene is taken the second time with the star in one of her other roles, her voice in that part is recorded while the double repeats what Miss Chatterton said in the first take.

Then the double is eliminated from the film and her voice from the record and the two films and two conversations of Miss Chatterton are pieced together.

It sounds very tricky, but nevertheless it is convincing when completed.

FROM the standpoint of the screen player Hollywood is a professional structure of five clearly defined divisions, with obvious boundaries between them.

In the upper bracket are the stars. Next in importance are the featured players. Then, in order, come the bit players, the extras, and the atmosphere, or mob.

To the lay-public the differentiation is vague. In Hollywood the rules are generally understood.

A star, according to filmtown's unwritten code, is an actor or actress whose name is of more box office importance than the title of any picture in which he or she appears.

With a featured player, the next step downward in the scale, the obverse is true. Main titles list featured players as second in importance to the name of the production.

Bit players generally are those not under contract to a studio; free lance character actors and actresses who are called in for small parts, or "bits."

Extras, fourth from the top in professional standing, still are classed as professionals. They are the men, women and children listed at Central Casting Bureau, and are called whenever trained film workers are wanted in numbers. They are paid a uniform wage of $7.50 a day.

THE studious are taking up the cry of "better times are here," and even in the plants where a production lull is pronounced the atmosphere is more cheery.

Recent box-office receipts have been more encouraging, despite August heat, and studios, like human beings, encouraged by success and depressed by failure, are on their toes to insure a continuance of better fortune.

ALICE WHITE

Observers of film trends find the reason for the upward tendency easy to explain—much better pictures. Last spring, when midget golf began to assert itself dangerously as a rival to the theaters, the movie houses were in poor condition to combat it.

The fare they had to offer was, with few exceptions, none too good. The novelty of talkies had passed, the public was tiring of musical films and the excess supply of musicals on hand had to be exhibited.

ALICE WHITE appears to be now, more than ever before, the victim of the flapper type she helped to make popular.

Free-lancing now, her first picture under the new venture is "Sweethearts on Parade," another nice flapper story, dull beyond the average. Like too many talkies, it is full of excess conversation.

Lloyd Hughes as the hero is made to batter down any other man who so much as speaks to Alice, and has three or four fights for her, so that the final battle, intended as a climax, falls fairly flat, dramatic episodes; the music that caused the heroine's eyes to overflow, the hero to swell to a perfect inflation of heroism, and the comedian to outdo his mugging and his back falls.

I recall that our orchestra was a single instrument—an accordion. I think it was the biggest one in captivity, and its owner, McNeill, poured his soul into it from morn to dewy eve. It moved us all to tears.

One morning our little ingenue found her lachrymal flow somewhat obstructed. She was playing a scene of great sadness and was hopelessly dry-eyed. McNeill wailed out the most sentimental of melodies; the assistant director hovered over her telling her how terribly sad everything was. How she had been greatly abused, how her father had cursed her, and how she would never see her lover again. Tony Gaudio was waiting the moment when his camera men could record her sorrow by spilling tear drops on the film.

She buried her face in her hands and strove to plumb the depths of her emotion. There were no depths!

THE strains of "Orientale" and the appealing minors of eastern music leaked from the accordion keys. We became filled with breathless expectancy. Of course, we could resort to the glycerine tear drops, but that device was becoming musty. Presently a slight spasm shook her shapely shoulders. She murmured to the orchestra:

"Play 'Kiss Me Again.'"

The orchestra obeyed and in a moment she uncovered her eyes and the cameras recorded a perfect Niagara of sorrow.

Today the orchestra has no place in the studio. Where the soulful ballad was once the font of all feeling the stern eye of the "mike" is the only thing that stings us to madness.

The art of the cinema has progressed. We are becoming grown up. Cameras are growing more and more perfect. The recording disc is surer and the new art of sound mixing has come to the rescue of voice records that sounded as if the speaker were talking into a hogshead. Detail has been pursued into its very lair in the matter of direction, and it is its persistence that makes plays like "Kismet," full of the flavor of old romance, possible.

There has been a distinct reluctance on the part of motion picture producers to present plays of pure romanticism. The talking film has removed the difficulty of the Open Sesame of the spoken word.

In its most perfect form, the filmed play is but the play of the regular theater reduced in time. The "Kismet" of the dramatic stage ran in its evening performance from 8 o'clock to 11. This screen version presents the self-same drama in half the time, and with much pictorial elaboration which the stage could never show.

I enjoyed Hollywood. I enjoyed making a modernized version of my dear old "Kismet." I enjoyed the association with technical experts, stars and with players at the First National Studio.

But, by Allah, may my life be forfeit if I could ever take to my friendly heart that disc of doom, the Mike! True, it was my prophet—but I was its slave.

The leading feminine role in Richard Barthelmess' next starring picture, which will go into production the end of September, has not yet been selected. Several prominent screen actresses are under consideration for the part. The title and subject of the picture have not yet been announced. Barthelmess' current vehicle is "The Dawn Patrol." He recently completed another, entitled "Adios."

New Soloists For Season Of Symphony

Many Artists of Importance Among the Thirteen Engaged for Concerts With the Orchestra.

THE plans for the coming season of symphony concerts at present call for 13 soloists, many of whom have never been heard here. In December, Ildebrando Pizzetti, Italian composer-pianist, will appear with the orchestra under Mr. Arbos and other newcomers of importance is the German baritone, Heinrich Schlusnus and the Spanish pianist, Jose Iturbi.

There will be a new pianist in the Italian, Carol Zecchi, who is coming to this country the first time, and still another newcomer will be Yelly d'Aranyi, the Hungarian violinist, who was to have come last year but was prevented by illness from making her American tour. Finally, there will be a young American pianist, David Barnett.

The other soloists on the list comprise Efrem Zimbalist, who will be the first soloist of the season; Walter Giesking, Gottfried Galston of this city, Claire Dux, who will appear at the New Year's concerts; Gregor Piatigorsky, the Russian 'cellist, who was also one of last year's soloists; Nathan Milstein, who was heard at a pair of concerts last season, and Margaret Matzenauer, who has been engaged for the last pair of concerts of the year.

Three Dancing Attractions for The Early Season

THREE dancing attractions of first rank will have a showing at the Odeon during the coming season. The first of these will be the Pavley-Oukrainsky Ballet which comes under the auspices of the Civic Music League on Tuesday evening, Oct. 28. Andreas Pavley was born of Dutch parents at Batavia, India, a place that produced in him a curious Oriental and Occidental mixture and that endowed him with a very individual personality. He studied dancing with different masters of the Russian school. With his associate, Serge Oukrainsky, a personal and individual school of dancing was later established. Pavley has the distinction of having been Premier Danseur and Director of the Chicago Opera Ballet, the San Carlo Opera Company, the Opera "Le Colon" of Buenos Aires, the Los Angeles and San Francisco Opera companies.

In contrast to the foregoing organization is La Argentina, the fascinating Spanish dancer who will visit St. Louis again on Nov. 11. La Argentina's appearance at the Odeon last season attracted the most representative audience of several seasons.

Another strikingly individual pair is Kreutzberg and Georgi whose date is Dec. 9. These are of the Wigman School of Berlin, only a name to Americans until these two exponents gave their first New York program of impressionistic dancing with great success. The two latter attractions are under the local direction of Elizabeth Cueny.

Catholic Theater Guild to Present Plays This Season

THE St. Louis Catholic Theater Guild, an organization to produce and stage plays in support of clean entertainment, has been formed and plans a season this winter during which a series of seven plays will be given with amateur talent under professional direction. The first play, "Te Uncle Dudley," is scheduled to open Oct. 20 and run for five nights at the St. Louis University Auditorium. The other six to be produced probably will be chosen from the following New York successes: "One of the Family," "Craig's Wife," "The Bat," "The Cat and the Canary," "Boomerang," "The Argyle Case" and "Smilin' Through."

While the organization is a movement of the laity it has the sanction of Archbishop Glennon and the general approval of the Catholic clergy.

Edward L. Butler, former general director of the Woodward Players and the National Players, has been employed to direct the plays. He has called his first tryouts for Sept. 18 and says he already has 500 applications for auditions. Any Catholic in the city who wishes may try for a role in any show. According to present plans the plays will be given at intervals of about five weeks, the season running until the last part of May.

Ohio Bars Prison Film.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 20.—The Ohio Board of Film Censors formally ruled today that the film, "The Big House," may not be displayed in Ohio. In announcing the ruling, the board held that its order would apply to all "racketeering and Gangland" films hereafter, and that such pictures would be banned. It was contended by the board that display of such films "is harmful to the boys and girls of Ohio."

Morning Etude Meets.

The Morning Etude held a business meeting at Scruggs Music Hall last week and plans for the reception on Oct. 15 and also for social and musical activities of the club were completed.

NEW MERCHANDISING METHODS BY MANUFACTURERS OF TIRES

AKRON, O., Sept. 20.—Fifteen manufacturers of tires and two mail order houses dealing in tires, announced new merchandising methods today, designed to lay at rest charges of unfair practices.

The companies announced they would abandon giving huge discounts to owners of large motor car fleets and that they would edit advertising copy so that any message that might be construed by the National Better Business Bureau as "misleading to the consumer or disparaging to competition" would be deleted.

Among the companies are the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., B. F. Goodrich Co., Selberling Rubber Co., General Tire and Rubber Co., Fisk Rubber Co., United States Rubber Co., Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Montgomery, Ward & Co.

For some time dealers have complained of inroads being made on their business by mail order houses, oil companies and chain stores. The manufacturers did not indicate whether they would comply with the further request of dealers that sales to large fleets be turned over to them.

Powell Returns for New Talking Picture

AFTER a three-month vacation in Europe, during which he made a 2500-mile "vagabond" automobile tour of the continent with no definite destination, William Powell, screen star, returned to Hollywood last week ready to start rehearsals for his next talking productions, "New Morals."

Powell left Hollywood on May 22 and remained several days in New York, visiting friends and witnessing new plays. On his arrival at Southampton, he was met by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Torrence and in their company visited London and Paris, where the party was joined by Ronald Colman.

John Monk Saunders, author of "The Dawn Patrol," and William R. Burnett, who wrote the novel, "Little Caesar," recently produced on the screen, are collaborating on a new story of Chicago gang life. It will probably go into production this fall.

Mary Pickford Will Make "Kiki" in Films

MARY PICKFORD'S next talking picture will be "Kiki," it is now definitely decided, and the star will begin preliminary work, such as tests and casting, immediately, with rehearsals following and camera work being begun in October, in Hollywood.

In a silent version of "Kiki" Norma Talmadge scored one of her greatest hits, that film shattering the record for the Capitol Theater in New York. Ronald Colman was leading man. The play was a Belasco success, acted on the boards by Lenore Ulric.

Sam Taylor, who directed Miss Pickford in "Coquette" and in "The Taming of the Shrew," in which latter film Douglas Fairbanks also played, is now writing the screen adaptation of the play. He will direct the film. After the picture is made, Miss Pickford will have her fling at the legitimate stage in New York.

EUGENE WALTER'S MARRIAGE TO MODEL IS DISCLOSED

Wedding in Mexico Took Place Before Los Angeles Divorce Became Final.

CALEXICO, Cal., Sept. 20.—Examination of Mexican marriage records at Mexicali, Lower California, today confirmed Los Angeles reports that Eugene Walter, playwright, was married to Mary Kissel, New York artists' model, last April 26.

The records showed the marriage was performed by Judge Miguel Valballa just one month and one day from the time Walter was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce in Los Angeles from Charlotte Walker Walter, actress. The decree had not become final when Walter remarried.

Details of Floats to Be Seen Oct. 7 in the V. P. Parade

"Making of Great Nation" Is Theme—Events From Norsemen's Voyages to Byrd's Polar Flights to Be Depicted.

THE history of America from the voyages of Leif Ericsson and Christopher Columbus to the achievements of Thomas Edison and Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, will be depicted in the fifty-second Veiled Prophet parade to be held in St. Louis the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 7.

"The Making of a Great Nation" is the subject of the pageant, planned as a sequel to last year's parade, which traced the history of St. Louis. In the designing of the floats, historic accuracy has been emphasized because of the educational value of the theme to the thousands of school children who will view the parade.

The Veiled Prophet and his attendants will occupy the traditional place on the second float, the first being the title float, with 18 floats devoted to the portrayal of historic events. The Prophet's annual ball, which ushers in the autumn social season, will be held Wednesday evening Oct. 8 at the Coliseum. In the event of rain Tuesday evening, the parade will be postponed until Thursday.

Descriptions of the 20 floats have been embodied in a folder to be distributed to schools and various organizations this week.

ROUTE OF V. P. PARADE SAME AS LAST YEAR'S; 6-MILE LINE OF MARCH

THE Veiled Prophet parade, Tuesday evening, Oct. 7, will follow the six-mile route adopted last year when Sarah street was substituted for Vandeventer avenue on the west. The parade is scheduled to leave the den at Ranken and Laclede avenues at 7:15 p. m.

The route will be:

West on Laclede avenue to Sarah street.
North on Sarah street to Olive street.
East on Olive street to Jefferson avenue.
North on Jefferson avenue to Washington avenue.
East on Washington avenue to Broadway.
South on Broadway to Olive street.
West on Olive street to Jefferson avenue.
South on Jefferson avenue to Market street.
West on Market street to Ranken avenue.

Prizes totaling $105 will be awarded school children for essays on the parade. The descriptions follow:

The Veiled Prophet—Float No. 1—Seated in a speeding chariot, under a canopy of red, purple and gold, surmounted by the imperial crown, is the Veiled Prophet. Clad in the robes of royal purple and holding in his hand the golden scepter and the orb, the monarch once again comes out of the East to greet his loyal subjects. On either side of the chariot sits the four chief courtiers, the First High Priest, the Second High Priest, the Almoner and the Herald. The chariot is drawn through the clouds by four buffaloes, spurred on by a mounted warrior signaling with upraised arm a rousing welcome.

The Norsemen—Float No. 2—The first navigators to set foot on the American continent were believed to have been the Norsemen, or Northmen—the early inhabitants of Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

About 1000 a band of these sea rovers, headed by Leif Ericsson, sailed along the coast of Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and New England. Somewhere along the coast he was reported to have founded a colony which he called "Vinland," because of the large number of wild grapes growing there.

Ericsson is shown in the float, sword and shield in hand, directing the efforts of his crew, which tugs vallantly at the long oars of the Viking ship under the shade of the old, billowing sail of the tiny craft. A lookout at the front of the craft, with spear in hand, peers ahead for a sight of the "new land."

Columbus at the Court of Spain—Float No. 3—In the fifteenth century, stories of Eastern wonders and the wealth of rich spices and choice silks had stimulated a desire to reach the Indies by a shorter route. Christopher Columbus, a Genoese by birth, proposed a bold plan of reaching the eastern islands by sailing westward.

The splendor of one of the most famous courts in history is reproduced in this float. Seated on the throne are King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella. Before them stands Columbus, earnestly pleading for support for his little expedition. Behind the throne is a huge globe showing the earth as Columbus described it, while on either side of the throne are court attaches, surrounded by charts and navigation instruments.

Landing of Columbus—Float No. 4—Leaving Palos, Spain, Columbus' fleet first bore southward to the Canary Islands into the track of the east winds and then headed west. Finally, on the night of Oct. 11, Columbus, peering into the darkness, saw a light. Later, in the glow of the moon that had risen, a sailor on board the Pinta distinctly saw land ahead. When the light of morning came, Columbus prepared at once to go ashore. Dressed in a splendid military suit of scarlet, embroidered with gold, and followed by a retinue of officers and men, bearing banners, Columbus stepped on the soil of the new world at San Salvador, Friday, Oct. 12, 1492. Throwing himself on the ground, he kissed the earth, and gave thanks to God.

The lure of the tropics—its beauty and colorfulness is portrayed in this float. Columbus is shown with sword in hand, laying claim to the territory for Spain. Gathered about him are his followers, one bearing the royal colors of Spain and another a huge cross. In the background lurks and Indian, while out at sea, lies, at anchor, the flagship of Columbus' little fleet.

The Pilgrims—Float No. 5—During the reign of Queen Elizabeth, a number of persons became dissatisfied with the Church of England. These dissenters became known either as Puritans or Separatists.

In the village of Scooby, the Separatists attempted to form a church of their own. King James I regarded them as rebels and persecuted them. To escape these torments, a group of these people fled to Holland. Fearing that their children would intermingle with the Dutch and soon forget their English customs, they finally decided to go to America where they would establish a colony and government under the English flag.

Returning to England, the little group set sail for America in two ships—the Mayflower and the Speedwell. The latter vessel, however, proved unseaworthy, and the expedition was forced to sail in the Mayflower alone. After a stormy voyage, the party landed on the coast of Cape Cod. A group was sent out to explore the coast and a spot which had been named Plymouth was chosen. Here they settled, forming a nucleus of American civilization.

The landing of these early pioneers is depicted on the float. One of the small boats, loaded with Pilgrims, is shown, alongside the coast line. The waves lash the sides of the boat. Several men are seen, standing in the snow, helping their companions ashore, while others of the party, with muskets in hand, have started reconnoitering.

The First Thanksgiving—Float No. 6—The first winter in this country proved an arduous one for the Pilgrim colony, the cold and lack of food reducing the original band to about half. Despite this, however, no thought was given to the question of returning to England. Instead, the colonists immediately set to work preparing for spring planting.

The feast of that first Thanksgiving is re-enacted on the float. Before a small, log hut is a jovial man carefully carving a large turkey. Gathered about him are people of the colony and members of Massasoit's Indian tribe, feasting on the plenty of the land. Hanging from hooks is the wild game of the country, while strewn about the ground are pumpkins, squashes, fruits and other evidences of the agriculture produce of the land.

Pirates—Float No. 8—Aside from the ordinary perils of the sea, an Missouri Mother Knew Best . . .

WISE mothers find the things that keep children contented, happy, well. Most of them have learned they can depend on one thing to restore a youngster's good nature when he's cross, fretful, upset.

The best proof that this method really works comes from the fact that mothers who try it once continue to use it for years, when its help is needed.

The experience of Mrs. M. Brown, 5960 Ridge Avenue, St. Louis, is typical. She says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Robert and Marilyn practically all of their lives. Whenever they're the least bit constipated or restless I give them a little. It has them comfortable, happy in a jiffy. Their splendid condition proves I knew best when I decided to use this wonderful preparation with them."

For three generations, California Fig Syrup has been the choice of knowing mothers. Physicians endorse the use of this pure vegetable product whenever a child's bowels need help. It contains no harmful drugs; cannot form any habit. Weak stomach and bowels are strengthened by it; appetite is increased; the digestion and assimilation are assisted. So weak, undernourished children usually gain in strength, weight and energy; become happy, buoyant, rosy by its use.

Details of Veiled Prophet Parade

obstacle to ocean travel in olden days was the existence of pirates.

The float shows a pirate ship, its "Jolly Roger" flying high at its mast and its wide sails straining before the wind. On the deck strut the swashbuckling members of the crew, dressed in finery plundered from merchantmen. The deck is piled high with gold, jewels and other loot, taken from sacked cities and ships.

Boston Tea Party—Float No. 9—Under the terms of the English Constitution, taxes could be imposed only by representatives of the people. Having no representatives in Parliament, the Colonies contended that they could not be legally taxed by the mother country.

England, however, insisted she had the sovereign right to make any laws she chose. Accordingly, Parliament passed a series of laws imposing taxes on the Colonies. The act aroused indignation among the colonists and they pledged themselves not to import any goods from England. Parliament, alarmed by the opposition, repealed all tax measures except the one on tea.

England decided to make a test case of this. Large cargoes of tea were sent to various American ports. In Boston, men, disguised as Indians, boarded the tea ships, ripped open the boxes and emptied the contents into the harbor.

The Stocks — Float No. 10. — A vivid picture of the old New England stocks is presented. The stocks are well filled with offenders; most of whom present a ludicrous appearance. Passers-by jeer at them. Some take their confinement in good humor; others rail against their fate. In the background is a reproduction of a small blockhouse, in front of which stands the jailer.

Franklin—Float No. 11—The life of Benjamin Franklin exemplies the spirit which gives to every one, no matter how lowly his start in life may be, the opportunity to attain fame and richess.

Declaration of Independence—Float No. 13—First steps toward American independence were taken in June, 1776. At a meeting of Congress, held in Independence Hall, Richard Henry Lee of Virginia offered a resolution which provided that "these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states." The resolution was seconded by John Adams of Massachusetts, and, on July 2, it was passed. A committee, headed by Thomas Jefferson, was appointed to draw up a Declaration of Independence. The declaration was drafted by Jefferson and on July 4, 1776, it was adopted by Congress.

John Hancock, the president of Congress, was the first to sign the document. He was followed by each of the 56 other delegates, and, with the completion of that act, the 13 American colonies of Great Britain ceased to exist and in their stead stood a new nation—the United States of America.

On the float, John Hancock is seen seated behind the little desk on which lies the document which the various members of Congress are signing. Behind Hancock is a large scale reproduction of the Declaration and in the background is picturesque Independence Hall.

Washington Crossing the Delaware—Float No. 14—George Washington's crossing of the Delaware River in the dead of winter, in a blinding snowstorm ranks not only as one of the most daring coups of the Revolutionary War, but of all military history as well.

The float shows Washington standing in the prow of a small boat, which members of his army are trying valiantly to push through the icy waters. The boat is surrounded by large blocks of ice which threaten to crush it, while overhead floats the stars and stripes.

Betsy Ross—Float No. 15—In 1752, the eighth child was born to a Quaker family in Philadelphia and was named Elizabeth. Betsy, as she came to be familiarly known, was later married to John Ross and at the age of 24 was left a widow.

While working in her little upholstery shop one day, she was visited by Gen. Washington, Robert Morris (wealthy Philadelphia banker and financier of the American Revolution) and George Ross, uncle of her husband and a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Washington explained that a flag was needed to show the growing spirit of Americanism. Showing her a rough sketch which he had made—a square flag with 13 stripes of red and white, and 13 stars in blue canton—he asked her opinion of it. Betsy suggested the proportions be changed and that changes be made in the general design. This was agreed to and she was commissioned to do the job.

Not knowing just how to make a flag, Betsy went to an old Scotch shipping merchant and borrowed a ship's flag. Using this as a guide, she fashioned the stars and stripes. To try the effect, the flag was run up to the peak of one of the vessels on the Delaware River, and the result was so pleasing that on the same day the flag was carried to Congress and approved.

Betsy is seen on the float engaged in sewing the flag, aided by several other women. Draped flags surround them, while in the background is a shield consisting of the stars and stripes.

Fremont and Kit Carson—Float No. 16—One of the most romantic episodes in American history deals with the "winning of the West." One of the foremost of these pioneers was Gen. John Fremont, who was commissioned by the government to lead several expeditionary parties. To him goes much of the credit for charting the region west of the Mississippi River.

Before the first of these expeditions set out from St. Louis, in 1842, Fremont, by chance met Kit Carson, the most famous of the hard-fighting frontiersmen of the day.

The float depicts Fremont and Carson in the desert on one of their numerous expeditions. Fremont astride a horse is shown surveying the route which the expedition is to follow, while Carson, garbed in the deerskin dress of the frontiersman, is pointing the way. In the background are large cactuses and a covered wagon bearing supplies for the expedition.

Lincoln and Douglas — Float No. 17 — In 1857, unrest, engendered by agitation of the slavery question, was making itself felt in many parts of the United States. One of the most famous participants in discussions of the issue was Stephen Douglas, Senator from Illinois, of pro-slave tendencies. Few had the temerity to face him in debate.

But there was one man who had such courage. It was Abraham Lincoln. Out of quiet seclusion from public life, he came to contest with Douglas in the election for Senator. In seven debates, carried on all over the State, he challenged the doctrines propounded by Douglas. The float shows these two participants in one of the debates. Standing on a crudely built, flag bedecked platform, in a little grove, Lincoln is propounding his doctrine. Douglas, seated on the platform, is listening intently as is also the audience seated on rough benches. The scene is enlivened by the election posters and the appearance of a band.

Empire Builders—Float No. 18—To those pioneers who braved the perils of the frontier wilderness to provide this nation with transcontinental railroad service, this float is dedicated.

The float shows a locomotive of the early railroading years, slowly moving forward as the rails of the transcontinental road are being laid by armed workmen. Frontiersmen, with long rifles in their hands, stand about, insuring protection from hostile Indians.

Edison—Float No. 19—"He illuminated the paths of progress by his invention." This inscription, which appears on the reverse side of a gold medal presented by Congress, typifies the contributions made to the world by Thomas Alva Edison.

Edison's inventions, numbering more than 1200, were largely of an electrical nature.

The evolution of light from the old torch to the incandescent lamp is presented on the float. Dominating the float is a huge figure of the Goddess of Light, flanked by two large electric light bulbs. Paying tribute to her are figures holding aloft such earlier means of light as the torch, the candle, and the tallow lamp. On the front of the float is a large plaque of Edison, surmounted by an electric light bulb.

Byrd. Float No. 20—The last float has been dedicated to America's most famous present-day explorer, Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd.

On Thanksgiving day, Byrd, accompanied by three men, one of them Ashley C. McKinley, a St. Louisan, took off from their base in the Antarctic, named by them Little America, in a Ford trimotored plane, on a 1600-mile flight to the South Pole. At 8:55 on the morning of Nov. 29, the little party reached the spot where there was no south—the pole—and then safely returned to their base.

Ice and snow, illuminated by the aurora borealis, are presented in this float. It is Little America. Its huts and radio towers are hung with ice and snow. Men, clad in furs, are setting out with a dog team to investigate the wonders of the unknown. Overhead is the airplane in which Byrd and three companions made their dash over the pole.

"Drunkenness Is a Disease and I Can Cure It"
—Leslie E. Keeley, M. D., LL. D.

THE EDITOR of a powerful Chicago Newspaper before his death, challenged this statement of Dr. Keeley that "Drunkenness is a disease and I can cure it." He defied Dr. Keeley to cure the men whom he would send to the Institute. The results were so convincing that, through his great newspaper, he was personally responsible for thousands of men and women taking The Keeley Treatment for Liquor.

HETTY GREEN'S PHANTOM FORTUNE

It Is Supposed to Amount to $355,000,000, but the Tax Collectors in Several States Have Searched for It in Vain.

Col. Edward H. B. Green.

Hetty Green at the age of 78.

By ALAN MACDONALD

NEW YORK.

ON one side stands the spirit of the late Hetty Green, at one and the same time the richest and most miserly woman of her day. On the other side group private detectives and investigators, including small taxpayers and petty officials for the town of Rockingham, Vermont. On the table between lie three shells, under the hand of the wraith. Under one is the pea, representing the famous Hetty Green hoard, now estimated to have reached the astounding aggregate of $355,000,000.

"There!" cry the townsmen. "It is under THAT shell."

The wraith of a little old woman lifts the shell with a sardonic if soundless laugh. The $355,000,000 pea is not there. Again Hetty Green's spirit shifts the shells. Again the stalwart, puzzled, determined townsmen settle themselves for another try.

One of the strangest tax duels on record, the imaginative presentation above shows more clearly than could any voluminous legal document what has been going on since early this year as a result of a decision by the voters of the town of Rockingham, which Hetty Green called home, to collect some $4,000,000 in back taxes on the Green estate.

They assert—the townsmen—that final decree of probate, settling and dissolving the estate for all time, was never entered and that therefore the estate should still pay taxes to the town. But that is by no means all. They go on to allege that for 26 years before her death in 1916 Hetty Green, by one of those shrewd, swift deals that gave her fame as one of the greatest financial geniuses in the world, man or woman, escaped paying comparatively vast sums in taxes through an illegal agreement with the listers or tax assessors of her time.

THEY named a committee of three, with power to employ counsel and establish in the courts, if possible, their right to impose these taxes on the Green fortune. Then they set out to discover where the fortune was and where the levy might be laid. They are still searching through city after city and state after state—until they have begun to speak of the huge Green hoard as the Phantom Fortune! And you cannot persuade them that the spirit of Hetty Green, reaching from beyond the grave, is not still protecting and hiding from would-be tax collectors the fortune she so shrewdly sequestered during life.

It is early in the year 1889. Hetty Green is 54. Always she is in the public prints. Not only at that early time is she one of the richest humans, but for all her wealth she lives like an itinerant wage slave. She moves from Brooklyn to Hoboken, where she occupies $19-a-month flats; to a small New York hotel, and back again. She wears the cheapest clothes, always black, and her only luxury is a pet dog. Her office is a corner of a Wall Street bank, a battered old desk no one else wanted. There she invests, lends and manipulates millions. Never would she say how much money she had, but even then the fortune must have topped $30,000,000.

Each year she was summoned to the city tax department and questioned. Where was her legal, taxable home? What real and personal property did she have? Always she appeared with a little battered handbag, which she insisted was all the personal property she had, at least in New York City. From time to time she owned small parcels of real estate, and she paid taxes on these grudgingly enough. Pinned down by her questioners, she would admit that her legal home was the village of Bellows Falls in the township of Rockingham, Vermont. All her personal property was there. And that—as far as the New York tax collectors were concerned—was that.

About this time the listers of Rockingham surprised Hetty by assessing her possessions in Bellows Falls and vicinity at several millions, or so the investigators insist. Hetty and her lawyers hastened to Vermont to protest. Having heard tales of the woman's fortune and denials in New York, no doubt, the listers were obdurate. Then Hetty played a trump, declaring that she would pay no such assessment, and that if the town persisted she would leave forever, disposing of every bit of property she had there. The result was immediate. The listers, lest they lose everything, agreed that from that day forth they would not tax the Green estate of millions at more than $100,000 personal and $12,000 real property!

Hetty Green returned to New York, to her round of living in cheap flats in Brooklyn or Hoboken, sometimes using the name of her dog, Dewey, as well as other assumed names, to avoid attention and beggars. Tales of her investments in Wall street, of her deals in railroads, of her coups on 'Change, of her lending millions to banks and great financiers in panic times and cleaning up, became common gossip. One day, so the story ran, she heard a certain bank was in difficulty. She had $700,000 on deposit. She went personally and, despite pleading and protest, drew out the money — and the next day the bank failed.

In 1916, at the age of 81, Hetty Green died of paralysis. She was worth, it afterward developed, at least $67,000,000. She had $9,000,000 in New York banks. The Westminster Company, the corporation through which she made her investments, and a subsidiary, owed her in round figures $26,000,000. Her will was as subtle and secretive as she had been. It provided that the sum of $8,000,000 should be given outright to her son, Colonel Edward H. B. Green, and a similar amount to her daughter, Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks; that $1,000,000 should go to the heirs of a maternal ancestor, Gideon Howland; that $25 each be given to various distant relatives and friends, and that the remainder, approximately $50,000,000, be put into two equal trust funds, one for the son and the other for the daughter, to be paid at the expiration of 10 years.

AND it provided, likewise, that Colonel Green should be sole executor, and that he be not required to make any public accounting . . . or, in other words, bare the secrets of the fortune. The will was filed for probate in Bellows Falls, and, since Vermont law exempts from inheritance or estate tax property bequeathed to son or daughter, the vast estate was subject only to a tax of $1250 on the $25,000 in outside bequests.

The State of New York, holding that Hetty Green was in fact a resident and did business there, sued to collect a transfer tax of $4,000,000. But Hetty Green's heirs proved to the satisfaction of Surrogate Fowler that she was not and never had been a legal resident of any place save Bellows Falls. And as for business, the Court held that since Hetty Green had no personal office, that since she did not do a loan business with the general public, she could not be said to have done business in New York under the law. In other words, the strange old woman had run her original inheritance of $5,000,000 into at least $67,000,000 in Wall street—but was not in business in New York State.

The State of New York then assessed Colonel Green, who had one of his many homes in New York City, and Mrs. Wilks, who had a residence there, too, on their inherited fortunes. Colonel Green swore he was not a resident in the legal sense, and the assessment was canceled. Mrs. Wilks likewise denied legal residence, but admitted possession of personal property worth $42,700 in the city. On this she paid a tax until 1921, when, in effect, she swore she had removed her property, and the assessment was marked off. In 1926 the two trust funds were paid to the heirs, and the Rockingham tax was cut to the levy on the old Green homestead.

But the thing would not down. If Rockingham slept for a time, others did not. A Boston reporter and a detective interested themselves in the Green estate. Old records and musty documents gradually yielded up, they declare, the fact that while Hetty Green was permitted to pay tax on $112,000 she was in reality liable to a tax on millions in Vermont.

On the basis of these findings the listers of Rockingham assessed the Green estate for $335,000,000 for 1930. At the next town meeting there were submitted on behalf of the estate and Colonel Green affidavits declaring that the entire estate had been distributed according to the terms of the will and there was not now in Rockingham—the home Hetty claimed so long—any of her taxable property.

BUT the voters of Rockingham—the town has about 7000 residents and 2000 voters—were up in arms. They called a second special meeting. Investigators and detectives were sent out to find where the phantom fortune really was.

The detectives went to New York. They found that Colonel Green was not taxed as a resident there. They discovered that, while Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks has a 14-room apartment at 988 Fifth avenue and the Social Register gives that address as her home, she pays no personal property tax here.

They learned that Colonel Green was ill at his home at South Dartmouth, Massachusetts. They went there. The vast estate bespoke millions. Yet they were informed that South Dartmouth was not Colonel Green's legal residence and that he paid no inheritance or business tax in Massachusetts.

Vermont, New York and Massachusetts—and still the fortune a phantom. Where next? In all probability Florida, say the delvers, in the belief that there is the legal home of both heirs to the Green millions. The reason is simple. Some years ago Florida abolished estate taxes. Many millionaires promptly began giving Florida as their home "for taxation purposes." It would have been a move such as Hetty Green would have loved. And her spirit at least still controls the destiny of her colossal hoard.

The EX-QUEEN who BEGGED in the STREETS

But the One-Time "Natalie the Magnificent" Will No Longer Have to Plead With the Paris Crowds for Charity—She Is to Be Placed in a Home for the Poor.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS.

THIS gay capital must be the only city in the world that has ever treated visitors to the spectacle of a once proud Queen reduced to begging alms in the streets with the army of "clochards" and other "miserables" who form a part of the background of that most awful of pictures—Paris, the sordid and tragic.

There must be thousands of American visitors to this care-free and joyous community of the Gauls who have been struck by the singular grace of the white-haired, wizened old woman, still showing something of natural dignity, begging coins from the lively throngs that sweep by Notre Dame day after day and night after night.

In a voice still musical the woman would plead with the passersby not to forget that she needed bread, and would they toss her a few centimes that she might not starve.

But it is safe to say that not one of those who saw her and heard her plaintive cry, "La charite," guessed that this pathetic figure was "Natalie the Magnificent," "Natalie the Noble," beautiful and proud consort of the late King Milan of Serbia and mother of the ill-fated Alexander, who was murdered along with his consort, Queen Draga, by the military chiefs in revolt to place King Peter on the throne and end a dynasty.

There is, however, no doubt that this seeker of alms is indeed the former Queen, for with some Serbians eager to save the national honor by ending the spectacle of a former ruler begging in the streets the writer visited the old woman and examined personally the documents that establish her claim beyond question.

NOW that she has made good her claim, the scandal is to end, as arrangements are under way for her removal to a home where she will end her days in peace and comfort.

It is hard to image this woman, once a dweller in palaces and a welcome guest in the royal homes of Continental Europe because of her charm and graciousness, descending to the level of tenant in a Paris hovel where one might hesitate to house a pig, but such has been her life for many years.

Soon after the tragedy of 27 years ago she came to Paris and managed to live modestly on the annuities that were derived from certain investments, but these were swept away in the World War, and the former Queen was too proud to make known her position to those who might have pleaded her cause with the new Government of Serbia.

It was thus that she gradually passed into the ranks of those who exist on charity, living in one of the most sordid quarters of Paris, but, nevertheless, impressing her personality on those around her to such an extent that they dubbed her "Your Majesty."

They meant it ironically, never one of them dreaming that she was truly a Queen.

In all but one respect the ex-Queen of Serbia has retained her faculties. In regard to the tragedy that drove her into exile she has lost all reasoning capacity, and her delusions are almost as pitiful as those of the ex-Empress Charlotte, widow of the tragic Maximilian of Mexico, who died insane a few years ago.

Like Charlotte, ex-Queen Natalie hugs the delusion that her son was really saved from his epemies and will come back so that she may lead him to Belgrade to remount the throne.

Ex-Queen Natalie of Serbia.

In the attic where she was living she had stacked away coins amassed in her profession as a beggar, and to all who asked her reasons for storing them up she made reply that she was saving them for her son when he returned to claim his throne.

Immediately after the tragedy at Belgrade she gave indications that she was conscious of what had taken place, but the doctors who have examined her say that in the interval, brooding over her tragic story has probably unbalanced her mind and reduced her to her present state.

The writer heard from the lips of this pitiful wreck of once splendid womanhood the story of her descent from the palace to the gutter. As she raised her head with some of her old dignity, she said in a faltering voice:

"What can I tell you of the past? My mind goes back to palaces and feasts and military pomp and displays such as one had dreams of in a past that seems vague and remote to me.

"But all that is blotted out. Dim mists seem to have gathered around it, and I see only blackness of night, into which my beloved Alexander vanishes. One day I know he will emerge from the blackness and I will welcome him back to my arms so that I may die in peace.

"There is a night of unspeakable horror — that night is burned into my brain. I can never forget it, even though I have now cast from me all that could remind me of the life of the courts where the plotting of ambition-crazed fiends makes wholesale murder a commonplace."

As she was speaking a shudder passed through the frail frame, as if the one-time beautiful Queen was living over again that terrible night, when she witnessed the butchery of her son and daughter-in-law, the lovely Queen Draga, and fled in terror from the knives and swords of the assassins.

When asked to explain how she came to Paris, she answered:

"I cannot tell you how and exactly when I came to Paris, because stark horror had deprived me of reason for the time being, but I do know that for some years before the World War broke out I lived in Paris a life that might seem royally luxurious contrasted with my state up to a few days ago. But the war has changed all that and reduced me to beggary.

"There was nothing for it but to fill up the cup of my bitterness by passing to the ranks of the world's outcasts, for whom there is no roof and little sympathy. How I have lived since I came to this pass I cannot tell you, and in some respects would not tell you if I could.

"A hard and terrible life, you might say, but one gets used to it, and there are compensations.

"Here at least one feels that one is among fellow creatures who have sympathy that only those who have suffered can know.

"WOULD it surprise you to know that I have had less cause to resent insults or the behavior of men towards me than in the days when I lived the life of the exalted?

"It has been said that I ought to have made known to my friends the position when the war wrecked my financial resources.

"To all of them today I reply—a fallen Queen has no friends!

"Then, again, there was my pride. Do people who talk of such things realize the pride of a Queen must make it impossible for her to appeal for aid to those of her own station?"

There have been times when the former Queen, "Natalie the Magnificent," has not had a roof over her head, but has slept on benches in the parks and along the boulevards, and on doorsteps in some of the sordid quarters of Paris. There have been early mornings when she would line up at the back entrances of restaurants, with the other outcasts of Paris, to beg scraps to serve as her principal meal of the day.

It was only by the merest chance that the real identity of the ex-Queen of Serbia was discovered. One night, just recently, in her rounds she was knocked down by a car conveying revelers from the Latin Quarter, and it was in the Hotel Dieu, the famous hospital in sight of which she begged, that her secret was revealed.

ECONOMIST PROPOSES a GENERAL BURIAL at SEA

"Cemeteries Represent a Frightful Waste of Land," Says Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman.

BOSTON.

SINCE the days of the later Homo Neanderthalis, there is evidence that man disposed of his dead through burial in the ground, a rite which was attended with respect and ceremony.

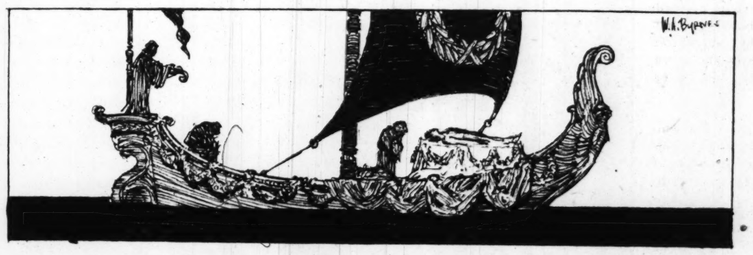
Then came the Aryan peoples, who burned their dead, a custom still preserved in India. But not until they were on the verge of history did they, like their predecessors, the Iberians, begin building stone houses in which to preserve the ashes of their ancestors.

With the ancient beginnings of civilization in Sumeria and Egypt, a man bethought himself of the idea of preserving for all time the bones of his illustrious dead in tombs and huge mausoleums.

Down through the long roll of the ages burial customs among various races at different stages of their history have been the subject of deep study by social research workers. Through such study considerable light has been shed upon man's cultural and religious development. While religious beliefs are in part responsible for certain customs attending burial, there can be no doubt that man's disposal of his dead is determined chiefly by inherited fears, superstitions and sentiments.

But now comes forward Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman of Wellesley Hills, Massachusetts, a noted figure in the world of sociological and economic research, with the suggestion that the coastwise cities of the North Atlantic seaboard dispose of their dead through burial in the sea.

And linked with this novel and radical departure from customs almost as old as known time, are huge funeral barges, cement coffins and regularly appointed days for wholesale burials, with appropriate religious rites.



In view of the ever-increasing demand of the living millions of the North Atlantic coastal region for land, Dr. Hoffman protests that burial in the ground or the consignment of human remains "in perpetuity" to tombs and huge mausoleums is an economic absurdity.

One cannot dismiss lightly the suggestions of one who, in his day, as chief statistician and vice president of the Prudential Insurance Company, not to say anything of his standing as a student of political and social sciences, has devoted time and study to the problem of interment of the dead in large cities.

In discussing his proposed reform of burial customs for the populous centers along the North Atlantic coast the noted sociologist observed:

"SINCE the beginning of time all of man's socio-economic and political problems have been in some way or other linked with the right to use and enjoy the land. It is the living who have a prior right to the land, and not the dead.

"With the natural increase in population along the upper stretches of the Atlantic seaboard, especially in the cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, the final disposal of dead bodies is soon to become a problem of no small import. There can be no questioning of the fact that these four cities, as well as others between Charleston, South Carolina, and Portland, Maine, are now reaching a point of cemetery saturation.

"And the only solution of this problem, as I see it, is burial at sea."

Notwithstanding that cremation, as carried on today, has the indorsement of health authorities, Dr. Hoffman does not believe that this method of disposal of the dead will meet the problem of cemetery saturation, or, as he puts it, "continuing land waste."

"As my suggestion has to do chiefly with the social and economic advantages of burial at sea, I shall not enter into any general discussion concerning cremation," the sociologist said.

"For sentimental reasons, I am afraid cremation will never become popular with the great mass of the people. There are also religious objections to this method of disposal of the dead. To those of a kindly and delicate nature the idea has certain repellent features. The finer sentiments of many people revolt at the destruction of the body of a loved person by fire. There is also a subconscious horror, in connection with what many regard as the absolute severance of all ties with their dead."

"What about the ashes, preserved in an urn, will they not keep the memory of the dead alive?" interrupted the writer.

"Yes, the idea is all very well in its way," agreed Dr. Hoffman in a sort of half-hearted fashion. "Frequently the ashes are put in costly urns and preserved by the family, but such is not always the fate of the burned remnants of a dead man. Through the complexities of life in these modern days, with family unity disappearing, the ashy remembrances of ancestors have a queer way of vanishing. It is not unusual for the 'ashes of the dead' to turn up in the most unexpected of places—junk shops, garbage heaps and municipal dump piles.

"Again, I have known of many a silver urn emptied of its ashy contents, only to find its way to a pawnbroker for the value of the metal.

"Also bear this fact in mind, there is nothing held in lower esteem by many 'in-laws' than the ashes of their departed 'in-laws.'

"AT ALL events, I shall leave instructions—in fact, I have already issued them—that my remains are not to be cremated. If it can be arranged, I hope to be buried at sea in a cement coffin. I may be too early for a funeral barge. But the day of the municipal funeral barge for cities such as Boston and New York and Philadelphia is not as distant, in my opinion, as some are inclined to believe."

Dr. Hoffman declared that in ancient times funeral barges were often used and made a part of great ceremonial occasions. He pointed out, however, that they were simply employed for the conveyance of the dead from one spot to another.

"These ancient funeral barges," went on Dr. Hoffman, "did not venture out to sea to dispose of the dead. And yet I can conceive of no more impressive method of burial than this highly dignified method of disposal.

"It is not difficult to conceive of a more readily practical arrangement which, in the first place, would provide a funeral barge or a specially constructed vessel, appropriately decorated with mourning corresponding to ordinary funeral arrangements.

"The dead could be incased in cement coffins and possibly from 30 to 60, or more, burials could be carried out at the same time. The vessels would have openings at the bottom, operated by automatic appliances, silently disposing of the coffins at the proper moment. A feature of the funeral barges would be a chapel, maybe two or three chapels, so that each religious faith would have a place in which to recite the prayers for the dead.

"Some 50 miles out at sea, the funeral service could be conducted with the utmost solemnity and, unknown to anyone present, the heavy cement coffins would slide into their watery graves.

"What a contrast this would be to the ordinary earth burial or consignment to a tomb or mausoleum!

"What a different effect it would have on the mind to think of the dead at rest on the ocean floor, possibly several thousand feet below the surface and safe against the risk of disinterment years hence."

Dr. Hoffman was emphatic in declaring the final disposal of dead bodies was already an acute community problem. He said the day was not far distant when the cities along the North Atlantic seaboard would be face to face with the very same burial problems which some of the older and more populous communities of Europe have been forced to meet.

"As Boston, New York and Philadelphia have about reached the point of cemetery saturation, I feel safe in predicting that, unless these great cities find another way of disposing of their dead, we shall see trench burial in the United States.

"In the densely populated centers of Europe temporary interment is not only common, but the usual practice. Only the wealthy can afford to purchase graves in perpetuity. The vast mass of Europeans, notably Austrians, Belgians and Italians, are given temporary burial. After a period of 10 or 15 years, sometimes after shorter periods, the remains are disinterred and scattered about in cruel and ruthless fashion. Then the same burial space is used for other bodies.

"IN THOSE sections of the United States where communities are still relatively new and where land is relatively cheap, the burial problem cannot be considered acute. But in that region, principally the North Atlantic coastal strip, where there is really not enough land for the living, much less the dead, a really serious situation exists."

That such views are not those of an alarmist becomes strikingly evident when we delve into the vast mass of literature on the subject of funeral costs and other problems connected with the disposal of the dead. In 1928 the Charity Organization Society of New York City, under the direction of John C. Gebhart, with an advisory committee headed by Lawson Purdy as chairman, conducted an exhaustive

ARTHUR SYMONS TELLS HOW HE WENT MAD

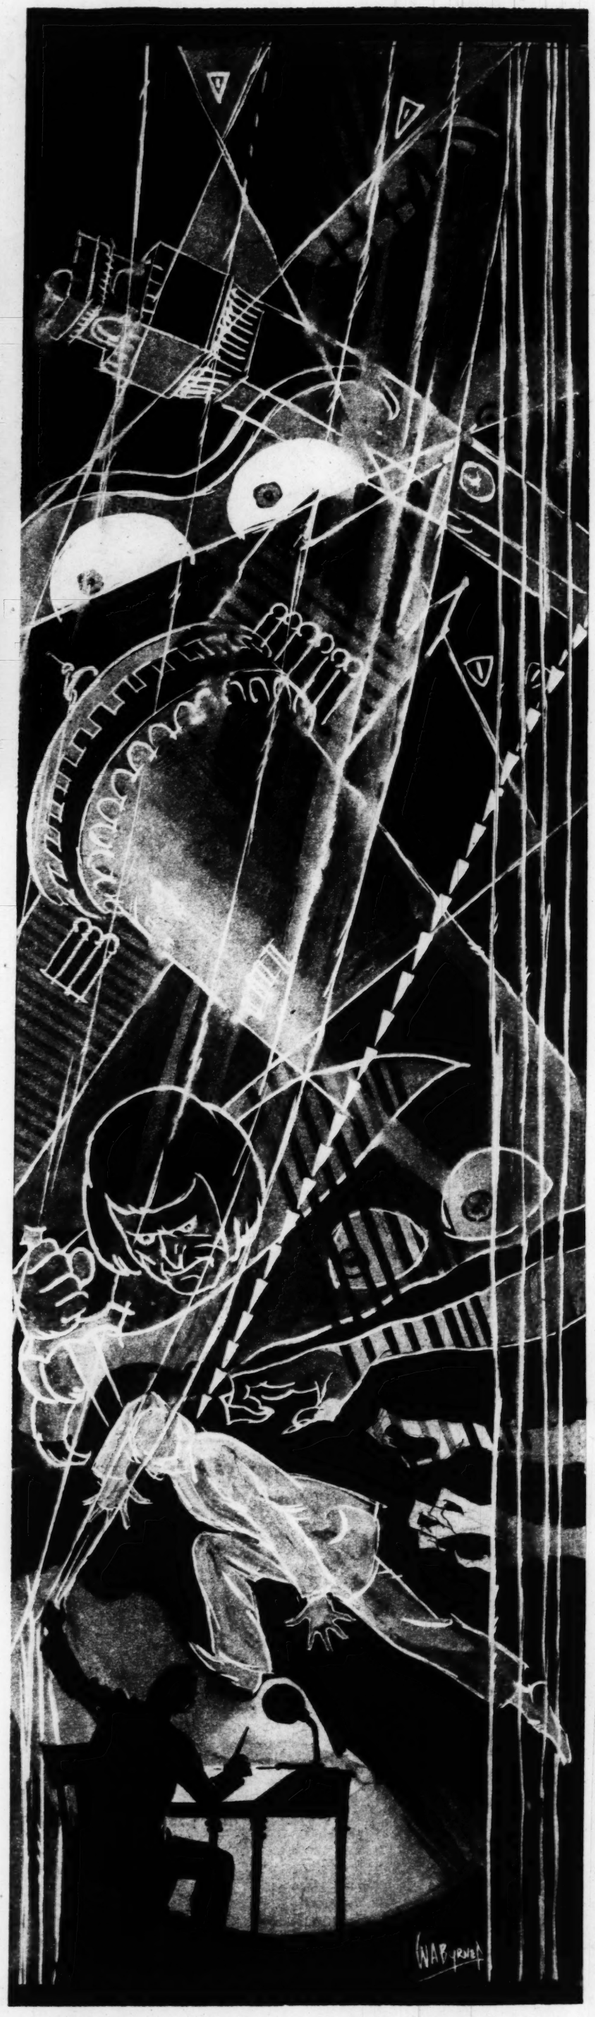
Arthur Symons.



By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

ARTHUR SYMONS has a strange story to tell. He describes how he went mad. As nearly as he is able, he recalls his reactions as the shadows of madness were obscuring his mind. The terrible agony, the torture he endured as he tried without avail to cling to sanity.

Published the other day under the title, "Confessions," it is an extraordinary human document. Other authors have written about mad people, Edgar Allan Poe for one. Other authors have written during periods of insanity, have written wildly and fantastically. Gerard de Nerval, French novelist, was such a one. De Quincey wrote while under the influence of opium. But Symons tries to trace the very course of madness as it ravaged his remarkable mind.

He writes the account long afterward, of course, long after the phantoms of his brain had receded and he had won his way back to the light of sanity. The book is really a series of impressions. The author, perhaps because it was impossible to do so, does not attempt to give a chronological account of his mental collapse. The narrative is occasionally broken by sketches—grateful tributes—of those who aided him financially and in other ways during this difficult period of his life.

Symons, although he has never had a wide public, is one of the most distinguished literary survivors of the last generation. He has written a number of books—verse, plays, literary criticism, travel. He knew Rossetti, Oscar Wilde, William Morris, all the literary titans of the 'nineties. His reputation goes back to the beginning of the nineteenth century, considerably before he lost his mind.

Symons was born in Wales in 1865, of Cornish parents. Privately educated, he was marked for a literary career from the first. His first writing was obviously influenced by certain contemporary French authors, notably the Symbolists, Verlaine, Mallarme and Baudelaire. By 1905 he had published 12 books of verse and criticism. He moved about freely in all the London literary circles.

IT WAS in September of 1908, he was traveling in Italy, writing a series of articles about Italian cities. "I was over-excitable and overstrained," he writes. "Several misadventures had occurred in the previous year which had greatly and deeply upset me. I had become irritable and extravagant. Even then my eyes were hurting me. I was troubled by one crisis after another, over which I had no control. My nerves reacted on my imagination: reacted, almost recoiled, on my body. Too many burdens had been imposed on me by I know not how many taskmasters. I was hallucinated, obsessed. Even the heat enervated me: much more so in Venice with closed windows and mosquito nets around the beds; often enough sleep forsook me and I got out of bed and began to write and write."

From the south of Italy he went to the north, to Bologna, with his traveling companion, a woman, to whom there are only a few vague references in the narrative. Bologna, with its innumerable medieval structures, its decaying monuments and clutter of relics, oppressed Symons even more than the cities of the south had done with their shabby gaiety. All the old buildings, the hollow shells that once had been filled with life, depressed him, irritated him. He and his companion were stopping at a hotel that had formerly been a palace.

"There was something ominous in the effect of this huge edifice which jarred my nerves," he says. "There was an enormous courtyard on which many of the windows looked, where one had coffee; but as for the huge door, that moved on iron hinges, that also jarred on my nerves; most of all on that night when I returned and beat in vain on that closed door: and this—this awful kind of connivance with the Evil Powers—was a thing unheard of in all my travels.

"We spent one week there; during that intolerable week the Demon of Restlessness that has driven me during so many of my wanderings hither and thither, as if one were driven onward by the intensity of a howling wind across a barren heath that verges on the sea, seized more tightly and more furiously on me than it had ever done. . . .

"IT WAS noticed by people who kept the hotel and by the woman who was with me that I was in a state of intense exasperation; which is the inevitable penalty of the sins one has and has not committed. One night I went out and took a ticket for some theater where I spent the evening; it was the Teatro Brunelli, in a wide street between the Via Castiglione and the Via Santo Stefano. I was very uneasy; the people who thronged the theater disturbed me in the extreme; they irritated me.

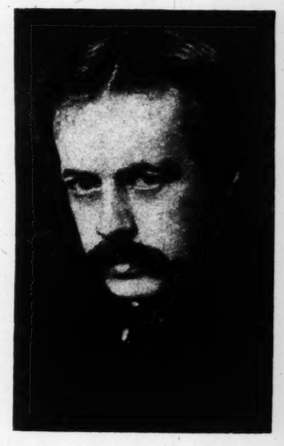
"The next night I went to a circus—such shows always amused me—where I talked with some of the performers: one was a queer little girl, a clever horse-rider, who sat on my knees and wickedly caressed me. When I left the circus I forgot my way back to the hotel. I went to some miserable little hotel—such as those Baudelaire was too often obliged to frequent when the exasperation of the nerves of Jeanne Duval reacted on his and hurled him like a whirlwind on to the pavements of Paris—where in my miserable room I tried in vain to sleep. I locked the door and examined my smoking candle; horrible imaginations racked my brain, I seemed on fire; so next morning I paid what had to be paid to the surly manager and returned to the Hotel Brun, where my sudden reappearance created a certain amount of surprise and astonishment."

It was the beginning of the most terrible period of all. Whenever he was alone with the woman, he screamed and cursed her furiously. She appealed to the manager of the hotel, who tried to argue with Symons and was cursed for his pains. The woman was determined to go to Paris. She used every possible means to get her companion to do likewise. No, he was stubborn, he was going to Perugia. The woman even attempted to get him into the train for Paris with her by a ruse. The trick failed to work. He was going to Perugia.

Instead he went, for no reason at all, to Ferrara, 30 miles north of Bologna. For a person in his condition no place could have been worse. The town would depress almost anyone. It is surrounded by malarious swamps, and is dominated by the grim Castello Vecchio, which had been the Ducal Palace, one of the most imposing examples of medieval military architecture in Italy. He wandered about, haunted by "the most horrible shapes and shadows." Then came the plunge into madness:

"The next afternoon I began to walk across the city and found myself outside one of the gates; then, not knowing my way, so bewildered I was with nerves and with the intense heat and with an exasperation of all the sense, I walked and walked and walked—always in the wrong direction, always under the hot sun that hurt me, always imagining I was on my way back to Ferrara. It is literally impossible for me to say how often I stopped on my way, and how often I continued walking interminably—always in the wrong direction. As night came on, night with all its oppression, I felt an enormous fatigue creep over me. I sat by the wayside for hours, then, being observed by certain curious people, I got up wearily and resumed my endless wanderings. I climbed several haystacks and rested on them. . . .

"Being chased away from one haystack, I began to run. Following on my heels were three country folk, and, so as to escape their pursuit, I fell headlong into deep ditches, into pools and ponds; came out wet through, besmeared with mud. I hid myself behind a hedge. I heard their loud voices far off; there I fell asleep for I know not how many hours. At any rate, I woke at dawn and began again my endless and as it seemed to me my hopeless wanderings. I see myself sometimes in the depths of a dream walking on a high plateau to which I had somehow climbed. The scenery on both sides was curious and unfamiliar to me; there was far below me the railway and the train I would have given anything in the world to have been in."



An early photograph of Symons.

In his blind wanderings, worn out at last with fatigue, he came to a large farmhouse. Here the people were exceedingly kind to him. They took him in, fed him, gave him a place to sleep in the loft of the cow barn. He slept soundly that night and, waking, the owner of the farm took him a long way on the road to show him the way back to Ferrara. A kindly farmer gave him a lift, he rode for long, jolting hours on top of a huge wine barrel. Dark came on and he stopped at a cross-roads cafe for something to eat.

"Then the unforeseen happened," he continues. "Two Bersaglieri (military policemen) were strolling along. They saw me; in an instant they seated themselves beside me. I was questioned and cross-questioned. Then they promised to take me back to the Hotel Europa. I walked between them. At a certain tavern we stopped. We went in; I imagined they were going to give me a drink. On the contrary, to my horror, I was thrust into a dark room without one ray of light. I stumbled about, in vain. Then they let me out, and I walked between them—an endless journey, it seemed to me. They took me to the hotel, where, of course, I asked for my room. There was no answer. Then ensued a long conversation between these two men and the hall-porter, who brought some under-manager who was made to sign some documents—I was unaware of their contents.

"THEN, escorted between these two terrifying beings, I found myself face to face with the Ducal Castle. They knocked. I was thrust in, and, with no examination whatsoever, I was seized by two gaolers—something about me having been said to them—pushed down interminable stairs to a dark corridor. The iron-barred door of a dungeon was flung open. They fastened and locked manacles on my wrists and ankles; they flung me on to the stone floor, which stunned me. When I woke I saw what I had never imagined possible: myself supposed to be a Criminal and Lunatic or a Vagrant, unjustly hurled into hell. There was a small grated window high up on one of the walls; there was the 'Judas' (so ironical and so cruel a name used for so cruel a purpose)—the slit-hole of hell through which the horrible gaolers are obliged to look—in the middle of the door; there was a narrow wooden bed—a bed of torture in a torture-house. With an effort which was incalculable I got on to the bed; there was a wooden block behind my head instead of a pillow. Otherwise the cell was utterly naked.

"Fettered on both ankles and on both wrists, after the whole horror of this nefarious attack on my liberty had begun to exasperate me beyond any imaginable exasperation, I dragged myself with painful steps round and round the stone walls of my cell, gazing hopelessly at the barred window that let in but little light, and at the Judas, which was continually opened and shut, showing me the grimacing faces of those inhuman beasts. The desire of escape, which has, more than anything else, always kept me alive, was certainly awake then—then when the chances were a thousand to one that I should never leave that cell alive. Utterly worn out with the fatigue of those days and nights on which I had wandered, I crawled back to my bed of torture—and, mercifully, slept till dawn.

"Dawn glared on me like those unendurable dawns that the damned alive in hell must experience, if they are alive there. I dragged myself helplessly to and fro: still the grimacing faces stared at me. I had been given nothing to drink, nothing to eat. I imagined their intention was to keep me in that cell deprived of all that is necessary to us in our human needs, and to let me die there in convulsions after those agonies caused by thirst and hunger had exhausted me; and then to bury me in some deep hole in the earth. At noon these men entered my cell, unlocked my manacles and took me to that place in the corridor which one calls the cabinet. I noticed the long corridor and the sharp flights of steps that went up and down.

"AFTER they had let me breathe some air, that abnormal nervous strength which I have always possessed in an extraordinary degree, raised all the madness that was burning me like hell's fire; and I fought with these three gaolers—in the wild idea of escape—with a ferocity which at least equaled theirs. I know not how long that struggle went on. I caught one of them by the throat and nearly strangled him; I hit another in the pit of the stomach so furiously that he fell backward on the floor.

"Then—in Balzac's phrase—began my Gehenna. My feet were of course naked; these gaolers had iron-shod boots, and two of them attacked my naked feet with such venomous violence, with such inhuman ferocity, that the blood was drained out of them by reiterated kicks, so that the blood which covered my feet and which covered that part of the floor on which I lay is beyond any calculation. In an instant I was manacled and flung back into my den. I probably took an hour to crawl back to my bed, after which I certainly swooned. I cannot imagine how I was able to sleep that night; probably from sheer exhaustion."

Another day of torture and agony began. But suddenly came a miracle he had never expected, the order for his release from the dungeon. It was by a rare stroke of luck that it came, the fact that Italy's ambassador to England at that time, the Marchese di San Giuliano, had expressed great admiration for Symons' work a year or two before and had invited him to dinner. Informed of Symons' disappearance in Ferrara, the ambassador immediately sent a telegram in cipher requiring the Italian government to conduct a search.

After this official intervention Symons was treated with the greatest consideration and even kindness. He was taken first to a sanitarium not far

NEW LIGHT on the FATE of GENERAL SILVESTRE

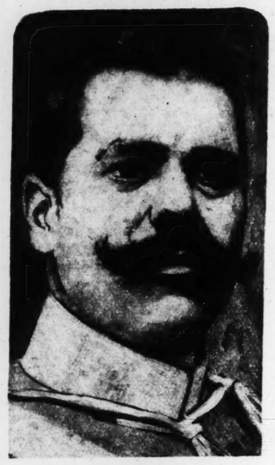
Is the Spanish Leader Being Held in Slavery in the Atlas Mountains?



Gen. Fernandez Silvestre.

PARIS.

THE world has long believed that General Fernandez Silvestre died in the massacre of his Spanish army in Morocco. History says he was slain or committed suicide when his outpost at Anual was overwhelmed in 1921 by Riffs under Abd el Krim, who then proceeded to slaughter 16,000 of the 19,000 soldiers of the panic stricken column.

But a new story of the General's fate has recently come out of the hills of Southern Morocco. Silvestre was taken prisoner in the Anual fight, according to this account, and was carried off to be a slave for his captors. The haughty Spaniard, whose slight is said to have turned Abd el Krim into a rebel, may still be toiling under the lash of a Moorish master in some remote fastness in the Atlas Mountains.

The story, brought back by a survivor of the 1921 massacre, has caused a disconcerting stir in Spain. It has revived the memory of a disaster to Spanish arms which had serious political consequences—a disaster for which General Damaso Berenguer, present Prime Minister, accepted blame and imprisonment but for which King Alfonso is said to have been responsible. The defeat precipitated the governmental upheaval culminating in creation of the Military Directory, headed by General Primo de Rivera.

The tragedy of General Silvestre, whether one of death or captivity, is one of the dramatic events in the game of empire Spain has played in Northern Africa. For centuries Spain has poured out blood and treasure in efforts to pacify that wild, rocky, blazing hot zone along the coast known as the Riff. In 1919 the General Staff at Madrid finally decided to make a supreme effort to quell opposition to Spanish rule once for all.

Armies started out bravely from the base at Melilla, to be picked off man after man by unseen Riffian snipers hidden behind huge boulders. Many blockhouses, generally without water, were built along the bloody trail. It was a heart-breaking warfare. The Riffians wore dusty gray robes of the same color as the rocky hills, could subsist on a handful of dried grapes, and were not encumbered by baggage trains. Like invisible hornets, they buzzed around the tired Spanish columns day and night, stealing pack mules and poisoning the water supplies when they could do no greater damage.

AFTER many months General Silvestre with his command reached a point near Anual, about 150 miles south of Melilla, and then a question arose as to whether he should go farther into the zone.

General Berenguer, High Commissioner or Military Governor of the territory, told Madrid that the column was getting into a tight place and strongly opposed any further advance. The aged General Valeriano Weyler took a similar view. As they suspected, word had spread from tribe to tribe that the Spaniards were walking into a trap, and that there would be rich booty. A new leader named Abd el Krim, once a Spanish partisan, had risen up in the Riff and secured a remarkable ascendancy over the tribesmen. Under his cunning command, the Riffians were opposing only slight resistance to the Spanish column, falling back steadily, and keeping well out of sight. But behind the interminable masses of boulders, thousands of pairs of beady eyes were watching the invaders and awaiting the fatal moment.

At this juncture, King Alfonso, anxious to put an end to the costly campaign, intervened and ordered General Silvestre to continue his march.

Several days later, on July 22, 1921, Abd el Krim and his hordes attacked, wiping out the outpost at Anual and massacring most of the rest of the army as it fled. The Riffians must have closed in on the army from all sides, probably at night. Officers and privates, Spaniards and native partisans, were shot or knifed. The handful of rearguards who escaped were pursued to the very gates of Melilla, 150 miles in the rear. Abd el Krim not only captured nearly 20,000 rifles with cartridges, but a large quantity of machine guns, field guns and other material, as well as a large amount of money. The details of this slaughter filtered out so slowly, due to a strict censorship, that the world never realized the full extent of it.

THE bodies of General Silvestre and his staff officers could not be found. The General's son made a very thorough but vain search, and came to the conclusion that Silvestre and his aids had been carried off alive, either as slaves or for ransom.

The mystery was never cleared up. Both the French and Spanish intelligence services sent spies into the unpacified regions of Morocco, hoping to discover some clew to the fate of the officers, but the spies returned baffled.

The years passed. Abd el Krim fought Spain and France until he was overcome in 1926, and exiled to Reunion Island. Even he did not seem to know what had become of Silvestre, for many of his followers had hurried home with their booty as soon as the massacre was over.

In Spain, General Berenguer had been made the scapegoat for the disaster, courtmartialed and sentenced to serve time in a fortress. He would never admit, even in the closed court, that King Alfonso was to blame. But the fact that the King had ordered the advance leaked out and started a ferment of anger against the monarch.

The Silvestre family never gave up hope that the General was still alive, knowing it has been a custom of the Moors for centuries to use their captives as slaves.

A few weeks ago Spain was thrown into a furor by the arrival of a former soldier named Gonzales, who said he had been captured at Anual and had only just escaped.

"I was carried off by some tribesmen into the fastnesses of the Talafilet district in Southern Morocco and kept there as a slave all these years," he told the Spanish authorities. "While I was there I caught sight several times of a group of Spaniards who were the slaves of a neighboring tribe. I am sure that I recognized one of them as General Silvestre, and others as his staff officers. I had seen the General many times while we were marching towards Anual, and the resemblance between him and the slave I saw was certainly very striking. It was never possible for me to talk to these compatriots. I don't know anything else except that these Spanish slaves were badly treated, had very little to eat and were sick most of the time.

"I OFTEN heard my own captors say that the other slaves were Spanish officers carried off from the Anual battlefield, and in my own mind I have no doubt about it."

The Spanish military authorities learned that Gonzales actually had been with the column that was massacred. Though they were convinced that the General and his staff were killed, the ex-soldier persisted in his story. He vigorously denied all suggestions that he had deserted before the slaughter, and gave such vivid details of his life as a captive that there could be little doubt about his truthfulness. For more than a week Gonzales was cross-examined by men who knew Morocco well, without once becoming entangled or embarrassed by the questions.

Finally the Government appointed a mission composed of several officers to visit the French zone in Morocco and try to clear up the mystery. Gonzales' story made such a deep impression in Spain that the Government could not do otherwise.

Major Batala, chief of this mission, went to Rabat, the French military headquarters, and was given every assistance. It happens though that the French authorities are also convinced that General Silvestre is dead; at least they have been unable to discover any trace of Spanish slaves in the unpacified territory. The Talafilet, from which the soldier said he escaped, is a fastness far up in the Atlas Mountains that has never been subdued. The tribes that live up there are notorious bandits, who raid the rich plains from time to time. It is also a refuge for deserters from the French Foreign Legion. The only way to make a thorough search of the region would be to send an expedition up there, but this would require tens of thousands of men, and the French could not even consider such a venture. The French Army does have informers up in this mountainous country, and the latter declare that they cannot find the slightest trace of any Spanish slaves.

Accompanied by a military escort, Major Batala visited the entire fringe of the Talafilet district, talked to friendly chiefs who are in contact with the more savage leaders of the interior, and offered large rewards for any information. It was all in vain.

"I never believed that I would find any traces of these unfortunate officers," Major Batala declared upon his return to Spain several weeks ago, "and the visit to Morocco confirmed my belief. It is true that the bodies of General Silvestre and his staff were never found, but even if they were captured alive they have surely perished in the meantime. They could not have endured the rigors of a life of slavery up in those cold Atlas Mountains for nine years. Furthermore, if they were alive, the Arabs would have offered to free them for a ransom."

Major Batala's skeptical statement was angrily received throughout Spain. A great many Spaniards, particularly those who lost relatives at Anual, think the Government has not been as zealous as it should have been in seeking the general. They suggest that if General Silvestre, embittered by years of slavery, ever returned to Spain, he might have some hard things to say about the people who were responsible for the massacre.

AT EVERY turn of this affair there are the elements of drama. Take General Berenguer, who recently succeeded the late Primo de Rivera as dictator. General Berenguer, to shield the King, took the blame of Anual, though he had opposed the Silvestre expedition. In appreciation of his devotion, the King made him chief of his military household, but officially he is still responsible for the military disaster.

The Silvestre family, which is rather influential, is still convinced that the General is alive. They mention the cases of many captives who have escaped from their Arab masters after years and years of slavery in the innermost retreats of the Atlas Mountains.

There are still many tribes in Northern Africa that have practically no contact with the outside world. There are regions in the Atlas that have never been explored and charted. Gonzales, the returned captive, is able to give only a vague description of the district in which he was held. He walked for several weeks, mostly at night, before he reached a French outpost. Up there in the hills, he says, captured white men are sold from tribe to tribe as slaves, just as in the times when the Barbary pirates flourished. Among these unfortunate wretches, he thinks, is the Spanish General Silvestre.

WHEN the MAYOR, AGED 63, MARRIED the WAITRESS, AGED 16

Frank B. McNeil.

Mrs. Frank B. McNeil.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS, Tennessee.

THE good women of the town think it is "outrageous to say the least," and when they get their heads together over the back fence or in the church basement they say a good deal more than the least.

The idea of Mayor McNeil—why he is 63 anyway—marrying that Clark child—Polly Clark. She was born the year the new Baptist church was built and so she can't be a day over 16. Why it's a disgrace to the town. And he the Mayor, too! He might have taken her out of that boarding house kitchen without marrying her. He might have adopted her and sent her to school. But instead of giving her an education he gives her a lot of jewelry and marries her. Humph!

One can hear some pretty caustic things said about Mayor Frank B. McNeil and his 16-year-old waitress bride. The men aren't quite so outspoken as the women, but even they shake their heads and say it was mighty ill advised. Of course, they did all they could to prevent it. They formed a citizens' committee and held a "protest meeting" when they found out what the Mayor intended to do. But he wouldn't listen—not even to his own brother, Henry, who was a member of the committee. And the girl wouldn't listen either, even though a lot of the townswomen (who "wouldn't think of meddling," my dear) sent her anonymous letters criticizing her for vamping the Mayor and advising her not to marry him.

Really, the town of Paris is much upset over the recent nuptials and nobody except the newlyweds seems to know what to do about it. The 63-year-old bridegroom and his 16-year-old bride are cozily settled in a new bungalow, busy with housekeeping and willing to let people say and do what they will. Far from feeling improper, Polly, the erstwhile school girl waitress, seems to be well satisfied with her title as "first lady" of Paris (even though it's only Paris, Tennessee) and not at all disturbed over her sacrifice of schooling in favor of housekeeping. She has three new diamonds, a wrist watch and a new Ford sedan as wedding gifts from her husband. She has also a nice new bungalow to preside over. It's a lot better than working in a boarding house kitchen. And Mr. Frank—she still calls him Mr. Frank—is a kind and considerate husband.

THE strange romance started in the boarding house, it seems, when Mr. Frank was a boarder there. Mr. Frank was a bachelor. He was lonely. He was a member of a prominent family and had many friends, but he was lonely nevertheless. Waiting on the tables for her aunt, Mrs. James Bishop, Polly caught the lonely Mayor's fancy. She poured his coffee just right and filled his glass very sweetly when it needed filling. He came to like her more than he liked other people and soon admitted—but only to himself—that he was in love with her. He thought he could see she was developing a strong attachment for him, too. But men of 63 in love with flappers of 16 always think they can see that. So Mayor McNeil asked her one day if she didn't love him.

She answered, very respectfully, "Yes sir."

The Mayor felt elated over that, of course, but at the same time a little disturbed. He got to thinking about it and telling himself that he was too old for her; that she would not be happy as his wife. The thought haunted him until he finally moved away from the boarding house.

"I moved away to keep our attachment from developing further," he told a friend later. "I actually dodged her when I saw her up town or saw her passing on the way to school."

BUT if he wanted to forget her, he was to learn later that was precisely the wrong way to go about it. The longer he was away from her the more he thought about her. And he couldn't avoid seeing her entirely. In a town as small as Paris one can't keep on avoiding anybody. One day he met her accidentally and the avoiding business came to an end. The Mayor and Polly started "going together" and thereby causing a good deal of gossip. On the night of last July 4 they went for an automobile ride and the Mayor proposed. Polly accepted. They set the wedding for August 27 and Polly aroused the envy of her school girl friends with a new diamond ring.

Then things began to happen. The good citizens of Paris, with the interest of the town at heart, decided something ought to be done to stop it. It would create a scandal and Paris' Mayor would be the laughing stock of the country. Besides, the girl was too young to know what she was about. It ought to be stopped on her account.

So a citizens' committee headed by Henry McNeil summoned the Mayor to the law office of R. H. Rhodes and laid their protest squarely before him. They urged him to put off the wedding, wait a year or two. They advanced a whole assortment of reasons why he should do this. They argued that the marriage would bring only unhappiness to both parties. But the Mayor would listen to none of them. Just what he told the committee has never been disclosed. They say he is noted for speaking his mind. Anyway, he left the meeting, called Polly by telephone and that night they drove off in the August moonlight and were married. They had planned the wedding for the next day, but decided in view of the town's excitement, to move it up a day. Only five persons were present at the ceremony.

The next day the town, expecting a wedding in the afternoon, was greeted with this announcement from the Mayor's office: "Polly and I were married last night."

And then instead of going away on a honeymoon as originally planned, the newlyweds altered arrangements still further by remaining in their bungalow. "If we were to go away now," McNeil says, "people might think we were afraid to face the music."

INTERESTING ST. LOUISANS

Major Albert Bond Lambert

Whose Notable Activities in Behalf of Aviation Have Been Inspired Solely by His Earnest Desire to Promote a "Better National Defense."

MAJOR ALBERT BOND LAMBERT has a vision. It is a vision of death and destruction. He sees America menaced from the air by European powers. A black shadow of wings over the earth, the enormous drone of thousands of airplane motors.

As he talks, he sketches a rough outline map of America, his pencil dots in little specks for coastal cities. "Along the Eastern coast and in the gulf, 112 vulnerable cities," he says. "Along the West coast at least 12. And here is Cuba." His pencil describes a larger dot. "And here's the Panama Canal, way down here. And the Philippines over there."

Major Lambert sees the attack on America conducted from a base of airplane carriers off the coast by a combination of European powers, a swift attack that would gain control of the Eastern seaboard. And what would happen after that he doesn't care to think about. He has held since 1915 the belief that such an attack was possible.

More than any other St. Louisan he has furthered the cause of aviation. He has done more probably than any one of the older generation of flyers now living to make the nation air conscious. Every single thing he has done for aviation he has done with the object of strengthening America's military defenses, he says. This has been his primary motive always, even when the connection seemed very remote.

His interest in flying began that way. It was while he was still a young man, not long out of the University of Virginia, on business in Paris for the Lambert Pharmacal Company, the firm founded by his father. Love of adventure, sport, was one reason, of course, why flying attracted him. He had a motor cycle in 1900 and putputted through the streets of Paris. It was one of two or three in the entire city and its appearance was the occasion for everything from cries of wild alarm to mere gaping curiosity. A year or two later he acquired an auto, one of the few in Paris then, a White steamer. It was the kind of car that made motoring a real adventure.

But it was the military phase that primarily interested him. He read a history of the Franco-Prussian War and was intensely interested to learn the part balloons played in that conflict for observation, for communication between the besieged city of Paris and the outlying provinces and even, in certain instances, enabling captured French officers to regain their freedom. Lambert's interest in flying was further stimulated by his friendship with Alberto Santos-Dumont, the Brazilian dirigible builder who lived for so many years in Paris.

HE TOOK up flying, began to learn the difficult process of getting a free balloon off the ground and bringing it back down again safely. Flying soon took all the time he could spare from his business (he was establishing branch factories near Paris and at Hamburg, Germany. For his home city of St. Louis he secured the international balloon races in 1907, the first time they were ever held in America.

The French at this time were intensely interested in aeronautics. The government was experimenting with various types of balloons and dirigibles. Lambert tells of an incident that occurred in 1908. On a solo balloon flight he came down near a small town in one of the remote provinces of France. He thought: "Now I'll have a hard time finding someone who knows how to pack this balloon for shipment." But he had scarcely touched the ground before a farmer appeared who volunteered to pack up the balloon. After doing this with the utmost dispatch and efficiency, he escorted Lambert to the railway station and waited with him until the Paris train came in. Lambert was amazed. On his return he told a friend, who laughed and explained that the little town was the center of a secret balloon training school. It was in this year that he was given spherical balloon license No. 18 by the Aero Club of France.

Returning to St. Louis, he bent every effort to further aviation, and since that time his name has been closely identified with air progress, not only in St. Louis but in the nation at large. With Captain H. E. Honeywell, he took part in the balloon races of 1908, landing in wild country near Tiger, Georgia, after a perilous flight which nearly cost the two flyers their lives. In 1909 he bought an airplane from the Wright brothers. Orville Wright gave him his first flying lessons.

Major Lambert has many photographs of those early flying days. The planes of that period have a flimsy, fantastic look. It is difficult to believe that men intrusted their lives to them. Fashioned of bamboo, of wooden splints and varnished silk, they look like nothing so much as very large box kites. The flyer sat on a little cushion on the lower wing, with all eternity before him. He had to be careful to keep his feet on the rudder bar. Otherwise there was a good chance of his slipping off the seat into space. To work the ailerons it was necessary to "break" the control stick pulling it sharply down. The 1909 plane was much harder to fly than the 1930 model, Lambert says.

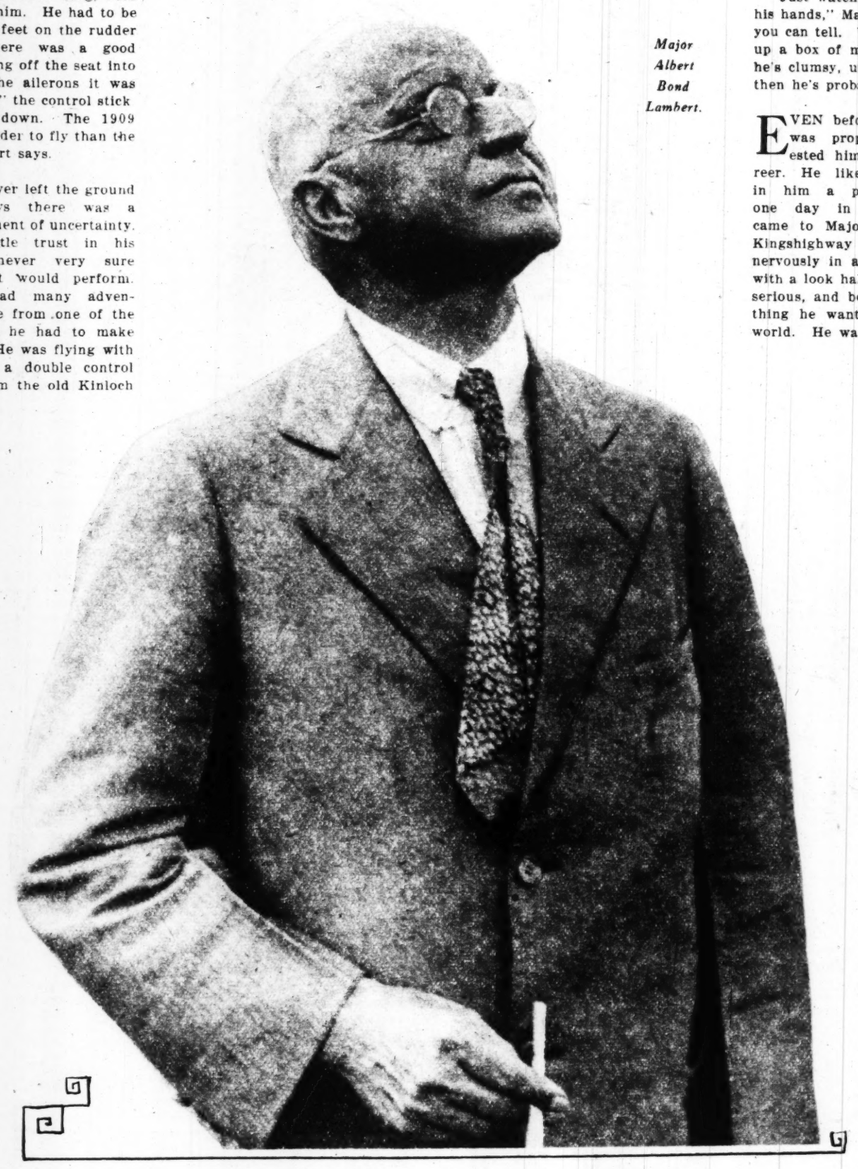
EACH time a flyer left the ground in those days there was a very large element of uncertainty. He could put little trust in his plane, he was never very sure as to just how it would perform. Major Lambert had many adventures. Once a wire from one of the controls broke and he had to make a forced landing. He was flying with Antony Jannus in a double control Benoist biplane from the old Kinloch flying field to the St. Louis Country Club. It was a narrow squeak for them both, that forced descent of a thousand feet. But safe on the ground again, they got a piece of wire somewhere, made the repair and went on.

Lambert could get 75 miles an hour out of his plane. That was a great speed then. Wind whistled around the exposed pilot, the plane shuddered and shook alarmingly. He had had an extra gasoline tank put on so he could fly the whole distance from Kinloch Field in Kinloch Park to the Glen Echo Country Club. He was a qualified pilot, holding international license No. 61.

He was striving hardest of all to put St. Louis on the aviation map. One event after another he promoted. In 1910 St. Louis saw the first big meet for airplanes. The following year Major Lambert established the first air mail route, flying the plane himself between Kinloch, Missouri, and Fairground Park, a distance of about 20 miles. He carried more than 100,000 pieces of mail in the week the route existed. That same year there was another air meet. Arch Hoxsey, one of the pilots, took Theodore Roosevelt on his first airplane ride at Kinloch Field. Lambert flew with a group of nine aviators known as the "Death Reel." They circled the field in formation, a stunt that fairly knocked the crowd out of the bleachers, so new and unique was it then.

But a year or so later Major Lambert was discouraged about the future of aviation. In an interview which he does not now remember, he said:

"Aviation today is not considered a sport. It is too deadly. Gill, Hoxsey, Parmalee, Johnstone, Welsh, Drew and Lillie are gone. Today there are two qualified aviators who are not dependent on the business for a living—Clifford Harmon and myself, and we have both quit flying."



Major Albert Bond Lambert.

But if he quit it was only for a short time. And if he was pessimistic, it was not for very long. He played a large part in organizing the Missouri Aeronautical Reserve Corps. With the entrance of America into the war he was placed in charge of a balloon school, with the rank of Major, first at St. Louis, later at San Antonio, Texas. Some 350 balloon pilots were trained in his school during the war. Chiefly they learned the uses of the Caquot balloon, the principal observation type. Everything he had learned about the science of aeronautics and the uses of the balloon through years of experiment he gave to the young flyers he was training.

He was largely instrumental after the war in bringing the international air races to St. Louis in 1923. This event, which was highly successful and without a single casualty, attracted a great deal of attention to St. Louis. It was one of the reasons why Lindbergh came to the city to start his flying career.

Major Lambert says that five minutes after he met young "Slim" Lindbergh—this was at least 18 months before the flight—he realized that here was a potentially great pilot. He realized this principally because of the way in which Lindbergh used his hands, the deft, unerring movements, the surety of touch.

"Just watch what a man does with his hands," Major Lambert says, "and you can tell. Watch the way he picks up a box of matches or a pencil. If he's clumsy, uncertain, if he fumbles, then he's probably no flyer."

EVEN before the flight to Paris was proposed, Lambert interested himself in Lindbergh's career. He liked the boy and saw in him a pluperfect flyer. Then one day in December Lindbergh came to Major Lambert's office on Kingshighway and settled himself nervously in a chair, leaned forward with a look half shy good nature, half serious, and began to talk about the thing he wanted to do most in the world. He wanted to get a new Bellanca airplane, make an endurance flight to prove its merit and then fly to Paris in it to win the Orteig prize of $25,000. He had been to several other people for backing, he explained, but they hadn't thought much of the idea. Major Lambert was convinced that Lindbergh could do what he had determined to do. It was this conviction, amounting almost to faith, and an initial check for $1000 which started the fund for purchase of the Spirit of St. Louis.

There were many hitches. No sort of agreement could be reached with the Bellanca people, so it was decided to get a Ryan-Mahoney plane. Going through his papers the other day, Major Lambert came upon a letter, a curiously formal and schoolboyish letter, from Lindbergh, then in San Diego supervising construction of his plane. Dated March 9, 1927, it is as follows:

"As you already know, we were unable to meet the terms imposed by the Bellanca organization and consequently placed our order with the Ryan Aircraft Corp. of San Diego.

"The Ryan people are pushing our plane ahead of all others and have the fuselage framework completed.

"The Wright Aero Corp. is giving us a special Whirlwind motor and sending one of their engineers to the West coast to install it.

"Due to the time required to build the plane, we will have to postpone the endurance flight until after the St. Louis-Paris hop.

"With best regards, I remain, yours very truly, "CHARLES A. LINDBERGH."

"That last paragraph is the one," says Major Lambert. "It doesn't have any ifs in it at all. It simply says 'after the St. Louis-Paris hop.' That's the way we all felt about it."

The Lindbergh flight was made to order for one of Major Lambert's practical plans. It served as an excellent springboard for the launching of the municipal airport project. It was a scheme the Major had been hatching for 15 years. He used the swelling flood of glory that rolled about Lindbergh as a means of prodding St. Louis' civic pride. Long before any official action was taken he had his own architects and engineers draw up complete plans for a modern airport. He even had one of those handsome drawings made that was to show just how the field would look when completed. The part he played in securing the airport for St. Louis is well remembered. He fought for it, toiled for it, spent his money freely for it.

It happens that a nation-wide system of airports fits in beautifully with his ideas on national defense. He regards a municipal airport, paid for by the taxes of the community, as a form of subsidy for aviation.

"In England the Government in 1929 subsidized the commercial transport companies to the extent of $1,800,000. These commercial companies have 400 trained pilots in their service. All these pilots are enrolled in the air service. Thus, the British Government gets pilots trained on the commercial airways for very little. In France it is the same. Germany gives her commercial air line a $1,400,000 subsidy.

"But we just won't do it. We think our air lines should get along without a subsidy. That's why I feel that municipal airports somewhat make up for this. The commercial companies use these ports at little or no cost. It is one item of overhead removed. If they had to build their own airports, they couldn't operate at all."

As it is, Major Lambert feels that commercial aviation in this country is absolutely stalemated. He gets busy with his pencil again and draws a chart. His diagram shows how the passenger lines always come back to the same point in their efforts to get on a paying basis. More passengers, more revenue, but less speed. Then another motor must be added to step the speed up to the previous level, and promptly the overhead mounts. In all these manipulations the safety factor is left unchanged.

"There must be," he says, "a radical change in the evolution of plane design. The safety factor can't be ignored any longer. There are 85 companies manufacturing airplanes in this country today. In two years there'll probably be five. There isn't a consistent demand for any type of plane."

He points out that even such safety devices as are known are little used. One such is the Hadley-Paige slot, which prevents the plane from slipping into a tail spin under most conditions. There is a royalty on the use of this, and, furthermore, it cuts down the speed of the plane. The insistent stressing of speed is all wrong, in Major Lambert's opinion. He thinks the commercial passenger plane should be content with a moderate speed.

WHAT he points to with a modest degree of pride these days is the hangar being built on Lambert-St. Louis Field for the air unit of the Thirty-fifth Division National Guard. Lambert was largely instrumental in securing $82,000 from the city for the new hangar. He brought well-known military and naval men here, General Summerall, General Patrick, Admiral Moffett. They all made earnest speeches on behalf of the hangar. When it is finished it will be the finest of its kind in the country, Lambert says. And now more recently he has succeeded in securing an appropriation of $42,000 from the city for a hangar for the naval reserve.

"No," he says in response to a question, "I have no faith in peace movements. It's a matter of economics, not ideas or theories."

Major Lambert is singularly mild in appearance for one who holds such militant views. He has none of the bluster or high-flown talk of the jingo. His face has an almost shy expression. He looks out from quiet, introspective eyes. Children like him, possibly because he is so very good at thinking up new games. And he spends a great deal of time in the evenings with certain of the very young members of the Lambert clan.

Just at present he is tanned to an even, warm brown. From a month or more under the California sun. From Santa Barbara he went to the air races at Chicago. A big air meet is rather like a homecoming for the Major. He invariably sees dozens of his friends and associates in the flying game. They pay him the respect due an old and experienced pilot. At Chicago he spent two hours with Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh in the judges' stand, beyond the gaze of the crowds. From Chicago he went to Cleveland, where he was in charge of the international balloon races. This, too, was in the nature of a reunion. Back at his office certain projects for the future were picked up where they had been dropped. He is in the flying game for life, he says.

BEAUTY and the BANKER

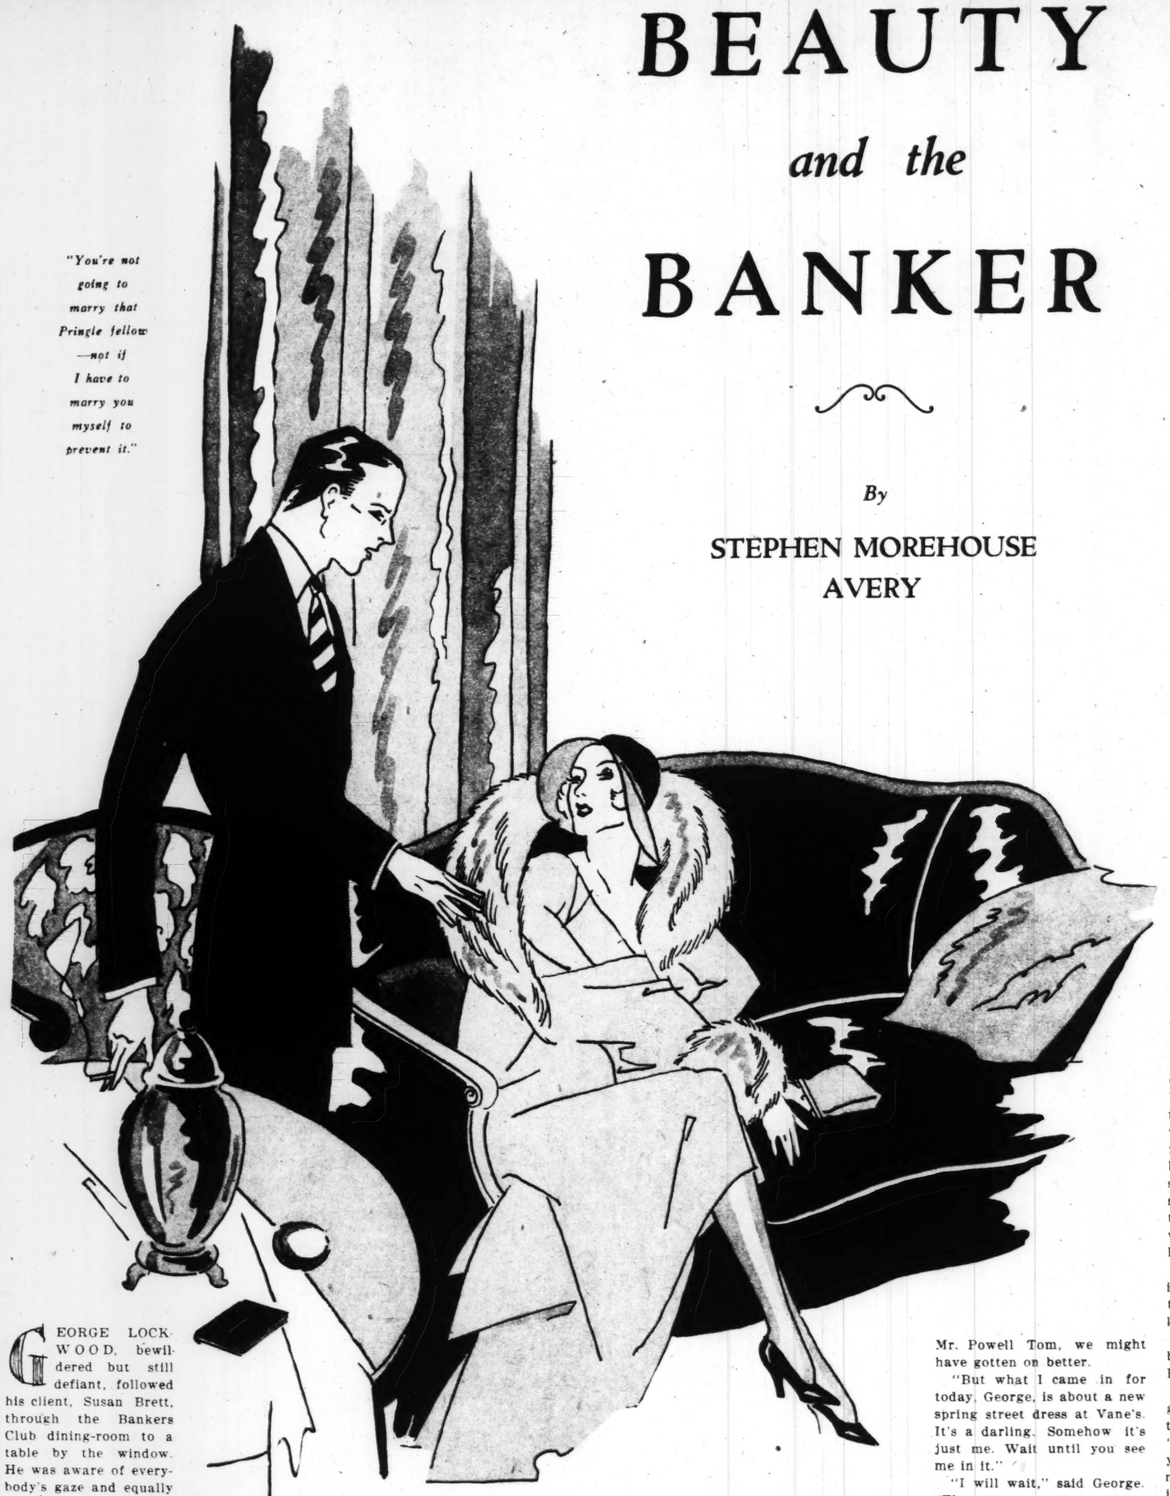
By

STEPHEN MOREHOUSE AVERY



"You're not going to marry that Pringle fellow —not if I have to marry you myself to prevent it."

AITHRA HOLLAND

GEORGE LOCKWOOD, bewildered but still defiant, followed his client, Susan Brett, through the Bankers Club dining-room to a table by the window. He was aware of everybody's gaze and equally aware it was not upon him. It was bent upon his client, Susan Brett. He did not notice the couple of grim and grizzled old money lords who watched them most intently nor suspect that it was the evil design of one of them which had brought this entire disaster upon him.

"Isn't that our Mr. Lockwood, Tom?" F. B. Fraser and Tom Powell, president and first vice president of the mighty Manhattan Union Trust Company, where Mr. Lockwood served as an assistant trust officer, paused in their silent balancing of the pain of indigestion against the joy of tripe. "He ought not to break up a business day bringing a girl downtown. I thought he was more serious minded."

"Oh, he's serious-minded—till it hurts," said Tom Powell. "That's a business luncheon. She's a client, Gordon Brett's daughter. Old Gordon's will made us trustee and he understood as well as adored his red-headed daughter enough to give us complete authority. It never was a large estate and I've turned it over to Lockwood—for the good of his soul."

"Well, I'm glad to hear it's business, anyway," said F. B. Fraser. "I've been watching that boy. A born banker, Tom. He has dignity and method. He's dispassionate, keen, and conservative far beyond his years."

"So far beyond," said the first vice president, "that I'll probably lose my temper and fire him one of these days."

"You knew his father, didn't you, Tom?"

"His old man and Gordon Brett and I were three friends, like brothers. So I'd do a lot for the boy, even fire him."

Old Tom Powell chuckled. "Well, I didn't have any dynamite to stick under his swivel chair and so I had to count on Susan. If he can handle her, he's a better banker than I am."

George at the moment gazed severely out the window upon the stone summits of big business. He was concentrating upon an ultimatum he was about to deliver and he didn't like to concentrate and look into Miss Brett's confiding eyes at the same time. Furthermore, her hair was not red, but buff and gold, although the fact had nothing to do with the case. Miss Brett was a client, a name, a symbol, the Gordon Brett trust estate, no more and, unfortunately, no less.

"WILL you begin with a grapefruit, Miss Brett?"

"I'd adore one, George dear. What are you going to have?"

"I take the same luncheon every day," he said. "Grapefruit, parsley omelet, stewed fruit."

"Don't you ever take a chance on crab flake Mornay?"

"Chance is a mere mathematical equation, Miss Brett. Only children and gamblers take chances. Let's give this order and get down to business. I must let you know exactly where you stand."

"Oh, I don't worry about that any more, now that I have you taking care of me, George. You've no idea how I suffered when that horrid old Mr. Powell had me. He wouldn't let me buy so much as a Sealyham terrier and as for a new roadster—! Do you know, once he actually slapped me."

George, torn between a new admiration for old Tom Powell, and a curious desire to punch him, only frowned. His mind went back to the beginning of this catastrophe a month ago, the fatal memo, signed T. P., the complicated investments and instructions of the Brett trust, five hundred dollars a month for Miss Susan Brett and anything over that only if approved by the trust company; finally the ushering into his imposing office, before his imposingly empty flat-top desk, of this beneficiary with buff and gold hair and a mad mind, this legally designated recipient with an absolutely senseless dimple in her cheek and a tilted chin, this mere symbol with confiding azure eyes.

It seemed to George that from the minute he had enjoyed the confidence of those baneful, if beautiful, eyes his composure and power of concentration had evaporated. "So you're George Lockwood," she had said. "I've heard much about you. Our dads were pals. At last I'll have somebody to care for me who can understand."

"Please sit down," George had said, placing a chair as far across the desk as possible. He hated dealing with women, anyway. They were evasive, unreasonable, and basically unsound. "Now, Miss Brett, it is my duty to advise and assist you in every way possible until you are married. As I study your case that consummation is very much to be desired. The record shows trouble and extravagance throughout, and a strong-willed husband and several fine children should prove a steadying influence."

MISS BRETT had gasped a bit. "I'm afraid I haven't any good husband material ready, unless you'd count Bill Pringle."

"I wouldn't," said George promptly. "My instructions specifically warn me against Mr. Bill Pringle. You receive $10,000 cash and $2500 quarterly when you marry. Mr. Powell feels that would last Mr. Bill Pringle no time at all. Of course, the company will automatically cease to protect and advise you, Miss Brett, and we'd like to leave you in better hands than those of Mr. Bill Pringle."

"Well, can you think of any prospects? And since we are going to be so familiar, Mr. Lockwood, you might as well call me Susan right off the bat. I won't mind. I'll just call you George. If I could only have called Mr. Powell Tom, we might have gotten on better.

"But what I came in for today, George, is about a new spring street dress at Vane's. It's a darling. Somehow it's just me. Wait until you see me in it."

"I will wait," said George. "The trust company cannot conscientiously approve any more spring clothes, Miss Brett. You are $2000 over your allowance already—"

"But $500 a month, George—what is that for a girl? Why, it's nothing. My apartment alone"—her apartment, which by the evil luck hanging above this whole matter turned out to be at a number in East Sixty-seventh street exactly back to back to his own in East Sixty-sixth—"my apartment and my maid take most of that. Must I get your permission to buy my toothpaste? It isn't fair. It's hardly decent. It would be too bad if I had to run off and marry Bill Pringle just so I could buy that little spring street dress, wouldn't it, George?"

GEORGE was alarmed. "Of course, I don't want to be hard, Miss Brett. Perhaps we can manage a small advance for the street dress." He didn't know that same little threat of Susan's had won her already a trip to Europe and a gray squirrel coat. "And now let's get down to serious business, Miss Brett. Is there anything in your affairs about which I can advise just now?"

"Nothing important," she sighed. "It's nice of you to ask though. Of course that damage suit is about to happen. How can a little truck full of vegetables be worth $1500, George? Oh, you don't know about that? Why, that's why I need the new roadster. I was driving Bill Pringle home to Scarsdale in my old one and the silly vegetable truck got right in our way. It would be full of tomatoes."

Somehow, and at a price, during that first month, George had extricated his client from the damage suit, from an optimistic lease on a Sutton place apartment while a year remained on her own, from a verbal order to a friendly broker to buy a hundred shares of Deep Vein Copper common, very common, and from many minor purchases which might have touched the heart of a less conscientious trust officer. His work had degenerated gradually into care of the Brett trust any anything else he had time for, and it didn't appease him to overhear Miss Brett's enthusiastic remarks one afternoon as she lingered in the office of Tom Powell: "And don't you love the way his hair turns up over his ears, Mr. Powell? I didn't know bankers were ever like that."

If a day seemed apparently free of her difficulties George's phone would ring and there on the wire would be Miss Brett: "I'm at Pierre's, George, and I've had the sweetest luncheon. Will you slip uptown and pay for it like a dear? If you want to scold me later on, I'll be home at tea time."

BUT George had saved up most of the scolding until today. She'd asked him to take her to the Bankers Club because something very important indeed had come up. George was more alarmed than angry. But he was plenty angry. He was going to put Miss Brett in her place. "Do you wish to say what you have to say first, Miss Brett, or shall I?"

"Let's save yours, George," she said. "Mine's so important it won't wait. What do you think?"

"The worst," muttered George—thinking that she had taken an option on the Erie Railroad or been named as defendant in an alienation of affection suit.

"George, I'm going to be married."

"I've heard that suggested before, Miss Brett. In fact, each instance has cost the company an advance, against its better judgment. What is it you want this time?"

"This is different," said Susan. "I want something no advance would buy, the most precious thing in the whole world. I doubt that the smartest and fastest roadster in the world would tempt me to give it up. So I really am going to be married, George. I've decided to drive up to Greenwich and get it done with tonight."

So it was worse than the worst. George didn't know quite why it was worse than the worst, except that there were occasional moments in the midst of the general distraction when he almost enjoyed his work with the Brett trust. He was rather proud of his success with it, and of the perceptible, if gradual, improvement in business sense of the beneficiary, namely, Miss Susan Brett. Now, just when the thing was licked into shape it must end, and although George's banker's heart was far from happy, he said: "I'm delighted of course, Susan—I mean, Miss Brett. It's just the thing, a fine, clear-thinking, strong-willed husband. Am I to be told who he is?"

"You're not very good at guessing, are you, George? Perhaps if I told you my intended does not yet know his fate it might help you."

"You couldn't by any chance be referring again to Mr. Bill Pringle, Susan?"

Susan shook her head sadly and gazed away through the window at the gilded peak of a distant building. "All right then," she said. "Yes, you've hit it. Bill's will power has never been celebrated and he's seldom in shape to think clearly, but I suppose he can stand up and say 'I do.' All the men I know are Bill Pringles but one, George. I haven't much choice, have I?"

GEORGE worked all afternoon against his depression. He ought really to be glad to be free of the Brett trust on any terms. In the end he decided to report its approaching culmination as an advisory matter to the chief trust officer, Mr. Tom Powell. "I thought you ought to know, sir, that Miss Brett is really determined to marry."

Old Tom Powell sat back in his chair and invited George to another. "Have a cigar, George, my boy. You don't know how much this news pleases me. I'd begun to fear you couldn't handle that affair—in just the way I wanted you to. I think it's the very best thing that could happen to Susan. To both of you, in fact. She's a rare girl, with fine stuff in her, and she couldn't have chosen better. I suppose you're both very happy."

"I'm sure Susan is, Mr. Powell," said George. "And I am certainly very much relieved. I am convinced that we have been wrong to oppose Mr. Bill Pringle, sir. Such persistent love as Susan's is rare."

"What has Bill Pringle to do with this?"

"Why, he's the man she's to marry," said George, entirely unprepared for the near apoplexy with which the news affected Mr. Powell.

"I see I made a mistake," said the old man when he could control himself enough to talk. "I see my worst fears about you—about your handling of that trusteeship—are confirmed."

"Do you wish my resignation, Mr. Powell?"

"Not yet. In a month maybe—"

"Very well, sir," said George. "The truth is, I have handled the Brett estate better and with fewer advances than you did. So during the month you can decide whether you want to fire me—or raise my salary fifty dollars a week."

The first vice president blinked. Maybe there was still hope. That remark might have come from old Jerry Lockwood himself. "Fair enough," he said. "I'll give you another chance, and the chance is that you can break up that match pronto. The idea of a trust adviser letting a girl hook up with a good-for-nothing, nit-witted waster like Pringle! Do you realize that Susan has no parents, no family except a few cousins in South Carolina and nobody in this world to help and protect her but this company? I don't care how you manage it, but don't let her marry Bill Pringle tonight—not if you have to marry her yourself to prevent it."

Susan found George waiting in her living-room when she came in. She had been out to tea—with Bill Pringle, George assumed. He was not to be deceived by her apparent gladness to find him waiting there.

"Better sit down, Susan," he said. "I have bad news for you. You can't marry Bill Pringle."

"Oh, can't I? Who's going to stop me?"

"I am, Susan. The company is. We can't allow a defenseless client of ours to be preyed upon by a nit-witted waster like Bill Pringle."

"I don't see how you're going to stop me, George."

"You'll need money for a trousseau, won't you? I'll see that you don't get it. Your monthly allowance is used up and I won't approve another cent—until you promise not to see him."

"I'll borrow fifty dollars from Bill if he's got it."

"VERY well," said George, "try it. I'm going to explain our position to the young man when he shows up and if he doesn't see it, I'll—I'll punch his head for him."

"Would you really do that much to save me, George?"

"I'd do much more," said George. "You're not going to marry that Pringle fellow—not if I have to marry you myself to prevent it."

Susan glanced at him quickly and laughed. Then she buried her face in a divan pillow and burst into tears.

George patted her shoulder. "You must bear this bravely, Susan. I hate to hurt you. Please believe me. But the company knows what's best for you, dear girl."

Susan sat up and drew away from him. "I suppose I'm just being a fool." She stood up. "And at any rate I'm through for one day, if you'll excuse me."

She left him, and George heard the door of her bedroom close. While he hesitated it opened again and she called out to him. "It's only fair to warn you, George, that I'll be on my way to the Reverend Hewlett's in Greenwich before midnight."

"Perhaps you will, Susan," he said. "But you won't be going there to marry Bill Pringle."

The door slammed that time. George opened the apartment door to let himself out. A young man stood there, in the act of ringing the bell, a very nice-looking, wind-browned and husky young man, quite different from the Bill Pringle he expected. "Hello," he said. "Come in. I know all about you and I'd like to talk to you."

"What?" The young man looked at him vacantly. "Who are you?"

"I'm the Manhattan Union Trust Company, as far as you're concerned," said George. He let the door close behind him and they stood together in the hallway. "On second thought, what I have to say might be said better outside. Will you come with me, please?"

"I don't understand what you're talking about," Mr. Pringle had a pleasant, slow manner of speaking. "I didn't come here to see you, and I don't reckon on wasting any time talking to—"

It was that instant which changed George's character for life. He could never tell afterward why he did it, unless it was that the whole idea of Bill Pringle was more than he could any longer endure. Other people have put it down to more serious motives. From that moment, anyway, he became more of a bandit than a banker. In the first place, he had not dreamed he could hit so hard or so straight—until this Mr. Bill Pringle bounced back, hit the floor, and became quite indifferent to further proceedings.

survey of funeral costs. In a special report by Director Gebhart the warning was sounded that within another generation the United States would be forced to adopt the burial customs of the older cities of Europe—temporary interment with disinterment after a stated period of years. Graves in perpetuity would be only for the affluent.

In reviewing the socio-economic and political aspects of the burial problem in connection with the rights of the living to use and enjoy the land Dr. Hoffman said:

"There is a limit to the extent to which any community can go in preserving properly the ever increasing number of graves. Sooner or later there must be the same radical change in public views concerning this matter as there has been in regard to the former practice of interring the bodies of the dead in churches, or within the confines of densely populated cities.

"THE cemeteries of today represent a frightful waste of land, in that one-third only of the area is used for actual burial purposes, while the remaining two-thirds is taken up in parks, roads, lagoons and expensive landscaping."

Dr. Hoffman also called attention to the fact that the growth of the idea that the purchase of a burial lot should also provide for reasonable care and upkeep, resulted in another item of expense that could not be ignored. He said land devoted to cemetery purposes became sterile and after use entailed an ever-growing charge in upkeep.

"In Boston, New York and Philadelphia there are quite a few abandoned cemeteries in the most populous neighborhoods of those cities. These vast areas, if used for housing purposes, would, in a measure, help to solve the problem of overcrowding among the poor, or return a large benefit to the public health, if used for recreation.

"The acquisition of further land for burial ground projects, owing to post-war conditions," he continued, "has become increasingly expensive—and cemetery organizations, whether public, quasi-public, mutually operated or privately conducted for profit, are now obliged to purchase land far outside the corporate areas they serve. Within the last few years the tendency of suburban communities has been to vote down the huge cemetery projects of the large cities.

"Boston is, indeed, a case in point; practically all of its dead are buried outside the corporate limits of that city. And New York's position is not a whit different from that of Boston, and Philadelphia and a few other coastal cities are in a somewhat similar predicament.

"New York City, with an approximate population of 7,000,000, has around 80,000 deaths every year. Boston—not Greater Boston—has within its small and cramped area about 800,000 people, with somewhere near 12,000 deaths annually. These two cities are increasing in population, and by the same token their deaths are increasing.

"Well, where, in time, are Boston and New York, not to mention others such as Philadelphia, Baltimore, Providence and Portland, going to bury their dead?

"They certainly cannot continue using indefinitely adjacent territory as burying grounds. There is no telling when communities like Cambridge, Brookline, Malden, Everett and Hingham, all large and growing cities, may say to Boston: 'You can no longer bury your dead in our midst!'

"And the ring of small towns and cities about New York may take a similar attitude toward that ever-expanding metropolis.

"The ultimate outcome of the present land-consuming method of earth burial is none too pleasant to visualize. Countless acres of immensely valuable land near every large city are needed to meet the ever-growing demands for the interment of the dead—but the day is near at hand when a ban will be placed on such lands for cemetery purposes.

"Costly mausoleums are being erected as a solution of the burial problems of large cities, but soon the living will rise up and say that these temples of the dead cannot encroach upon the domains which we have dedicated to home and family and community.

"So, after all, it seems to me that burial at sea offers the only solution of the problem of the North Atlantic coastal cities, the disposal of their dead. There is nothing opposed to the most profound respect for the dead in this simple and relatively inexpensive method of disposal Burial at sea, in the event of death on shipboard, has been a common practice throughout the ages and has met every consideration of respect for the sentiments of those present and relatives.

"Cement coffins would absolutely protect the body against injury and disturbance, and would go a long way in the reduction of funeral costs.

"Again, wholesale burials on regularly appointed days would do away with the long funeral corteges that now pass through crowded city streets, with disruption of traffic. The plan of wholesale burials would not mean abandoning funeral services at the church, for these ceremonies would be held before sending the body to the funeral barge. On the funeral barge each sect would be represented by its own divine. These are problems that could be worked out. The main thing would be the burial at sea.

"SURVEYS could be made for suitable burial areas not too distant from the shore, but far enough to provide a permanent resting place for countless dead that now rest in cemeteries surrounded by growing cities needing the priceless area of land for living purposes."

Dr. Hoffman declared the time had arrived for a complete cemetery survey, not alone in the larger centers of the North Atlantic seaboard, but in every community of the United States. He stated that it was virtually impossible to obtain reliable statistics relating to municipally owned, mutually owned and operated and profit-earning burial grounds. He expressed the opinion that such a study would help reduce funeral costs.

"At all events," concluded Dr. Hoffman, "let us give the matter of burial at sea serious consideration."

Beauty and the Banker

the street George hailed a cab and with the help of the driver and a policeman got his burden into it. "He'll be all right, officer. Just one too many. I'll get him home and put him to bed. These lads who can't hold it ought to let it alone."

It was more of a plan than a subterfuge with George by this time. His Filipino servant, who cared for the apartment and prepared his meals, was of considerable assistance, and between them they soon had the victim comfortably fixed in the rear bedroom, in a suit of George's pajamas. After which, George drew the solid door very gently closed and just as gently turned the solid lock. Then he went into the living room and telephoned the Park avenue residence of Tom Powell.

"Will you tell Mr. Powell when he comes in, please, that Mr. Lockwood has the matter in hand and that everything is fixed? Yes, that's it, fixed."

But everything did not seem quite fixed to George. All through his solitary dinner and the maneuvering to let Mr. Bill Pringle's dinner down to him through the transom of the back room, he was really thinking of Susan, poor little blue-eyed Susan with nobody to help her except those cousins in South Carolina, and even her bankers conspiring to separate her from the man she loved.

Of course George realized that Mr. Bill Pringle ought not to be the man Susan loved. He couldn't think of exactly the right person just now, but he could think how wrong Bill Pringle was. Still, if Susan loved him—poor little Susan.

ABOUT 10:30 the telephone rang and Mr. Tom Powell's voice came through. That you, George?" It was not a pleasant voice. "I thought you left word you had the thing fixed. It's fixed fine—for Bill Pringle. Susan has just been here in a last effort to borrow fifty dollars. She said she'd go without it and she said in detail what she thought of both you and me. Now she's hopped her confounded roadster back to her place for her bag and is off to Greenwich to meet this damned Pringle and be married. Do you call that fixed?"

"I don't see how she very well can meet him, Mr. Powell."

"Why not?"

"Because Mr. Bill Pringle is spending the evening with me, Mr. Powell. Am I sure? Well, he's swearing and stamping around in my back bedroom enough at the moment to reassure me. Well, not quite of his own accord, sir, but he came with a little persuasion—on the chin. What's that? Seventy-five! But I only asked for fifty."

So George was to have seventy-five dollars more per week for making poor little Susan unhappy. His mind went right back to that, and he couldn't bear to think of those wide-open azure eyes which had confided in him so completely. Still, as long as he was her banker and she his client, he had to protect her from marrying Bill Pringle—or anybody else, added his guilty conscience. Well, at any rate, if he hurried, he might save her the pain and humiliation of waiting in Greenwich in vain.

GEORGE dismissed Baptista for the night and listened a few minutes to the gifted profanity in the back room before he left. Then he hurried around the block to Susan's apartment, and he was in time. She was sitting at the wheel of her despised, but still admirable roadster, watching the corner opposite his approach. Until he was within speaking distance she hadn't moved and when he called her name she jumped and turned as if terrified. "You frightened me, George. Well, I'm off. Did you come to wish me luck?"

"I came because I don't want you to go, Susan." He leaned on the edge of the door.

"Why not?" She asked that as if with hope. "I told you I was going. Did you think I didn't mean it? I'm going straight out to the rectory in Greenwich—by way of the Post Road, Larchmont and Port Chester—if you must know. I'm to wait for him there."

"Don't wait long, Susan. Bill Pringle won't show up. He is otherwise detained. I talked with him, or heard him express himself, less than 15 minutes ago. He regrets the situation but he can't see any way out."

"I don't believe you, George. I have my own reason for not believing you. Let go of that door!"

"Do you believe in him that much? Just because he said he'd be there? You really love him, don't you, Susan?"

"What do you think, George?" She waited for an answer and then seized the wheel and put her foot on the starter. "Good-by. I'm going—by way of the Post road, Larchmont and Port Chester."

George stood there at the curb watching her roadster dart through the gloom of Sixty-seventh street.

"She's gone," he repeated over to himself, with that realization which so often comes when things are gone. For he knew now. Oh, why need he have been only her banker and severe and hard with her, and refuse her things she wanted? Why must he have been the one to tell her she was foolish and extravagant and willful, when he only meant that she was beautiful and gay-hearted and dear? What difference did her bit of gold in the bank make when she had all that in her hair? She might even have loved him then—as she loved this Pringle fellow now. But only her bright image must remain with him, as it was, to ride his day dreams and fill the night dark of his room for always. "She's gone," he said.

George met the issue fairly enough, as soon as he saw it. He was hurrying back to his own apartment almost before the thought was complete. He hadn't Susan any longer but he had her happiness in his hands. He was responsible to her for that.

Inside, he didn't wait to take off his coat but seized the telephone and called up old Tom Powell. "This is George Lockwood, Mr. Powell. Before I do anything against your instructions I feel it only fair to resign. Yes, sir, I mean from the company. I'm taking Bill Pringle out to Susan in Greenwich with my own hands. See? You be for the company, Mr. Powell. I'm for Susan."

There was an echo in the receiver as he slammed it down which sounded like old Tom saying, "And I'm for you both, boy"—but George had no time to figure that out.

In the back bedroom he heard Bill Pringle's angry pacing which stopped as soon as his own footsteps were heard. George hammered on the door. "Hey, you! Want to get out?"

"Whenever you're ready to get the beatin' of your life, I do."

"No time for that now," said George. "I'm taking you to Susan in one hour. Is that enough? You've got to swear not to start anything or ask any questions until you see her. Is it a go?"

"All right—all right, I can save it up for you, fellah. Open the door and gimme my clothes."

GEORGE turned the key and stood back, half prepared for attack. "Your clothes are in my bedroom there. Hurry and get into them. No, I won't answer any questions until you see Susan. There's no use of either of us having a word to say until then. Please speed it up, will you? We've got a long way to go in a taxicab and I hate to tell those cab drivers to hurry. It's almost worth your life. We go by way of the Post Road, Larchmont and Port Chester."

In one of the quiet side streets of Greenwich, in front of the famous red brick rectory of Dr. Amos Hewlett, stood the despised but still serviceable roadster of Miss Susan Brett. Susan herself sat inside in a small reception room with her hands folded in her lap. There was something in the atmosphere of that room that made her fold her hands in her lap, the ghosts of many other girls who had waited there, perhaps. A soft-voiced old lady came to the door presently and smiled. "Are you sure the young man will soon be here, Miss? It's getting very late."

Susan tried to smile too, but her face was a little wan and there was a suspicious smudge alongside her turned-up nose. "We can never be sure, can we?" she said.

But she was the first one to hear the mutter of the taxicab's engine as it drew up outside and to recognize George's voice before he burst in upon her. "It's all right, Susan!" He dropped down beside her and took her folded hands in his. "You needn't do any crying now, need you, Susan? He's here. Bill Pringle. He's outside in the cab. I told him to wait until I cleared out—and that then he could come. I don't want to see you together. But I brought him."

"Why, George?"

"Because I love you myself. I shouldn't tell you that here, when you're waiting for the man you love, but—"

"THE man I love has come, George. Must I still keep on doing everything but go down on my knees to you, trying with every trick I know, and the help of dear old Powell, to let you know?"

George made a vague reach for her and then sat there stupefied a moment letting himself be kissed. Then he took charge of himself, and only the noisy entrance of a husky and quarrelsome young man was sufficient to interrupt. "Say, I reckon I've had about enough of this waitin'. Now what goes on—Why, hello, Susan." He went over and kissed her somewhere near the eye.

"Joe!" said Susan.

"Joe?" demanded George.

"Yes, this is my cousin Joe from South Carolina, George. He's my family."

"That's right. I got your wire saying you were figurin' on marryin' this banker fellah and I came right up."

George sat down for support. "Well, where in the name of heaven is—Bill Pringle?"

Susan laughed and put her fingers on his furrowed brow. "Don't be so literal, George. As far as I know, Bill Pringle has been in southern California for at least two months."

Arthur Symons Tells How He Went Mad

from Ferrara. "I have a vague remembrance," he writes, "of a priest who was very kind to me. He would sometimes read aloud his Latin breviary beside my bed, which always had a lulling effect upon me." Later there was an asylum, a mad-house, near Bologna, and then accompanied by two caretakers he went to London.

The period that followed, he writes, was nearly as terrible as the experience in the Ducal Palace. The first sanitarium to which he went he liked but the second was a dreary nightmare to him from beginning to end. The doctors scarcely expected him to live more than three months. He remembers certain of his aberrations at this time:

"I had only a few vague ideas in my head. I said to a visitor: 'You and I will people the world with men children.' I said to another: 'I am planning a map of the world; I shall divide it into small divisions; each shall have a King and Queen; I have not yet decided as to what these shall be.' I said to one: 'I am the Pope in Rome,' and I made a sweeping gesture; and I described, not so much the Papal vestments, as those of Cardinal Rampolla, who said High Mass at St. Peter's on Christmas Day in 1896."

He suffered most terribly from insomnia. His keepers, whom he loathed and detested, refused to give him a sleeping potion. Sleeplessness is, he believes, the most awful form of punishment in the world and he quotes Oscar Wilde as saying, "With regard to the punishment of insomnia, it exists only in Chinese and in English prisons. In China it is inflicted by placing the prisoner in a small bamboo cage; in England by means of the plank bed. The object of this plank bed is to produce insomnia."

He forgot his own existence, forgot that he had ever written anything, forgot the names of Byron and of Coleridge, of Wagner and Rodin, "the memory of things past, the memory of things present." And yet he survived, he came through the ordeal, sane again, in little less than two years. He feels this is thanks to his intense nervous strength and "an almost inflexible belief in myself which has made me for the most part disregard the opinions of others." He gives a great deal of the credit, too, to his wife. She came and lived close by the asylum and visited him every day. As he was beginning to recover, the late John Quinn, American book collector, gave him financial aid by buying many of his manuscripts and autographed first editions.

Yet, well again, he cannot forget his suffering.

"I am impelled to say, with absolute certainty, not only is my case, my case of survival and of recovery, unique in the judgment of the wisest doctors and in the judgment of others, and that I am perfectly aware of this fact, but that, as far as my knowledge extends, no man, such as I am, a poet, a writer of prose, a dramatist, a traveler, who has lived with the certainty of being always free, has been so cruelly and so unjustly confined in a prison whose name I shall never mention—where I should never have been sent—the scars and stigmata of which, the scars of persecution and the stabs that my flesh had received, will remain, part and parcel of this suffering self of mine, until the last wind extinguishes the last flickering candle."

SCIENCE

A Short Lecture on Facts Every Hiker Should Know.

NOW, my friends, this reptile I got in my hand, this reptile you seen me take out of the box—now I'll ask the young men on the edge of the crowd not to make so much noise, it's impossible to give a lecture with a whole lot of noise going on—yes, Madam, it certainly is alive—this reptile is a rattlesnake. A common rattlesnake, found in many parts of the West and, in fact, in all parts of the North American continent, anywhere, in fact, where there's woods and high ground, just a ordinary American rattlesnake, and I'll ask you to look at it closely, just examine it for a minute as I hold it here in my hand.

Now, my friends, you seen me take the snake out of the box, you see me hold it here in my hand without no hurt to myself, and the first thing I want to bring out is that there ain't no such thing as a snake charmer. It ain't positively no such thing as a snake charmer. No man can't throw no spell over a snake, and no woman either; holding a snake like I am now is all in knowing how to handle them. Anybody can learn how to handle a snake, but nobody ought to try without he receives instruction from somebody that knows the principles of how to handle a snake. Now that's the first thing.

Now the next thing is about his tongue. That little forked thing you see running in and out of his mouth is his tongue. My friends, it is not his stinger. I hear people all the time when they see his tongue running in and out of his mouth say, "Aw, look at his stinger."

Four or five times a year, my friends, the snake sheds his skin, comes right out of it like you pull your hand out of a glove, and during them periods the snake is blind, blind as a bat, can't see a thing, can't even see his way around. And at that time what does he do? How does he get around? That's where his tongue comes in, my friends; he feels his way around with his tongue, feels his way around with his tongue same as a blind man feels with his stick, and that's why his tongue is forked, so he can feel two ways at once.

NOW then, the next thing is his head. I'll ask you to take a look at his head, just take a look at his head, as I got it laying here in my hand. Now, it so happens, my friends, that the snake has not got any teeth that he can chew with, only teeth that he can grab with, and that means he has got to swallow his food any way he catches it. So nature has provided, my friends, nature has thoughtfully provided, that he can swallow live food six or seven times the size of his head. There is no connection between the upper and lower jaws, positively no connection whatever, they spread right open to let in a guinea pig, or a rabbit, or whatever it is the snake has caught, and it goes down and enters the stomach to be digested.

Now the next thing, of course, is the stomach, and it extends from his head to his feet. All inside the snake is stomach, but a snake has not got no feet. No snake has got feet, and if you hear somebody come to you and say, "Oh, I seen a snake this afternoon that was a yard long and had feet," why you know it wasn't no snake. Maybe it was a alligator, but it wasn't no snake.

Then how does the snake walk? My friends, a snake doesn't walk. He slides along the ground, like a caterpillar goes on his feet, only he uses his ribs for feet, and he goes sidewise along the ground stead of humping hisself up and down the way a caterpillar does.

Now, the next thing is his fangs, his poison fangs, and there they are, my friends, right in his mouth; this snake has not had his fangs drawed out. Now, I had a lot of people ask me, "Doctor, how can I tell which is the poisonous snakes and which is not poisonous?"

Fact of the matter, last week a lady come running over to the house and she hollered inside: "Doctor, doctor! My little girl has been bit by a snake; ain't you got nothing for snake bite?" So I went over there, and fortunately the girl's uncle had killed the snake, and I seen what it was, and I said: "Calm yourself, Madam, your little girl has been bit by a harmless grass snake; she will not die and it is not necessary to do nothing for her except cleanse the wound and bathe it once a day in a little bit of antiseptic."

IN A BRIEF lecture like this, my friends, it would be impossible for me to tell you all the different kinds of snakes there is, and probably if I did you wouldn't remember what I told you anyway, but as a rule, as a rule I said, and mind all rules has got exceptions, but as a rule you can tell by the markings. If the markings are scrambled up, like on this rattlesnake, or run crosswise on his back, why the probability is that snake is poisonous, and let it alone. Let it alone, just leave him be, don't bother him, go away from him, and he won't bother you.

But if the stripes run lengthwise of his back, why you can be pretty sure that that snake is not poisonous, and he won't hurt you. But let him alone. Let him alone same as you would if he was a poisonous snake. Let him alone, I said. Live and let live is one of the first laws of nature, that snake ain't bothering you, so why should you bother him? Let him alone!

Now then, I think that covers pretty well what most people want to know about a snake, so I'm putting him back in the box, you see me putting him back in the box, and now if you'll step a little closer, I got something else I want to show you. That's right, step right in close, the snake is in the box and he can't get out, take a look at what I got in my hand, take a good look please, because it's nothing other than a box of capsules, a box of capsules compounded of simple, harmless herbs that the Indians used to keep themselves alive, and that's what I want to talk to you about now.

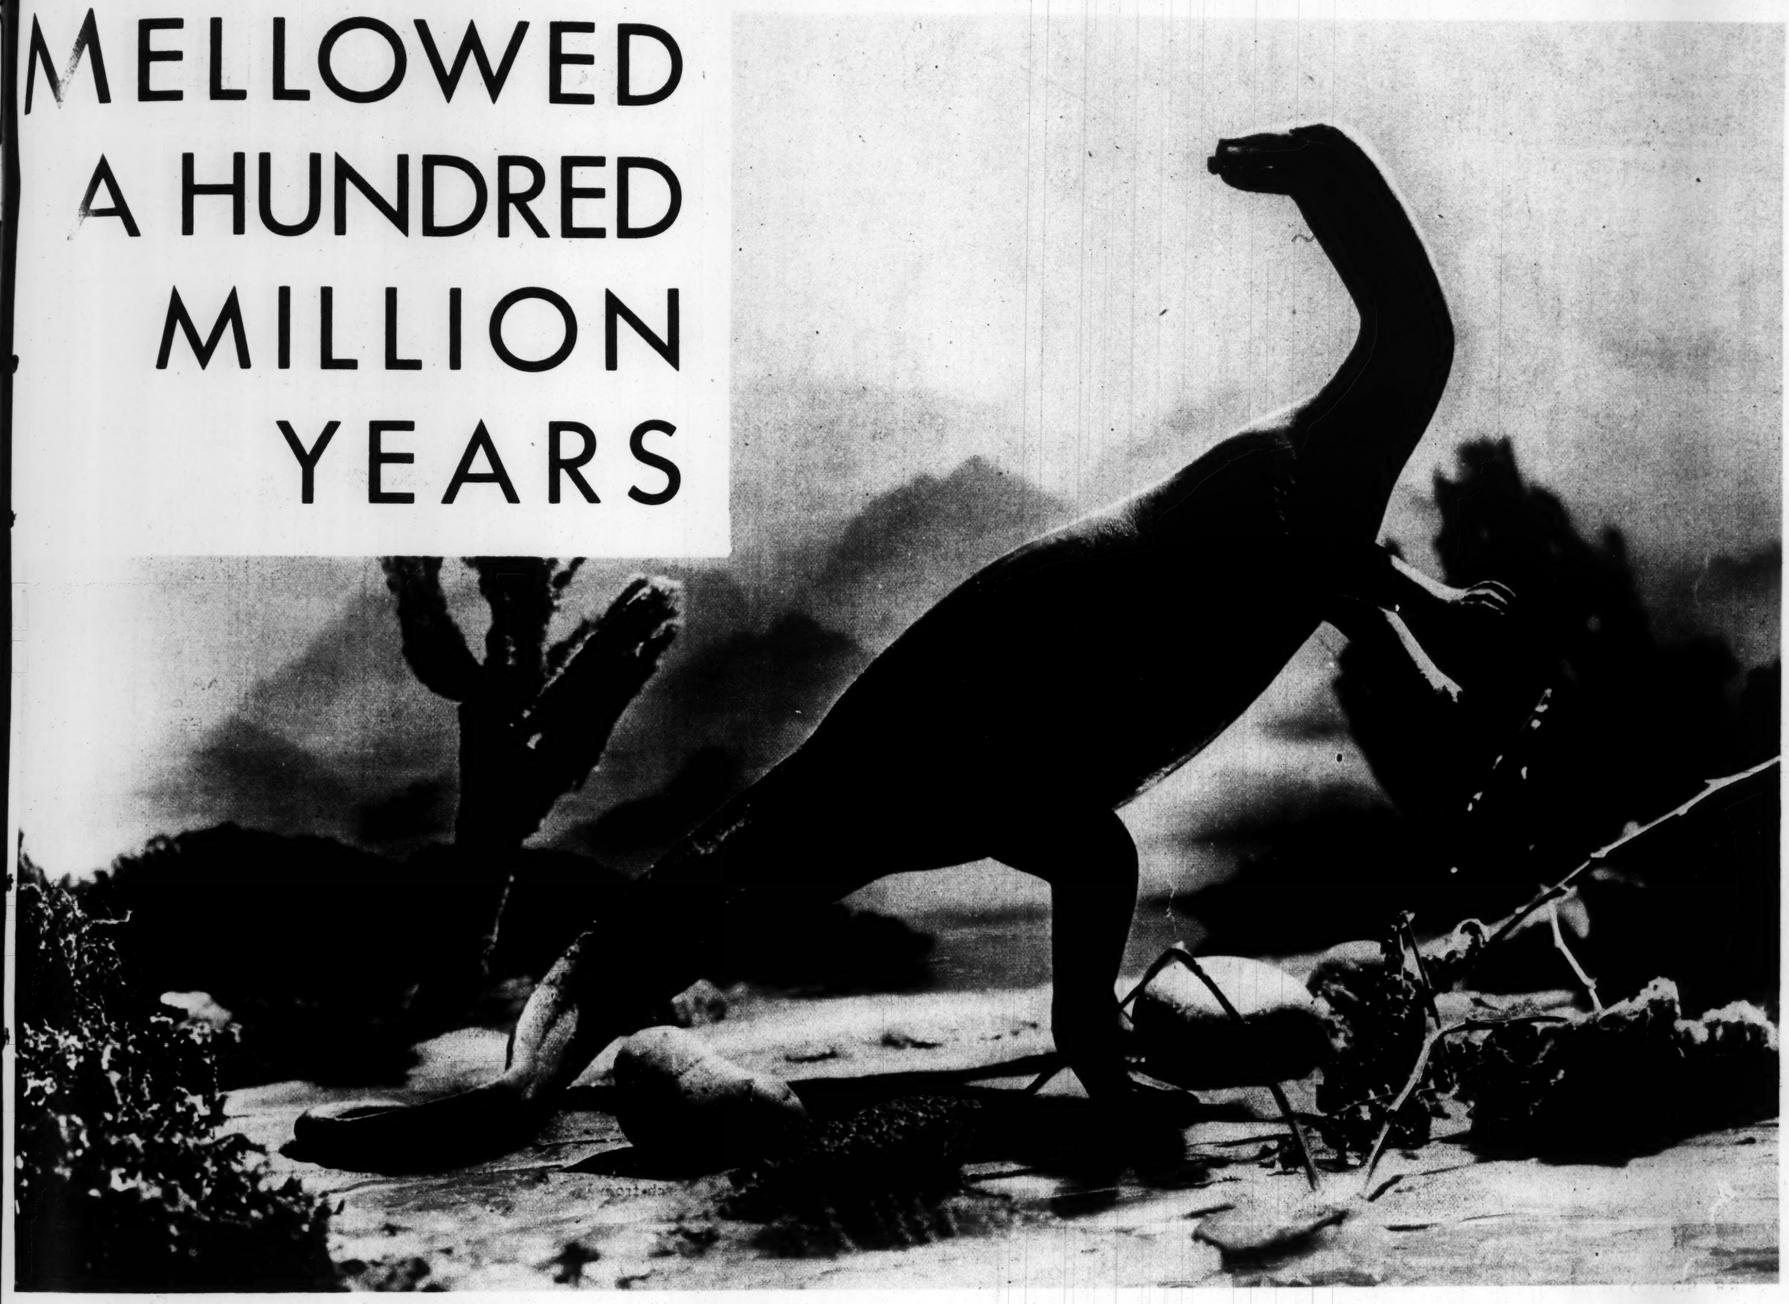
MELLOWED A HUNDRED MILLION YEARS



Long, long ago in PENNSYLVANIA

MILLIONS of years ago in the Devonian Age—while the world rocked with earthquakes and mighty, armored fish swam the seas—Nature stowed away in the Bradford-Allegany District of the Pennsylvania field her most valuable crude oil.

Most crudes refined for motor oils today are millions of years younger than Bradford-Allegany crude. A few are older. But among them all this Bradford-Allegany crude was formed at a time when earth conditions were 100% favorable—so favorable that a hundred million years of filtering and mellowing have brought this crude to the highest known point of lubricating quality!

That is why Sinclair has built at Wellsville, N. Y., the largest single refinery devoted exclusively to the manufacture of Pennsylvania grade motor oil. Here, under the careful supervision of laboratory experts, Sinclair refines Bradford-Allegany crude into Sinclair Mobiline.

Have the nearest Sinclair dealer change your oil to Sinclair Mobiline according to the Sinclair Law of Lubrication. After a period of long, hard driving examine this Mobiline. Note how it stands up—how it comes out of the crankcase almost as good as it went in. Note especially how very little Mobiline your engine has used up—positive, visible proof that it stays in the engine and lubricates for the last mile as well as the first!

Send our nearest office your name and address and a list of the states where you intend touring and we will send you road maps and the Sinclair Law of Lubrication booklet, free. Sinclair Refining Company, (Inc.) New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Houston, Kansas City.

"$150!..why that is the famous Oriental design we saw in the Pennsylvania Museum!"

That same rug, they had been informed, was worth a fortune.

Yet here was this masterpiece of Oriental design in their friend's home, shimmering with silky sheen, recognizable in every detail.

THROUGH GULISTAN!

When Gulistan was placed on the market two years ago, a revolution in rug values took place.

The House of Karagheusian had produced in America the silky beauty of an Oriental Rug! The same shimmering sheen! The jewel-like colors! The luxurious deep pile!

Even experts hesitated to tell the difference!

Today, new Gulistans are in the stores. They reveal another amazing development.

Gulistan now places Old Masters of Oriental Rug Art within your reach!

Rugs so cherished by museums that they are really the sentimental property of whole peoples and cannot be purchased even by multi-millionaires!

Moreover, rugs so intricate in design that even reproductions of them in imported Orientals are seldom found!

Does beauty such as this transform a home, a room? One glance gives the answer. Little wonder that rugs this Fall come ahead of other demands upon the family purse!

But to know exactly what you are getting when you go shopping for rugs, remember these plain facts.

Only Karagheusian can make Gulistan. All rugs so marked come from this famous House.

In Gulistan you have the same sturdy Oriental wool yarns, the finest dyes, the very same finishing process as you get in their expensive Persian and Chinese rugs.

Naturally, all the best stores have Gulistans. Many of them have arranged art gallery displays to show these beautiful rugs appropriately.

That is your guarantee of authenticity. No Gulistan Rug has been O. K.'d by Karagheusian without it.

There are many designs and color combinations. Sizes from 22½ by 36 inches ($10) to 11 feet 3 inches by 21 feet ($435). Also Stair Carpets and Hall Runners.

500 year old design . . . worth a fortune, re-created in a Gulistan Rug!

So says the Official Handbook of the Pennsylvania Museum of Art, where the original of the Gulistan illustrated above hangs today!

It was woven 88 years before America was discovered, when Tamerlane the Great reached the height of his power in Samarkand! Note the cypress trees, expressing life eternal, which make up the rich field of this rug!

Six different color combinations to choose from. Ask for the Persian Garden Rug, No. 25082.
